BENNETT WARNS CANADA, EXPORTS NEEDED

National Life of Canada Depends on Export Trade Says Premier in Address

Warns Against Experiment of Shorter Hours And Higher Pay

GIVES ANSWERS

Keeping Up With Joneses Ruination of Many Nations

(By Frank Flaherty)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
Montreal, Sept. 1.—A continuance of Canada's national life depends on maintenance of her position as a great exporting nation, and therefore this country cannot experiment with shorter hours of work and higher rates of pay.

The declaration from Premier R. B. Bennett Thursday night was interpreted by his hearers as a political answer to the often-asked question as to how far Canada might go in following the national recovery plan of the United States.

While the Premier did not mention the United States, there was a note of warning in his voice as he spoke to a distinguished group of his colleagues in the cabinet and in Parliament and leading Montreal business men assembled at dinner under the auspices of the Montreal Board of Trade.

"Keeping up with the Joneses has been the ruination of nations as well as of individuals," declared Mr. Bennett. He went on to declare Canadians should not lose themselves in a maze of 100,000,000 or a self-sufficient unit.

Export Trade Essential

Canada was the fifth exporting nation of the world, Export trade was essential and in export this country had to compete with the highly specialized, highly organized and highly efficient methods of production of the countries of the Orient and of Europe, said the Premier.

The dinner brought to a close a busy day for the Premier. Minister his first day on Canadian soil to nearly three months' absence. He left to attend the World Economic Conference. Immediately afterwards he left for Ottawa, accompanied by his sister, Mrs. W. D. Herridge, early this morning he disembarked from the liner Empress of Britain at Murray Bay, motored to Quebec where he was greeted by an impromptu reception and came on to Montreal where another cheering crowd assembled at the station to meet him.

In his talk to-night the Premier touched on the highlights of the world economic conference, expressed his views concerning that far from being a failure the conference had done a tremendous amount to smooth out some of the bumps in the road to world economic recovery, and concluded with a plea for unity in the cause of world peace.

Produce More Than Canada

Canada had been led to believe, the prairie provinces the granary of the world might be blocked, Mr. Bennett said, when they were told that Russia this year would produce between 75,000,000 and 100,000,000 bushels more wheat than 1932, that Argentina did produce 78,000,000 bushels more and that Germany and Spain together would produce substantially more.

This illustrates the gravity of the wheat crisis with which the conference of exporting and importing nations is dealing, the huge stocks on hand in Canada and the United States, with the European countries increasing acreage and this year harvesting a bumper crop. It was obvious something had to be done to ensure the normalizing of trade, the law of supply and demand. The problem was to see that the producer got a fair price, that the consumer was not victimized and that the huge stocks should not continue to overhang the market and depress prices.

The agreement signed by the representatives of the nations assembled at London, would accomplish the purpose, the Prime Minister said. Under its terms Canada's export this year was to be limited to the neighborhood of 200,000,000 bushels and this country further agreed to reduce acreage next year by 15 per cent.

"I am happy to say that common sense and reason prevailed at the wheat conference," said the Premier.

Monetary Committee's Work

The monetary committee of the Economic Conference accomplished a tremendous amount of good even though agreement on the currency part.

IRISH LEADER

Sean O'Kelly, vice-president of the executive council of the Irish Free State and minister for local government and public health, is shown on his arrival in New York. He was particularly interested in reports from Ireland indicating a trade agreement between the Dublin government and the Cosgrave party, of which William T. Cosgrave is chief, and the Blue Shirts, or National Guard, of which Eoin O'Duffy is the head.

stabilization question was not reached, Mr. Bennett went on. In connection the conference made two important declarations. It reaffirmed that gold was the only satisfactory medium of exchange but declared that gold need not be used in transactions within a single nation but only in the settlement of international balances.

On the currency question it was also agreed that paper money must have a backing of metal reserves, but that having regard to the previous declaration that metal need not be used in domestic transactions the reserve of 25 per cent metal would be sufficient. Important declarations were also reached in connection with the position of silver in the monetary system.

The reasons which prevented the United States from participating in a stabilization plan could be readily understood, said Mr. Bennett. A country of 120,000,000 people with 12,000,000 out of work owed its first duty to its own people and could not be expected to jeopardize the welfare of its own people by prematurely entering into international commitments.

On the economic side, assigned to the other of the two conferences, he said, important results were attained.

"In the main," said Mr. Bennett, "I can say the discussions which took place in the subcommittee which was made available to the delegates and the resolutions acquired on the points of view of one another enabled progress to be made in the main committee when the conference could move to secure the operation of the whole field of supply and demand."

It was fortunate, the Premier believed, that the conference did not end abruptly after the position of the United States was ascertained as this was impossible. One of the delegates who pressed for an adjourned day for an end at the time had since admitted the wiser course was taken. For instead of dispersing with some feelings of resentment, the atmosphere at the adjournment was so friendly as to make a reassembling of the gathering an easy task.

GIRL WINS PART IN MOVIES AS BRUNETTE

Carries Letter From Father and Wins Great Quest

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 1.—(AP)—With a letter from her father, a pretty face and no small dash of ability, Dorothy Lee, 18, has come to Hollywood and won her way into pictures. She received a part today. Miss Trail, hearing that a particular studio was looking for dancing brunettes, left her home at Fayetteville, Ark., with a letter from her father, succeeded in showing it to a casting director, who agreed with the father's recommendations, and turned her over to a film director, who gave her the part.

VALIDITY OF NIRA MAY BE CONTESTED

Henry Ford Remains Outside Code For Motor Car Industry

DEFENDS DETROITER

Question of Legality Is Discussed Before Bar Association

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
New York, Sept. 1.—(CP)—Veiled indications were not lacking today that the highest court of the land may be converted into a test-laboratory for what has come to be known as the great American experiment.—The National Industrial Recovery Act. On the one hand there was independent Henry Ford remaining without the wage and working hours structure chief NRA administrator Hugh Johnson built for the automobile industry. As it became apparent the government was preparing to discipline the Detroit magnate for his refusal to subscribe to the code already accepted by all but the few manufacturers of cotton in the United States, there was no word from Ford or his lieutenants to indicate where they stand.

On the other hand, there was an unconfirmed report from Washington that certain business interests were preparing to carry the constitutionality of NRA into the supreme court.

Ford Has Aides

If, as some thought, Ford and his wealth had chosen to contest, they had at their disposal powers vested in Roosevelt which Ford may or may not think are encroaching on his far-flung preserve, he would not be without aides.

Republican Senator Schall, blind Minnesotan, had announced himself ready to "go to the limit" in support of any effort to force him under the NRA code. If he already was paying higher wages and working employees shorter hours than it required.

"As a citizen," said Schall, and "as an attorney and a United States Senator, I feel it is my duty to volunteer my services in defense of the philosophy on the action that unfettered competition is a fundamental industrial need—"Competition is the great teacher" once said—remained silent at his summer retreat.

From a member of the committee on constitutional law, Patrick McCarran of Nevada, the Association board heard suggestions that these great investitures of power the right of due process Blaine have been minimized if not entirely lost."

Answered Attorney General Stone: "Any question of constitutionality has met the test and is marching with the best of the Union. Every legislation is recognized as such by the courts whenever it has been exercised within the letter and the spirit of the organic government."

BROADCAST BOAT RACE

National Hookup Will Carry Classic To All Districts

The speediest classic of the year, the race for the Harmsworth Trophy on Saturday will be broadcast over National Broadcasting Company network and CRCT, beginning at 5.15 p.m., Eastern Standard Time. As the two high-powered boats, Miss Britain III and Miss America X, with their drivers and mechanics down the St. Clair River, near Algonac, Michigan, they will start at the turns and along the straightaways will bring the thrilling and excitement of the race to the radio audiences over the NBC-WEAF network and CRCT.

DIES ON SCAFFOLD

Winnipeg, Sept. 1 (CP)—Peter Piniak, 23 year old Ukrainian of the Gladstone District, paid the supreme penalty on the gallows here today for the murder of Mrs. Marsha Sgarok, farm-neighbor, last March 3,483 in August 1933.

RARE SIAMESE CAT, A ND PRIZE TABBIES

STORE AND POST OFFICE ENTERED

Plainfield Store Broken Into And Also Gas Station

Plainfield, Sept. 1.—(Special)—Burglars entered the store and post office of Frank Creeper at Plainfield early and removed the cash register and a few small articles. The post office was rifled but after a check-up nothing was missed. Entrance was made by removing a pane of glass from the front door and reaching the bolt that fastened the door; screws were removed that held the lock.

The Creeper family live in one end of the store but were not disturbed by any noise.

Fred, who built his economic philosophy on the axiom that unfettered competition is a fundamental industrial need—"Competition is the great teacher" once said—remained silent at his summer retreat.

STREET RAILWAY STRIKE AVERTED

Order For Wage Cut is Held Beyond Board's Power

Winnipeg, Sept. 1.—(CP)—Complete tie-up of Winnipeg transportation system was averted when employees of the Winnipeg Electric Railway voted to defer action on a strike timed for midnight last night in the hope a board of conciliation had exceeded its power in ordering a 15 per cent wage cut effective August 1 and assurance the men would be reimbursed for any deductions in yesterday's pay cheques, left the way open for further negotiations.

Announcement of a truce in the wage dispute that affected more than 900 employees of Winnipeg's street railway system brought a sigh of relief to troubled citizens. Decision to withhold strike action was reached at a 3 o'clock (midnight) conference between company heads, union officials today and Mayor Webb.

Agreement to strike followed rejection of the company's proposal for a wage reduction and findings of a board of conciliation which ordered a 15 per cent, cut retroactive to August 1.

Assistance from H. M. Ward, Deputy Minister of Labor, at Ottawa, paved the way according to a retroactive only to August 15 brought the truce and paved the way for further negotiations.

MORE ACCIDENTS REPORTED

TORONTO, Sept. 1. — (CP) — More accidents were reported to the Workmen's Compensation Board during August than in any other month this year according to a statement issued today. There were 3,560 accidents during last month, compared with 3,283 in July and

Mrs. Scott-Paine No Back Seat Driver

Algonac, Mich., Sept. 1.—(AP)—No back seat driver, Mrs. Brenda Scott-Paine is going to leave the running of the Harmsworth race strictly to the men folk; notwithstanding the two speedboat trophies she owns in her own right.

"Of course, I'm going to cheer for Fanny," she admitted, as she lounged comfortably in her deck chair beside the Boatwell where mechanics tinkered with Miss Britain III., on which England centres its hope of regaining the trophy captured 13 years ago by Gar Wood. "But I'm not going to advise him and I'm not going to take credit or discredit for his winning or losing."

"Fanny," is Rubert Scott-Paine, her husband.

"After Rippling's 'Funny Wussy,' you know," she explains—and doesn't explain, either, because Rudyard Kipling wrote about a savage little black warrior and Hubert Scott-Paine has large, grinning Englishman with an Irish glint in his blue eyes.

Mrs. Scott-Paine came to Algonac from Southampton, with her husband because they go everywhere together. She was in Detroit with him three years ago when he piloted Miss England I. to win the British News International trophy during the gold cup races. They have visited all parts of the world together.

"He races his own boats," she said, of a lawyer in the city chairman of them to him and Gordon Thomas, his mechanic. They don't need my help, nor anybody's.'

MAGISTRATE NO JUDGE OF THE BABIES

New York, Sept. 1.—(AP)—As a city magistrate, Hamilton Marvin spends a great deal of time passing judgment upon the acts of people persons brought before him but judging babies what's something entirely different.

Asked to serve as a judge in a baby contest, the magistrate replied today as follows: "Every baby is the prettiest baby in the world to his mother, and it would require more than the wisdom of Solomon to select the prettiest child and at the same time please the mother of the other babies. I'll stick to my own job, watching adults who pass before me. It's much easier."

INSURANCE FAVORED FOR ALL MOTOR CARS

Ontario Municipal Association Advocates Forced Protection

TORONTO, Sept. 1. — Compulsory insurance on all motor vehicles was advocated by the Municipal Association in adopting a resolution to this effect at the annual meeting here to enact a law requiring all applications for motor licenses to be accompanied by an insurance policy.

The Association declined to adopt an amendment urging that all licences be automatically suspended on expiration of the insurance policy.

The convention agreed to support Wentworth County and Dalrifect Provincial Councils in their attempt to have all Hydro Commission properties taxed on the same basis as private corporations.

Canada has about 250 million acres of land suitable for farming purposes, and of this total 163 and one-half millions are in occupied farms, of which nearly 86 millions acres are improved land.

Business Man is Shot by Own Gun as He Helps His Setter Dog Over Fence

Toronto Sportsman Is Found In Weakened Condition

PUP IS WHINING

Dog Stands Near Fence Where Body of Dying Man Lies

Uxbridge, Ont., Sept. 1 (CP)—Ronald R. Hart, well known Toronto business man and sportsman, was fatally injured when his own shot gun discharged as he helped his setter dog over a fence in the bush adjoining the Glen Major Fishing Club near here.

Mr. Hart was found late last night by a companion, Vivon Vipond, who was camping with him. He was lying in a weakened condition from loss of blood and was still bleeding profusely.

Beside the fence where the wounded man lay was the setter pup which he had been teaching to answer to the report of a gun. The pup was whining piteously.

Because of the denseness of the brush in this area, Mr. Vipond spent the greater part of an hour looking for his friends. On the return trip to the wounded mans side was a difficult one and many valuable minutes were lost as the rescuers, summoned by Vipond, tried to locate the position of the dying man.

Mr. Hart was vice-president of the R. Hart Company, vice-president of the Toronto Anglers Association, and a member of numerous Anglers' Associations.

FEAR CYCLONE BOARD DOORS

Havana Merchants And Citizens Fear Bad Storm

Havana, Sept. 1 (AP)—Throughout Havana today merchants boarded up their doors and reinforced their windows in the expectation that the city would be hit by a cyclone disturbance accompanied by 60 and 70 mile winds which was moving across the Caribbean toward inhabitants inland and wrecking communication lines.

The observatory reported that the storm was centred at 8a.m. over Cardenas 70 miles east of Havana. Forecasters predicted that the centre of the disturbance probably would pass slightly north of the city.

Officials at the observatory expected high water would reach the Malecon, the broad thoroughfare that skirts the waterfront, and it was probable that that section of Havana would be flooded. Hundreds of families and apartments along the waterfront moved out to their higher homes.

The National observatory reported that the hurricanes force struck the northern parts of Matanzas province early this morning. The observatory predicted that the centre of the disturbance would reach near Havana before noon. 1.00 and 5.00 o'clock this afternoon. The announcement said that the storm's intensity had increased rapidly during the night.

EXCISE RETURNS INCREASE

TORONTO, Sept. 1.—(CP)—Total customs and excise returns for the month of August showed an increase today with the release of figures from the Toronto Branch of the Dominion Customs and Excise Bureau. Total collections for August were $3,489,189.97. This beltered the July collection by $135,864.30. Reports show that 2,923 cars in the month of June 1933, that a rain was made. Collections of August, this year, show an increase of $56,539.72 over August, 1932.

WOMAN IS ASSISTED FROM CROWDED BLDG

Foil Fainting Spell Coming on and Slumped Against Rail

"I'm going to faint!" gasped a lady in the crush of the crowd which edged through the aisles of the Manufacturers' Building early Thursday evening. Smiling the action to the word the lady slumped forward the railing of many of the booths and would have fallen heavily to the floor but for the alertness of Mr. Merring Wray, Trenton. Observing her in difficulties Mr. Wray, who had been standing nearby moved quickly to help her and supported her in his arms until friends could assist the woman outside the building. Relatives explained, that sudden seizures of like nature had been common lately.

WANTED, YOUNG MEN AND YOUNG WOMEN WITH BUSINESS TRAINING

Holidays are over, and the depression is almost over, too. It is now time to be up and doing, and ambitious young people will be thinking about to find something to do. But the trouble will many is that they have not had sufficient training and are not efficiently trained for any definite kind of work.

With the passing of the depression there will be numerous business positions for those who are well equipped to them. Now is the time to take the interesting and thorough courses at Ontario Business College, which can be completed in a few time. The cost of the courses is very little, considering their scope and life-long benefit.

This is the most widely attended business college in Canada, with thousands of successful graduates throughout Canada, the United States, Bermuda, the West Indies and British Guiana. Students at O.B.C. receive much individual instruction, and make their own rate of progress. Students may start on Tuesday, Sept. 5th or any day thereafter.

MATTIS GIVEN THREE MONTHS

Monahan And Martin Elected Trial By Jury Or Judge

Charged with having housebreaking implements in their possession, by night, Harry Mattis, Gordon Monahan and Leo Martin of this city, appeared before Magistrate Mikel in Friday's police court. Mattis, following the submission of the evidence, was found guilty and sentenced to serve not less than three months nor more than two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory. Monahan and Martin elected trial by Judge at the next court of jurisdiction the preliminary hearing in their case being set for Tuesday next. B. C. Donnan, K.C., local Crown Attorney, conducted the prosecution.

The three accused men were arrested by Constables Evans and Taylor about 3.0 a.m. on August 20th, following complaints that night prowlers were molesting the residents of the William Street, Bridge Street sector. Later the trio were arrested, when entering their car on Great St. James street.

During the trial, Constable Evans testified that, when apprehended a pair of tin snips, a jack knife, a hatchet, fly paper, wooden clubs, three flash lights, hammer, bolster knife and other tools were found in the car. A hose fit for syphoning gas and two large cans smelling strongly of gasoline were also found. Mattis, however, denied claiming all but the fly paper, clubs and one flash light were his, the car, when he purchased it.

Sergeant Booth testified that on searching the car he found a large army jack knife on Monahan. Constable Taylor corroborated all evidence given.

In the Buildings

Nowhere else is the march of modern progress so strikingly shown than in the Manufacturers' and Merchants' Display Buildings on the Fair Grounds. Here local exhibitors have transformed the buildings into a modern fairy land of mechanical and electrical marvels, as well as greatly improved old standbys found in every modern home. A riot of color greets the eye of the visitor who enters any door or either building. Booths have never been pretentious. Displays have never been more tastefully arranged and variety has never been offered before in such quantity. An education awaits those who take the time to carefully visit each booth in the buildings. Exhibitors have gone to great pains to have their special booths attractive and pleasing, but they have found their reward in the pleasing comments of the many hundreds of visitors who have passed through.

J. B. Boyce—Displaying Chevrolet, Pontiac, Mcglaglin-Buick, Oldsmobile, LaSalle and Cadillac. A service and parts card is also displayed.

J. T. Warren with a display of Chrysler and Plymouth cars, and advertising repairs and service on all makes.

GUN OF 1812 IS TREASURED

Frank Smith, Great Grandson of Geo. Smith Owns Ancient Weapon

Carried in the War of 1812 by George Smith, a member of Captain Simon McNabb's company, a musket almost five feet in length bearing the mark C50, is now in the great possession of his great grandson, Mr. Frank Smith of Masson, Que. This is one of the few relics of the war days of a century and a quarter ago.

This weapon which did service in 1812 and 1813 does not resemble its descendants of the present day of today. It was a muzzle-loader all right and fired a ball in the style of the period when it was made. In fact Mr. Smith is able to read on the barrel the inscription indicating that it was manufactured in 1793 by Tower of London, England.

So that this precious gun is now approaching the one century of its age; in fact it is 170 years old. The stock is greatly worn preserved though the barrel is quite rusty," commented Mr. Smith today, speaking of his possession. He is taking good care of it and will see that it is handed down to his son.

This weapon came into his possession, more than a year ago on the death of his uncle Charles Smith of Frankford, a grandson of George Smith, the veteran of 1812. It had been in the ownership of Mrs. Augusta Smith, wife of Charles Smith, (not the previously mentioned Charles Smith). Readers will understand that Augusta Smith married a Charles Smith who was not blood relation. Mrs. Smith was a great friend of Mr. Frank Smith died about a year ago at the age of 95 years.

Charles Smith who owned the gun until about five years ago was a grandson of the warrior of 1812.

"Those who love pioneer lore will be interested in knowing that George Smith's wife was Margaret Meyers, a daughter of Captain Meyers, the pioneer who built the first house in Upper Canada in what is the present city of Belleville, which house stood for many years on the brow of the east hill. Captain Meyers also constructed a stone grist mill here.

Mr. Frank Smith treasures also a powder horn and bullet pouch he had many years ago with Mrs. Margaret Meyers' name on it, relic of the ancient days when silver was the money of the Meyers Cave in the vicinity of Cloyne.

DICKENS & SON

TWO KILLED IN STRIKE RIOT

Philadelphia, Aug. 31 (AP) —Two men were shot and killed and at least 18 persons were injured today as 200 police battled many times their number of strikers and sympathizers outside of the Cambria Steel Mills, in Northeastern Philadelphia.

The University of Pavia, Italy, was founded by Lobbaire, grandson of Charlemagne in 815, and celebrated its 11th centenary in 1898.

CAPT. LAVALLEY AND PAULINE BLACK IN DIVING SENSATIONS

Capt. Lavalley will present his troupe in their fall performance at both afternoon and evening on Saturday at 2 p.m. and 11 p.m. on the Midway at the Fair Grounds.

Miss Pauline Black, who was unable to appear on Saturday will positively be with the troupe on Saturday. Besides her specialty she executes are: front jack knife, back jack knife, standing sitting hand stand, back somersault and one of the most difficult of dives, namely a one and a half. Miss Black concludes her performance by diving from a pedestal 60 feet in height, executing a perfect swan dive into four and one half feet of water.

Capt. Lavalley, who caused quite a sensation on Monday night with his death defying fire dive will repeat the same dive on Saturday night at 11 o'clock, sharp, while in the afternoon he will do his back somersault dive from a height of nine by feet.

There is absolutely no charge to see this attraction and everyone should take the opportunity of witnessing this performance on Saturday.

The Midway will be in full operation on Saturday from 12 noon until midnight when the shows may fold their tents, load the equipment and leave for Kingston early Sunday morning where they will provide the Midway for the Kingston Exhibition.

GOLF OPPORTUNITY

Full privileges of the Bay of Quinte Country Club may be had for the balance of the season of 1933 at attractive rates, according to a decision of the directors. The purpose is to increase the interest in golf and the Country Club course.

AUTOMOBILE ENGINEERS BUSY

Construction of motorcars with the centre of gravity so low and extended that the automobile will be practically impossible of upset is contemplated by engineers That this will mean some changes in the construction of autos is anticipated, but if the means which are contemplated of preserving the greater facility of equilibrium of cars prove satisfactory, there is certain to be the changes made which it will demand.

The speed at which traffic travels today has developed a low-slung auto which keeps the road at high rates of travel. The car will come more and more close to the roadway.

Engineering in car construction has made amazing strides from the days of the motorcars which made leisurely their way across poor roads. They have brought about superb highways and these are going to be a prime factor in the construction of the new type of cars which will come.

It is said that motorcar designs years ahead are under way, and that the public would probably be shocked if they were to see them, because they are grotesque just because they run to differently emphasized lines and serve slightly different purposes, but chiefly because the people are not used to them.

The automobile engineers' job is not done. It has but begun for the car in the popular mind is the mechanical expression of the mechanical age. It has to be brought close to the human needs.

POLITICIANS AT SCHOOL

Both the political parties are going to school. At Port Hope the Liberals of Canada will study the problems of the day while Conservatives will meet at Pickering College in Newmarket. Men of experience will address the meetings. Political study in Canada is something which is bound to become effective as the speakers are men of national and international report and experience and of varied outlook.

The great body of citizens of course will not go to political school because they have not the time but both schools are open to all. But they will, by deputy, go to school for the influence of these schools will reach them.

The chief opinion one can form in advance is that the meeting of intellect and experience with intellect and experience will bring about a greater knowledge of the fundamentals of statecraft and government and the people's attitude towards government as expressed through the medium of the two great parties, the Conservative and Liberal.

Such schools show that it is no longer sufficient for a man should merely follow a political party because his father and grandfather did so before him but that he should at least have an intelligent idea of the history of party government, to warrant his support of either party.

These schools avoid the limitations which interfere with mere public meetings which are not a school and which are not continuous. The schools are continuous and it is hoped to build up a solid body of thought on great problems of today.

It is a notable fact that in these times the two old parties have traditions to uphold and they have also mighty questions to solve in a changing world. The Conservative and the Liberal attitudes will remain even in the new world of new conditions which have been changing so rapidly of late. In Canada and in England is a sentiment, which also seems to be growing in other lands, that there is the reliance to be placed on the institutions which have built up the modern world and that these will not be ruthlessly discarded in whole but that if any changes come, they must be by the people's will and wisdom. The world is not static and neither are the parties. Throughout Canada, at least, it seems that the people are convinced that the safest way lies in the dual form of government, Liberal or Conservative. These parties offer a form of attitude towards statecraft which will meet any and all emergencies.

MYSTERY MAN

Some men are a mystery to their fellows. But Mr. Montague Norman, the governor of the Bank of England, is a mystery not so much to others in his private life as to the world in his public capacity as banker. His name mentioned in a despatch is the signal for thoughts of mystery and conjectures of events to occur in the financial world. Just a day ago Mr. Norman visited President Roosevelt and everyone was guessing why. Now great as Mr. Roosevelt it, he is not shrouded with mystery as Norman is.

Of course the world knows the Roosevelian angle and what is likely to take place but Mr. Norman carries a whole sack of secrets with him as he moves about Europe is more mysterious than the United States.

The world, like the individual, likes to have a mystery to be thinking about.

Over all the movements of life religion scatters her favors, but reserves the choicest, her divine blessing for the last hour. —Logan.

MIRACLES TODAY

Men say no miracles are wrought
Upon the earth today,
No heavenly voices, long besought,
No manna on the way.

But, ah! how strange a thing is this:
In hours of care and pain
When yeares ahead seem an abyss
Beyond today's bleak plain,
Sometimes, as swiftly as the wind
Can bear to desert sands
The whispered tale of joys men find
In song-filled, flower-strewn lands,
There comes into the darkest night
That fills the heart with gloom
A glory, treasured and bright,
And of celestial bloom.

Sometimes it floods the being through,
This miracle of love!

WESLYMKOON LAKE, some seventy miles north-east of Belleville, has been a favorite summer resort for Belleville business men for a number of years—it has also attracted a number of business and professional men from other cities in Canada and the United States. Weslymkoon is off the beaten path, not too easy to get at, and that adds to its attractiveness. Weslymkoon has always been noted for its fine bass fishing, and the fish stories which have come out of the north woods have sounded like fiction, for Weslymkoon fishing just isn't like any other kind of fishing in the world—Rudolph Nebb, famous comic strip character, would die of delight were he privileged to take a look in the waters of this famous lake. There are about fifty cottages, more or less, of varying sizes, on the shores of Weslymkoon Lake, each one having plenty space, so that there is no crowding and no appearance of permanent settlement. In recent years lumbering operations on these inland waters have interfered with levels of the lake and the fishing has suffered accordingly, but it is still good enough to please the most ardent fisherman. The summer colony is taking united action to induce the government to put in a dam which will regulate the waters spring and fall and keep it at a permanent level, so that the feeding grounds for the fish will not be disturbed by varying levels. For a number of years Messrs. Massey and the Mills Brothers, famous radio singers, have a beautiful summer cottage, or mansion, at Weslymkoon, and with their manager, Mr. Beckwell, spend as much time as possible at this forest paradise. Corby Camp is another show place of Weslymkoon. established many years ago by Senator Harry Corby and a number of his Belleville friends, now shared in joint ownership with business men from other cities. In permitting the camp, well equipped and comfortable to which the gentlemen interested come at stated times for the fishing and hunting, the season being divided among the different parties, according as they pal together —thus at different times there may be a party of London business men—just a gentlemens agreement as to the conduct and sharing of the camp by those having a financial interest in it—but no member of the syndicate having the right to visit the camp at any time—and always being sure of a welcome no matter what coterie of Bohemians happen to be in command at the time. Thats the way we get the Corby Weslymkoon picture after a delightful and enthusiastic description by a Front Street business man after two weeks visit there. Corby Camp has a long and interesting history and many well known figures in Canadian life have rested there and enjoyed the sociability always engendered by the late Senator Harry Corby, known from coast to coast as the Prince of Good Fellows.

Take the group of modern houses, where the feature attraction is the air conditioning systems. The modern home will have its air conditioned, filtered and cooled in summer and kept at the proper temperature in winter, always germ proof. The modern house will be built with scientific ventilation—one of the most modern requirements—no more stuffy hot houses in summer and drafty cold houses in winter. It has taken a long time to get this far, since the days of the log cabins when ventilation was the most thing they had, starting the fad folly of chinking up every crack with mud and nailing down the windows in winter to keep out the cold and in summer to keep out the flies. Since then house building took little notice of ventilation, until recently when it became too apparent how foolish that was and air conditioning from an experiment became a fact.

YOUR STOMACH DOES IT EVER MISBEHAVE?

Cast-Iron Stomach Folk Becoming Fewer Year By Year

By Look J. Black, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Persons who can boast of having "cast iron stomachs" are becoming rarer as each year passes. Now and again one still hears someone claim he can digest anything, even nails, but usually it is a complaint instead that greets the ears, one concerned with misbehavior on the part of the stomach.

Seldom is the stomach itself to blame, however. Almost without exception it is the individual who is at fault because he has forgotten to respect his stomach. That organ, as might be expected, is in revolt.

After all, the stomach is a muscular bag which receives your nourishment food and to mix it thoroughly with the stomach (gastric) juices. Then it passes from glands situated in the stomach wall and these glands, as well as the movements of the stomach, are controlled by the nervous system.

This is the very reason why thousands of individuals suffer from stomach disorders. The nervous system, of course, is largely directed by the brain, which acts like a switchboard in a telephone exchange. Everything, very and the like—in other words mental disorders—have a grave effect upon the functions of the stomach. The way ye think, one might say, is the way the stomach will work.

Small wonder then that people who talk while eating, or who "grab a sandwich" while thinking of the next appointment at the office, or who eat at irregular times and then either too little or too much, have stomach trouble.

In these cases the cause of the disorder is the excessive amounts of hydrochloric acid — a normal ingredient of gastric juice — which literally fry the food into lumps, instead of it's impossible to break up, and which the intestines cannot absorb because they burn their delicate walls. Pain in the stomach, of course, results; gas may form; heart disorders or eructations may occur.

To be sure, there may be other causes for stomach upset than too much acid due to mental and emotional excitement. Badly cooked food may be responsible of food poisoning, or unclean fresh. Eating too much of one kind of food, such as too much starch, fats or sugar and the like, may also be causative factors.

In fact too little acid in the stomach may prove as disturbing as too much. Then again, heart or kidney disease may give rise to stomach symptoms; infected tonsils and carious teeth are major offenders. An undiscovered tuberculosis in the lungs may cause indigestion. Hysterias are also well known to derange the stomach. Gall bladder disturbance, ovarian trouble, a diseased appandix—these too may be the root of the trouble.

Nevertheless there can be no doubt but what most stomach disorders are the direct result of carelessness on the part of the individual particularly as concerns the state of the mind. What is more the trouble can be readily corrected. When such neglect is allowed to go on for months and years, however, a chronic condition results which may be extremely difficult to cure.

Dr. Black's Daily Diet Hint

Nervous persons should select food that is easily digested. For them milk is specially valuable while a food high in roughage is avoided. Particularly careful about such high-strung people be to chew their food thoroughly that it gets well mixed with saliva. A peaceful environment while eating likewise regularity as to time of eating, are also helpful.

Little Benny's Note Book

School let out a hour earlier than usual this afternoon on account of a teachers meeting, and me and Fuds Simkins and Glasses Magee was running down the street feeling happy and yelling to make ourselfs feel even better, and some old stodgey guy hollered at us saying, Well well, what's all the excitement.

Being a big fat man with 2 chins and a big bald head Simkins and I said, We're getting out of school a hour erly.

Well well, that's a strange reason for a celebration, I must say, the guy said to You, you ought to have more cause for rejoicing if you had to bound your existence on schooling. Every hour spent in school is a hour subtracted from your success later in life, and you should prize each minuit of it and make the most of it. Why I was your age I had to wawk 2 miles to school and 2 miles back, but I wawked them cheerfully because I was never so happy as when I got to school and could begin learning again. I was happy and I was glad after class to ask my teacher more questions.

O, good nite, gosh, us fellows said to Fuds Simkins Aw look, enfferd no boundary, and the man said, You mustn't say hook, now good by, run along.

Why, we did, making louder and happier noises than ever.

Scotland Yard has identified 2,000 persons by fingerprints in a single year; nearly 430,000 fingerprints are on file here.

The Maritime Provinces show a considerable regional difference in crop production although hay and potatoes are the most important cash crops, with especially favored conditions for their production.

The committee in charge of the parade to be held on Labor Day met last night at the city hall. Ald. McPhe in the chair. Final arrangements were made for the parade which on Monday at one o'clock to start from the city hall, Front street and the market square. Many valuable prizes will be headed by the 15th Regiment Band following by the Royal Canadian Dragoons, the Boys' Brigade under Major Barragar and the Boy Scouts Belleville Fire Brigade, the employees of Belleville industries, floats of Belleville industries, Belleville wholesale and retail merchants, coal men, ice men, dairymen, automobiles, City Health Department and the sprinkling horses conlesting at the fair. The Foxboro Band and other bands will participate. Prizes are to be given to the successful competitors in the various classes. The first, second prize $15; third prize $10. Mr. J. J. B. Wilkinson will act as Grand Marshal of the parade assisted by Mr. W. Anderson and Chief of Police Ponton. The procession will be up Front street to Dorset's foundry for the counter march down Front street to Bridge street and then along West Bridge street to the fair grounds Those taking part in the parade will be admitted free to the fair grounds. Citizens are requested to decorate their houses and places of business—but not with flags and bunting. A photograph of the crowd is to be taken at the arrival of the parade at the fair grounds and as this photograph will be shown in the theatres of British Empire — especially in England. It is desired that a large crowd be present. Come to the fair grounds in the morning —lots of bands—good entertainment. Hurrah for Qunite Central Pair—Labor Day, Monday.

Mr. Ed. O'Rourke and family have returned to the city from Manitoba.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tamblyn of Foxboro, spent the week ending a few days in the city. Mr. Tamblyn is a former resident of Belleville.

Mr. D. B. Robertson, city clerk, has resumed his duties at the city hall.

Mr. and Mrs. John Latta are visiting friends in Peterboro.

Mr. George W. Burnett, one of the directors of the Ontario Mining and Smelting Company, the mines of which concern are at Baumontown, informs us that on August 22nd the first pig lead made from matte ore in this country was turned out at their mill. The furnaces were started for a trial heat at 7 a.m. and by noon they had several tons of pig lead. The crushing and concentration buildings and machinery will be ready by October 1st. The furnace is now run on hand picked ores of which a large quantity is on hand.

Ford V-8 Triumphs
IN COMMERCIAL TRANSPORTATION

AMAZES CANADIAN BUSINESS FIRMS WITH ITS ECONOMICAL OPERATION—SOLVES TODAY'S HAULING PROBLEMS

For the first time the performance that can be had only with a V-8 engine has been made available in a low-priced car.

This is the answer to today's hauling problems. Sooner have appeared lighter trucks. They need Ford V-8 power. Others now carry lighter loads and make more trips. They need Ford V-8 speed. Others run fewer trucks, with heavier loads. They need Ford V-8 power and speed and stamina. These things mean a new trend in commercial haulage, met perfectly by Ford V-8 equipment at low cost.

Ford V-8 trucks are not only low in price, but economical to operate and maintain. Their full 80 horsepower costs you nothing when not used; 35 to 45 miles per hour, at which trucks are usually driven, is the V-8's most economical range. This economy is so high as to place Ford V-8 performance within reach of any Canadian truck owner.

The Ford V-8 offers you most for your money, in first cost and running expense. There are two truck chassis, 131½ and 157 inch wheelbase and the commercial car chassis, 112-inch. Bodies meet every transportation need. See your Ford dealer. "The Canadian Truck"

Pearce is Installed Favorite to Defeat Phelps in Race

Both Scullers Primed For Gruelling Three Mile Jaunt

(By Elmer Dolmage, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Sept. 1 (CP)—There will never be another Ned Hanlan, of course, but another Bobby Pearce digs his Rideau Canoe Club spirit tonight within sight of the Toronto Island birthplace of the immortal Ned he may be sitting out on a journey that will carry him to sculling heights almost as great and as thrilling in their way as those to where gold is just as plentiful.

Ned Hanlan, a five-foot, eight-inch 152-pound marvel in a shell, was the greatest oarsman who ever lived. Pearce, six foot tall and weighing 190 is favored to defeat Ted Phelps and thereby join the dynasty of five oarsmen who have come after.

Close to 75,000 people will watch the big blond Canadian, 30 years of experience as an amateur behind him, attempt to wrest the world's professional singles sculling title from Phelps and lift the sport back on the gold standard. They are quoting odds of around 10 to 8 they will do it.

The race has caused less argument than any other title duel in years. The reason for this it gives because Teddy Phelps, present England's best sculler and a professional since boyhood, cannot rest for the race with little to say and only a small group of supporters to say it for him.

Regarded as unbeatable by the great majority of Canadians who have seen him polish off the best amateur opposition without half trying, Pearce has carried his following into his first money contest.

Even the more expert observers who have closely watched the training of the champion and challenger predicts Bobby's long sweeping stroke will be too much for the shorter-stroking Phelps. Both have endurance for the three-mile stretch and either is conceded an edge in ability to handle a shell in any kind of water.

Prospects today were they would dust off on calm water. A light breeze is unlikely to stir the water inside the breakwater of the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

EVIN GRATTAN SMART PACER

One of the best races ever witnessed in this city and perhaps in the district took place on Thursday at the Driving Grounds, when nine of the best 2.25 pacers in training turned for the home stretch and turned up in Evin Grattan owned by H. Elliott of Sarnia and trained by C. Purvis after a thrilling four heat race. Child Life with Grattan Patch was down in front in the first heat but did not have enough when the final drive came. He laid up a heat and tried hard the fourth heat but the chestnut horse had too much "brush." At one time in the last mile it looked as if Evin Grattan could not get out of the pocket he was forced into but when they turned for home, the horse had too much speed for the field.

In the 2.16 class Black Peter of Kingston won a three heat victory with little or no effort. Battle Pilot from the Western Canada stable was the opposition but did not have enough "foot" appearing to be short in work. Most of the horses here will move up to the big meet next week. The summary.

FISHERMEN BY ONE GOAL LOSE

Redneresville Blue Shirts Make Second Straight In Semi-Finals

Mountain View, Sept. 1.—(Special)—Capitalizing on the chances that were theirs the opportunities afforded themselves the Redneresville nine defeated the Consecon "Fishermen," at Consecon, by the score of 2 to 1, in the final play-off game for the right to meet the Victoria A, C. in the league finals, last evening.

In winning the game and gaining the "Blue Shirted" clan from Redneresville made it two straight in the league semi-finals, having won the first game in Redneresville on Monday last. Jack Parley, the first Redneresville batter of the day hit the second pitched ball for a home run while his team mate, Cook, hit for the circuit in the fourth frame.

Earl Hayes was Manager Vanniven's choice for pitching duties and well he performed, restricting the visitors to five safe blows. The four errors committed by his teammates paved the way for the three runs scored by the visitors. Jack Parley was Manager Wesse's choice to stop the "Fishermen" while Earl Walkom replaced Parley behind the bat as the receiver of the day. Both catchers caught for the home clubs.

The "Fishermen" collected eight safe blows but failed to hit with men on base, having no less than eleven men left on base. The Redneresville club now meet the league leading Victoria A.C. in the home-and-home series for the championship. The first game being played at Mountain View on Wednesday afternoon next week.

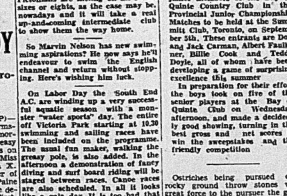
CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

Following the winning of the C.O.R.I. on Wednesday it was announced the Ponies would play the first O.B.A.A. game versus the New Toronto club at Hanlan on Saturday afternoon next. Although Saturday is usually a poor baseball day in the Limestone City, it was necessary on account of their park, the 4.00 p.m. Saturday set sees Bob Wentzell's champions tangle with Joe Bakey's little holders. Last year the Toronto suburb village downed the Ponies in two straight games. With Jamieson having practically five days rest the situation should take a rather right-about face angle this year, however.



Following the defeat of the Belleville Fruit girls at Kingston on Tuesday the Kingston sports scribe broadcast far and wide, that the win was the 29th consecutive over Belleville opposition. Maybe our memory fails us but it does seem to linger in our minds, that the Barrett-coached outfit defeated the Kingston girls right in their own back yard just about one year ago. If we are not mistaken each club won their game away from home in the Eastern Ontario play-downs. A tie game was sequenced in some place or other and then the Kingstonians playing the odd game in Belleville, won the series. "Tut, tut, there pains, tut tut."

Manager Jake Yanover dropped in the editorial office this morning to inform us that if his charges win tomorrow they will journey to Peterboro on Monday to face the winners of the East Peterboro intermediate group with the return game being played in Picton next Wednesday. Of course if Yanker happens to spring the unexpected and down the Prince Edward Crew the crew tomorrow, well, that's a horse of another race.

In all probability Ron Church will be given the pitching assignment in Yanker. If the Yanovermanaged crew can possibly get the ball hard and set often as they did in Picton Wednesday, Church should romp home in a walk. The Pictonians are hitting on all fours, sixes or eights, as the case may be nowadays and it will take a real up-and-coming intermediate club to show them the way home.

So Marvin Nelson has new swimming aspirations? He now says he'll endeavour to swim the English channel and return without stopping. Here's wishing him luck.

On Labor Day the South End A.C. are winding up a very successful aquatic season with a monster "water sports" day. The entire off Victoria Park starting at 10.30 morning and many novel races have been included on the programme. The usual fun makers will bring the crazy jock, to also added. In the afternoon a demonstration of fancy diving and surf board riding will be staged between races. Canoe races are also scheduled. In all it looks like a gala day. It is too, bad that a monster amateur boxing bout could not have been included to

This evening the great professional sculling race between Bob Pearce of Hamilton and Ted Phelps of England is the centre attraction at the Toronto Exhibition. For some time Pearce was the favorite but apparently has taken on a nervous complex. The race should be one of the finest athletic events of the year. Then tomorrow the great Harmsworth trophy race assumes the centre of sport attraction. Gar Wood's Miss America X is declaring the trophy against Hubert Scott-Paine's Miss Britain III. The English speed boat is much the smaller craft but is apparently gaining the respect of the Yankee defenders.

Although nothing authentic has been received as yet there is a possible chance, that the Toronto St. Cyprians juniors may meet the local Cyrstals kids in Belleville on Monday (Labor Day) morning in the Junior O.B.A.A. play-downs. If Toronto kids win from their Owen Sound rivals at Toronto on Saturday they will make the trip. All in all Manager Young intends having some kind of a game Monday morning. If the O.B.A.A. game does not materialize then they'll try an exhibition game versus the local Victorias.

Yesterday's harness races at the Exhibition were enjoyed as they were the previous day. More especially the slow or 2.35 class proved the thriller. When 25 horses can turn a track in 2.13 the going's bound to keep we'd say. Today the free-for-all is the big attraction.

DESERONTO IS DEFEATED

Grills Garage Team Wins By Handy Margin Over Packers

The Grills' Garage softball nine defeated the Deseronto Packers in the Central Park League last evening, when they downed the Deseronto Packers by a score of 10 to 6.

The "Mechanics" went into the field the second innings when they counted three runs, only to add the same number in the next frame and later romped home to a sure victory by nine runs. Ken Lyons and Jack Chandler led the hitters while Barriage and Boyle also played well. Don Hollett was on the hillock for the winners and hurled consistent ball.

Lyons, Tompkins and Rennie looked the best for the Packers.

The line-ups:—Deseronto—Brant, Marsh, Green, Lindsay, Rennie, Ostrander Tompkins, Monahan and Jackson. Grills — J. Barriage, G. Barriage, G. Barriage, Doyle, White, Laidlaw, Reid, Vaddick, Hailer and Ridley.

Score by innings:

TAPE FINGERS TO PROTECT AND STRENGTHEN LEFT HAND

ALEX MORRISON says:

The left hand is generally the one that has to stand the most abuse.

This hand during the struggle to maintain a tight hold on the club invariably becomes marked with blisters or sore spots.

Something should be done to protect it, for a comfortable grip with the left hand is the most valuable thing for a player to acquire about big hands.

One thing that will protect this hand, as I have suggested before, is the wearing of a glove.

Without the glove. Protection can be had by placing rings of tape around the thumb, first and little fingers. These rings will also serve to strengthen the action of this hand during the swing.

Chances 4-1 Against Challenger But One Failure Won't Stop Him

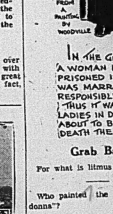
By Central Press Canadian

Windsor, Aug. 00—Willie Scott-Paine's Miss Britain III. has bettered 100 miles an hour in trial runs, he is not overly confident of the Harmsworth Cup record of slightly more than 93 miles an hour established by Gar Wood two years ago.

"I hope to do 100 miles on the straightaways, but you just about 10 per cent of your speed on the turns," he said.

Speaking of his revolutionary craft, which he built within eight weeks to make good his challenge for the cup, he said that English engineers had told him that many of the things he had planned were impossible of achievement. "We used some 'Chinese engineering,' and here we are ready to race," he grinned.

Scott-Paine is a first-class mechanic in his own right, and there is little about racing engines he does not know. He thinks the overall length of 34½ feet of his boat is an handicap. In trial runs it rides the water beautifully. Even side wash fails to disturb the evenness of its running.



"I know I have a damned big job ahead of me. The odds are four to one against me, but I will do my best to make good my challenge and I will come over again and keep on trying."

Weddings

MATTHEWS—LINDSAY

On Saturday, August 19th at 4 p.m. a very quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. J. O. Brown, on the North Front and Donald streets, Belleville, by the Rev. Percy Hall of John Street United Church, when Clara Maud, daughter of Mrs. O. E. Lindsay and the late C. H. Lindsay of Londonderry (Salem), Nova Scotia, was united in marriage to Charles Kenneth Matthews, Belleville, formerly of Canborne, son of Mr. Chas. Matthews, Salmon Bay, B.C.

Immediately following the ceremony a dainty luncheon was served, after which the happy couple left on a week's motor trip. They will reside at the corner of North Front and Donald streets, Belleville, Ont. (Colborne and odjoining papers please copy.)

MCARTHUR—FERRIS

New York, (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer)— The marriage was solemnized at Trinity Church this afternoon in St. Agnes' Chapel, New York City, of Ruby Keeler Ferris, daughter of Mrs. William I. Ferris of Westfield, N.J., and Mr. Franklin George McArthur, Westfield, N.J., son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. McArthur, formerly of Belleville, Ontario. Rev. James A. Smith officiated at the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Irving M. Ferris, was charmingly gowned in white chiffon, with which she wore a net turban with white taffeta rose petals. She carried an old fashioned bouquet.

There were no attendants.

After the ceremony tea was served in the Alcazar Suite. The Waldorf Astoria. Mrs. Ferris, mother of the bride, wore a gown of flowered crepe of sheer, while Mrs. McArthur, the groom's mother, wore brown georgette and georgette.

Mr. and Mrs. McArthur left on a motor trip through the Canadian Peninsula and Eastern Canada. The bride chose for travelling a frock of green crepe, with hat to match. They will reside at Westfield, N.J.

CARRIER BOYS TO GET TREAT

Ontario - Intelligencer Boys Take In Glorious Midway As Guests

Carrier Boys for this Great Family Journal will enjoy a real treat this evening when to the number of sixty or more they will be the guests of Mr. J. W. Conklin and the officials of the Conklin All-Canadian Shows at Belleville Fair. The boys will take in all the rides, the Caterpillar, the Lindy Loop, Whip, Merry-go-Rounds and All. They will also be taken on a tour of the side shows, and will see it all, from the eight-footed horse to the dainty little Doll Lady with her baby nearly as large as herself—they will see it ALL, because "Paddy" Conklin says so, and he should know, and never forgets the thrill of the circus—also because he has a boy of his own, coming up, all of two years old, and boys to the circus. Well, it's to be a wild tour all right, when those ramping, tearing lusty newsboys make the Grand Tour of the Midway, accompanied by a feature writer of this C.P.J., who will record his impressions of the reaction of the boys to the circus stimulus for the benefit of the readers of Saturday's paper. If ought to be good, better than Footloose Sinclair's tour of the Khyber Pass.

The Carrier Boys will meet the Conklin officials at the show office, near the Marshall Road gate this evening at 6.30 o'clock.

Two persons meeting in frequent intercourse soon find out that they cannot enjoy a state of perfect liberty, that there needs must hear and forbear.

INQUEST INTO BAY TRAGEDY IS CONCLUDED

Jury Believes Better Lookout Should Have Been Kept

TRENTON, August 31.—(Special)—"We the coroner's jury find that Dorothy Lewis was drowned in Presqu'ile Bay, Sunday, August 20th, caused by two boats colliding. We are of the opinion that a better lookout should have been kept by the vessels in both boats."

This was the verdict returned at the inquest before Coroner Dr. F. M. Dure at Brighton, last night, after an hour's deliberation.

The jurymen were Harry Prinsforeman, Fred Wright, J. McGuire, H. Sparling, Harry Phillips, R. Robilio, W. Harper, R. Bird, H. Robitis, H. Baker and J. Bird.

This inquest was called after Dorothy Lewis and six daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lewis, was drowned when the motor boat "Garland" struck the boat "Sea Toy" in Presqu'ile Bay on August 20th, throwing thirteen occupants of the Sea Toy into the water. All were rescued with the exception of the little Lewis girl.

Joseph Kemp of 167 Coxburn Ave., Toronto uncle of the deceased, was first witness called. Kemp stated he was a passenger in the Sea Toy on its fill-fated trip.

"We saw the other boat about ten feet away and waived and hollered but the next moment we were struck amidships again in the side."

Crown Attorney Boggs asked how fast they were travelling.

"About four miles an hour," stated Kemp.

Kemp was asked to place two models in the position of the boats as at the time of the impact.

Meachin said he just noticed the boat approaching but was not nervous till he saw the three occupants were not looking.

"What speed was this boat travelling?" the Crown asked.

"I cannot say exactly but much faster than we were," Meachin answered. Meachin tried to turn so they could sideswipe.

When he came up Dr. Dunnett was in the water helping rescue the passengers of the Sea Toy.

Crown—"Could you reverse'.

Answer—"No."

Coroner—"Can you tell us the condition or construction of the boat".

Answer—"I have looked at the boat at the dock and was surprised to see how well it was preserved."

"How far away was the boat when you first saw it?"

"Maybe a 100 feet."

Juryman—"Did you carry any life preservers?"

Answer: "Six cork seats capable of holding six persons each and a fire extinguisher."

"How many were in the boat?"

"Six adults and seven children, ranging from 6-21 years of age."

Mrs. Alfred Lewis, mother of Dorothy Lewis was next called.

Mrs. Lewis said she saw the boat coming travelling much faster. After the crash she didn't see anyone as she was fighting in the water later noticed little Dorothy was missing.

Alfred Lewis, the father of the child was not in the boat, but identified the body of the daughter, Dorothy.

Dr. Frank H. Dunnett owned of the Garland was then called.

Dr. Dunnett stated they left Schuman's Cove about a mile from the accident with Norman Dickenson and Harry Schuman as passengers.

He said his boat was 22 1/2 feet with a 5' 4" beam.

Col. Boggs—"Who was steering?"

Ans.—"Harry Shuman."

The wheel was about half way down the right hand side of the boat. The doctor was sitting "tailor fashion" on the engine housing ahead of Dickenson and Shuman facing the stern.

Crown—"Did you see the San Toy?"

Ans.—"Not till the contact.",

"I sat watching the wake of the boat and we did not change our course at all," stated Dr. Dunnett.

Col. Boggs—"What then took place?"

Ans.—"I jumped off and swam over to see if I could help."

"What speed will the Garland do?"

"About fifteen miles per hour but the throttle was about half open; we were doing about ten."

Juryman—"You were facing stern all the time?"

Ans.—"Yes."

Coroner Dr. Dure—"I want to know about sobriety, etc. of Mr. Schuman, the driver."

Dr. Dunnett—"I never saw or heard of him speak of liquor and he has had long experience as a boat man. He is known to all as a builder and operator of boats. We had all the passengers of the San Toy on the Garland in two minutes and then I spent nearly fifteen minutes in the water under the San Toy looking for the lost child."

Harry Schuman, driving the Garland, said he did boat work all his life. He practically corroborated Dr. Dunnett's evidence.

Norman Dickinson of Bowmanville, passenger in the Garland said he was not used to boats.

Juryman—"Could we get to the mean way time men couldn't see the other boat?".

Coroner—"That's what you are here for. To weigh the evidence submitted."

Dr. Jas. H. Miller of Toronto, who was camping at Presqu' ile was called next.

Dr. Miller said he was taken to the scene of the accident and had working on the child on the journey to shore and had emptied the water from her.

Coroner—"What do you think was the cause of death?"

Dr. Miller—"I would say drowning."

Capt. H. M. Mathews was called as an experienced seaman.

He had viewed the boats and said it must have been a glancing blow as direct hit would have maybe cut the San Toy in half.

Marine laws were discussed and Capt. Mathews said that rising was to have a good lookout.

Harry Shuman of the San Toy he said it was not what could be called in Al condition but was seaworthy.

Coroner—Was the San Toy seaworthy?

Mathews—"Had all she could carry."

Stewart Gunyo said the San Toy was built in May 1933 and was new but not repaired.

George Lewis, grandfather of the drowned child and present owner of the boat, said it had been repaired and painted a year ago and that the seats around the boat measured twenty-six feet and there was plenty of room for six adults and seven children.

Provincial Constable McBrien said he was not on the water but from day look measurements and photos with Mr. Graham of the Provincial Studio at Trenton.

This being the evidence the jury retired at 11 o'clock and returned at 12.05 with their verdict.

. . . . An Ice Box Cake that will be the envy of your guests . . . .

The next time you want to serve a dessert that will be a success with everybody try this recipe for Chocolate Ice Box Cake.

3 squares unsweetened chocolate, broken in small pieces
¼ cup granulated sugar
¼ cup boiling water
1 cup St. Charles Milk
2 egg yolks
½ cup butter
1 cup confectioners' sugar
1 ½ teaspoons vanilla
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
9 dozen lady fingers
Whipped cream

Put the chocolate and granulated sugar into top of double boiler, add boiling water, let stand over hot water until chocolate is melted. Bring the St. Charles Milk to scalding point and stir into the chocolate mixture. Add the egg yolks, one at a time, beating well after each yolk is added. Cook until the mixture is smooth and thick. Cool. Cream the butter and beat in the confectioners' sugar gradually. Stir into the chocolate mixture, add vanilla and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Line the sides and bottom of a spring form mold with the lady fingers. Cover the bottom layer with half the chocolate filling, add another layer of lady fingers, cover with the remainder of the chocolate filling, put in the ice box and let stand overnight. Unmold and serve with a garnish of whipped cream.

POWER TOTAL REPLY MADE

Hon. J. R. Cooke Asserts Hepburn Statements Misleading

Toronto, Sept. 1.—Claiming that Provincial Liberal Leader Hepburn's statements are "utterly misrepresentation" regarding Hydro has mailed over the Toronto City seal a letter asserting that there is "excess power" now being sold to the extent of 1,000,000 horsepower. Hon. J. R. Cooke, chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission, yesterday issued a formal statement in which he asserts the public that it has "the most substantial warrant" for discounting Mr. Hepburn's dire talk on the power situation in 1937.

"There will not be," states Mr. Cooke, "unused power in the extent of 1,000,000 horsepower in 1937 unless several most improbable things should happen simultaneously.

"For such a situation to materialize it would require firstly, that for six decades, which is only 60 years, were at the rate of 11.4 per cent. per year—and some important elements of which have persisted right through the depression—industrial gains entirely for the next four years; and it would require further that the industrial efficiency, which has already shown material improvement—between 1929 and the middle of 1933 an increase of 7.7 per cent. over last year in power demands of Niagara system municipalities—must for four years more continue to become substantially worse. Moreover, past experience points to the probability that with moderately rapid recovery from the depression, the aggregate demands on the Commission's systems will in 1937 equal, if indeed they do not exceed, the expectations that have been made."

Not only the Globe, but also several other prominent Canadian newspapers, declares Mr. Cooke, have been taking Mr. Hepburn's misrepresentations at their misleading face value without a cautionary word. One section of the citizens of Ontario who have $383,000,000 at stake in Hydro securities is thus unfortunately have thereby, he adds, "unjustifiably frightened by the gamblers on Crooks the "Human Cyclone" who smashed all 1933 records in a car on a motorcycle through a solid wall of flaming boards, all brought a good return for the money spent at the gate and grand stand for admission. Besides this there were other performers who kept the scene alive with their various exhibitions.

While the crowd will be rung down on the Belleville Fair officially at midnight Friday, the large Midway will continue to play and draw the same large crowds up to midnight Saturday. Fireworks will be open free all day Saturday.

HORSE BLEEDS TO DEATH AFTER CRASH

Viner Severs Jugular Vein of Animal At Pinnacle

Stepping in front of an oncoming automobile driven by Mr. F. J. Henderson of Foxboro, a horse owned by Mr. Viner of that village was knocked down, severely cut about the head and later bled to death in the village of Foxboro about 9 p.m. Thursday night.

Mrs. Viner, who was driving the animal, was leading it from the barn to a nearby pasture field. The sharp horse suddenly turned about and walked directly into the path of the oncoming Henderson car, the sharp vase of the car hit the horse behind the ear, severing a jugular artery. The horse fell to the highway and bled to death. The provincial police investigated.

AUTOMOBILE IS RECOVERED

Reporting missing last Monday a sedan automobile owned by Morley Smith of the city, was recovered by Plainclothes Constable Izard early Friday morning. The car was found in a ditch on South Church Street. Judging from the articles found in the car it had been driven for the purpose of joy riding. Some tobacco, a screw driver and a pocket knife were not the property of Mr. Smith were found in the car. The police are still investigating.

CUP WINNERS ANNOUNCED

Presentation Will Be Made To Owners At Future Date

Handsome silver cups, which had been donated by various public-spirited men and enthusiasts in the sport of sailing will be awarded the winners in the various series of yacht races held under the auspices of the South End Athletic Club during the past few months. After considerable checking of points obtained in each race, executive of the Club announce the winners in the various classes.

A public presentation of the cups will be held at some future date, but when will depend on the weather. It is after which the prizes will remain in possession of the lucky winners. May 24th, 1934, when they will be returned to the club for the next summer's competition.

It is understood that all who are interested in building punts to compete in the races held by the club, are requested that the construction of the boats until a meeting may be held by the committee in charge on standard regulations governing the contests. A meeting is expected to be called for this purpose within the next two weeks.

Preparations for the big meet to be held by the Club, at the end of Victoria Park on Labor Day, Sept. 4th, have been about completed. Interesting boat and canoe races, swimming races and rowing races, besides many aquatic novelties will feature the day.

POLICE COURT

Charged with assaulting Archibald Wallbridge, of this city, Fred Kelly of the Trenton Airport, was found guilty and sentenced to serve five days in the common jail.

Kelly in company with four others was attending a party at the home of intoxicated condition on Albion street, Wallbridge was inebriated, it is alleged by the police, were molesting one of the local city lot owners and as a result Kelly is said to have stolen a quantity of candy and cigarettes which were made by the assertion allegedly made by Wallbridge, that he would inform the police.

The employees of the "Foreign Legion" at the Airport pleaded guilty to charges of intoxication. The usual fines were imposed. The fines not being paid, 15 days in the common jail was the alternate.

The four operators of the concession booth that was closed by the police on a charge of gambling, Tuesday night, made restitution to the complaining and the case was later settled.

STRUCK BACKING OUT FROM CURB

A slight automobile accident occurred on Front street about 4.00 p.m. Thursday, when a car being driven by Mrs. E. A. Ridley of this city collided with a car being driven south by Arnold Hill of Point Anne. Constable Evans investigated and found that the steering apparatus of the Hill car had been damaged to such an extent that a tow truck from a local garage was needed to tow the car to the garage. Mr. Hill was driving south, when Mrs. Ridley started to back out from the west curb. The lady did not observe the oncoming car.

EIGHTEEN POUND LUNGE IS TAKEN

There's fish still in "them that waters". And Charlie Barnhardt of the Wharf Street Debating Society, proved this, Thursday eve, when he annexed and landed an 18-pound lunge while hauling in front of the dock of Ontario School for the Deaf.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

Bringing one of the strongest and most capable casts, and the most amazing screen story seen here in months, "Three-Cornered Moon", a new season Paramount picture, opens at the Belle tomorrow (Saturday). Say is low day matinee.

"Three Cornered Moon" is most delightful because of the clever way in which it pokes fun, not so much at the depression, as so many have.

Madcap, gay, frivolous and a "screwy" as the name they bear, the Slimpleges, a typical American family get in one jam after another much to their consternation but to your amusement. To the accompaniment of gales of laughter, they lose their entire fortune because "Ma" Slimpleger just couldn't get to the broker the kids are forced to "work" of all things, and the time comes when they even must go hungry. Then all the fun begins as the worry-marks are erased from your forehead, and once again you laugh. And how!

Claudette Colbert, Richard Arlen and Mary Boland, she of Broadway stage fame, are starred. The picture is the first from Paramount for the new season and they have distinguished themselves with "Three Cornered Moon".

Elliott Nugent, who has made h's marks in writing, and acting in addition, directed this amusing play, and indeed he shows a rare gift for comedy.

Richard Arlen is the sobering influence in this wild-harem scarem family. He is more attractive than usual and here he gives definite reality to his romantic role.

You'll forget your own troubles in the enjoyment of the Slimpleg's difficulties. It's the funniest screen comedy to reach Belleville in a month of unfunny screen fare. It's from the New York stage success of the same name.

New Zane Grey Story

Zane Grey's exciting action-romance, "The Mysterious Rider", done into a modern picture by a cast headed by Kent Taylor, Lona Andre, Irving Pichel, Gail Patrick and Warren Hymer is the second feature attraction on the program.

Harlow-Gable To-night

Jean Harlow and Clark Gable are appearing in the new season's flavor, picture, "Hold Your Man", at the Belle Tonight for the last time.

Everybody must patiently learn to reason as he must learn to walk and to talk.

AT THE CAPITOL

The prize ring and a wandering homeless, nameless tramp life form the background for Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.'s latest picture "The Life of Jimmy Dolan," which comes to the Capitol Theatre tomorrow (Saturday).

The character which young Fairbanks essays in this film is something different in his long list of screen characterizations which has run from America newspaper reporter to Russian prince.

As a southpaw pugilist who has just won the championship, Doug is given the chance to display his boxing prowess in two exciting sequences in the picture.

The story, however, is not confined to the prize ring. As a result of a crime committed when he was drunk, he has to flee the city and forever cut off everything dealing with his past. His ceaseless wanderings bring him to a farmhouse where he joins the lives of a woman, a girl and four children and tries to bury his past in the execution of farm chores. The conflict between his new life and the old life which shadows him, provides the sensational and tense scenes with a bit of novel material with which to work.

This picture marks the teaming together of Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Loretta Young for the first time since they appeared together in "I Like Your Nerve."

The mixture of prize fight thrills, an escape from justice, and romance which the spoiled hard boiled horror eventually finds, provides a variety of interest that is designed to please the varying tastes of movie fans.

The final sheet reveals an exceptional array of talent in the supporting cast with important roles being played by Aline MacMahon, Lyle Talbot, Guy Kibbee, Harold Huber, Phil Dorsay, Arthur Hohl, George Meeker, and four children, Farina, of "Our Gang" fame, David Durand, Dawn O'Day and Mickey Rooney. An important role is also played by Arthur DeKuh, professional heavyweight wrestler.

Stranded Gold

The revival of general interest in the once famous gold fields of the West, with the reported discoveries of "pay dirt" in more than one of the historic mining regions of California and Colorado, makes "Stranded Gold," the latest John Wayne Four-Star Western, which is coming to the Capitol Theatre tomorrow as especially timely picture.

In some instances gold has been discovered in paying quantities in the vicinity of old "ghost towns" such as is used as the locale of the story of "Stranded Gold." Such discoveries have brought these towns to life again, if only for a short time, while the hungry gold-seekers pour in and the days of '48 the '90's and the early 1900's live again.

Other "gold mines" have opened up new sections of these Western states to the sound of the miner's pick for the first time.

Many of the scenes in "Stranded Gold" were taken in the famous Mojave country of California where millions in gold were discovered fit few days when the desert was the mecca of the world's gold-seekers. Those who have enjoyed John Wayne's earlier pictures will find this adventure in the open spaces of the West a novel and thrilling experience.

Complete performances commence at 2.45, 7.15 and 8.40.

Monday and Tuesday are Dinnerware Gift Days.

Tonight

"When Ladies Meet" the Ann Harding, Robert Montgomery hit, ends tonight at 7.15 and 9.10.

NO CHANGE IN CONDITION

Christon Bank, England, Sept. 1. (AP)—Increased anxiety was felt today as hours passed without any definite sign of improvement in the condition of Viscount Grey of Fallodon, Secretary for Foreign Affairs at the outbreak of the war.

No change was reported in his condition, which has been critical for several days. The statesman had a relapse yesterday.

The first international conference on labor was held in 1890 and it was fifteen years before the next one was held.

DAUGHTER HAD CRYING SPELLS

"Nerves" Brought On by Worrying

AFTER KRUSCHEN "A DIFFERENT GIRL"

A mother writes:—"Early this spring my eighteen-year-old daughter had a nervous breakdown. She had crying spells and fits of the blues. So I decided to give Kruschen Salts a trial, starting with a large half-teaspoonful in hot water first thing in the morning, and the little daily dose in tea for lunch and supper. In less than a week the crying spells had stopped and she began to sleep better. That was three months ago. To-day she is full of pep, and sleeps and eats well. She is a different girl. I am still giving her the little daily dose."—(Mrs.) M. L.

The commonest cause of depression is partial constipation—an insidious complaint, because the sufferer is seldom aware of it. It means the gradual accumulation of body poisons which dull the mind, damp the spirits, sap the nervous strength and lower the whole vitality.

Kruschen Salts make constipation impossible. They help the liver and kidneys to perform their natural duties in a natural way; they clear away gently, but completely, all poisonous waste matter, and ensure an uncontaminated blood-stream. Therefore, if you here to Kruschen, you need never know the meaning of melancholy, or never feel "nervy" or depressed.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 45c. and 75c. per bottle.

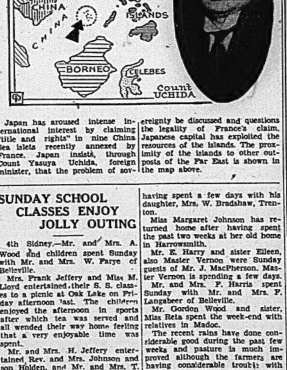
SPRAGUE'S

New Clothes Renewal Method

IT IS WITH A GREAT DEAL OF PLEASURE that the announcement is made that after some months of preparation and installation of the most modern of machinery in our new plant, North Front Street, and College Street, this new and unique plant will be in operation in a few days. The system to be used for cleaning and renewing Men's and Women's Clothing is the very latest devised by scientific engineers after years of experimenting. This system consists of several processes in harmonious and continuous operation, the machinery used being the most modern type used in the better plants in the large cities—the harmonious grouping and operation of the various machines resulting in speed, perfect deodorizing and complete satisfaction.

In this system there is absolutely no chance for discoloration from any number of garments cleansed, or however soiled, as the cleaning solution used proceeds immediately to the mechanical Filtration Section of the system, proceeding from thence slowly into the Cleansing Fountain again.



The last process, and the most expensive, is the Deodorizer Air-Drying machine of tumbler-type, internally constructed to prevent any tearing or wearing of garments or goods in drying.

BARGAIN BRIDE

By KATHARINE HAHLAND-TAYLOR

"I don't smoke, Mr. Colvin," Lida said softly. He remembered that she had smoked while Elinor telephoned the news of mother's arrival home. He had stared at the smoke of her cigaret without knowing he saw it, but now remembered. He felt he was not showing surprise but Miss Ella saw the blank-ness of his face and read it correctly.

Her heart grew hot with anger. They were deceiving her! But she would not be duped as Barrett's fiancee had been.

He turned then, still holding the open case, to Elinor. Flushing she took a cigaret, she felt that she had to that she must say, as she did, "I know you don't like women's smoking, Aunt Ella but I like less women's lying!"

Barrett held his lighter to Elinor's cigaret hands shaking so that the was unsteady. Her hands, too had shaken. Perhaps that tremor was made to order so that he, so older man, should be relieved of consciousness.

Miss Ella boomed in a voice strong but quavering. "I am shocked! I am deeply shocked! To think that you, Lida, permit this!"

Fallenleigh Lida muttered account. She had Miss Ella's influence over Elinor she said. She had done everything to dissuade her from the unpleasant habit. Because for once biting she said (remembering Barrett), Elinor was too young to smoke.

Miss Ella's eyes rested upon Lida's right index finger, the inside of which was tainted with a yellow stain. Lida's blonde skin made a blotter and the nicotine proved Lida's latest deception.

The old woman smiling the smile that the family feared, she deliberately and with the same exactness to Barrett and the smile changed to one of ironsides, affectionate gratitude. Her old eyes filled with tears. He had served her well and he would be rewarded. No one would know how well he would be rewarded until she was "gone". He managed money as Beste and Jim could not; he told the truth while Lida and Elinor lied. He was fitted to be that which he should be—her son's heir.

No one should say that she had been duped by clumsy tricks or fooled by lies. Lies!

She rang the bell that was by her side on a low table. "Craven," she said smoothly when he appeared, "tell Miss Smythe to ask Mr. Grotzer to come to see me this afternoon at five, promptly at five. That will be all Craven!" she ended and sat back.

The butler disappeared his face a mask but Lida had shown no emotion. She smiling forcedly and her eyes held fear. Mr. Grotzer Miss Ella's attorney. It could mean that once more Miss Ella was going to change her will.

Barrett who had started it all, stood up. He bowed above Miss Ella's hand, murmuring something about having to be on his way. He gave one glance to Elinor at leaving, sick with longing, and trying to despise her.

"I am very glad that Mr. Barrett Colvin was there when you came" said Miss Ella with emphasis.

Lida moistened her lips which were threatening to crack on her forced smile. When she had Elinor alone—! The little fool! What had she done by that insane gesture? "I could strangle you—barehanded!" Lida thought.

And Barrett Colvin knew what he had done, she reasoned. He must know Miss Ella's feeling about women who smoked. Probably he had after deliberately and planned the affair maliciously for the good of Aunt Ella's charity? He wanted to incline it in her will.

"We must be going, dear Aunt Ella!" Lida murmured. She could not bear to sit with that heart—this retrain.

CHAPTER 16

Elinor had never had such a session with her aunt. Miss Ella on the drive home from Miss Ella's. She said and thought: "Elinor's people are staring—!" but it made no impression.

The chauffeur's face reddened from the stares of men and women in the city. He thought that Elinor's voice was so loud and high-pitched it could be heard through the glass. "I pity that girl!" the chauffeur thought. The thought was an old one that frequently became a chant when the servants were together.

Now Lida was laughing with a shrill sneering, hysterical laugh. So far, as the chauffeur could hear, Miss had been no reply at all from Miss Elinor.

He sympathized with the girl even more deeply as he opened the door of the car a little later. Lida swept into the building, brittle and strong from her fleeting anger. Elinor crept after her, her face pepper-white.

"For a moment" the chauffeur told the butler later "I thought she was going to fall—poor kid!"

Elinor's reactions were divided. In one way she was glad that she had done what she had. For another reason she deeply regretted it. Lida had said cynically and glittering "Think of your father! The way he has always sat his life. And now you—with a cigaret!—have barred every chance he ever has had of rest and independence!"

Elinor would even have lied to give her father all that he deserved. She would have gladly and truly as well as she could. But it was too late.

Barrett Colvin had not once looked at her. This realisation crew between every separate recollection of the afternoon. She had stolen side glances at him, unable to help herself. Each time he had seemed coldly composed, entirely unaware of her.

Two long days and longer nights stretched ahead. Elinor could not seem to sleep. On the morning following the second night she woke to find the girl standing by her bed.

"Well, what is it?" Lida flung petulantly. She looking being disturbed so early.

"Aunt Ella's—" Elinor said up. She laughed shrilly. "A pretty time you chose—" she began. It was the old story Elinor had heard so often during these two dreary days. A story of her having ruined her parents' future.

Lida punctuating her diatribe with questions. "And you knew perfectly well how she felt—" "Did you interrogation-ed?

"Craven. Miss Smythe is prostrated—"

"Miss Smythe prostrated! How delicious! Your father can't go to the office? He knows that?"

"Yes."

"He'll probably be out off without a cent—as you know. And of course you know, why to but, even though he gets nothing, he must keep up appearances. I haven't, a decent black dress. Has Bessie telephoned?"

"No."

"That's odd. I suppose she thinks since Aunt Ella is ill that that we are beneath notice. No doubt she's glad of your part in that happened. Hand me my negligee! Another, thing—"

"Yes," whom Lida had summoned a moment before, appeared and Lida continued, "I shall be waiting 10 minutes, Celeste!"

She must hurry to the house, Lida realised. There she would have, at least, the satisfaction of seeing Miss Smythe with the contempt she felt for her.

"Are you going to run my bath, Celeste?" Lida demanded. The maid looked at Elinor with no interest in her shabby negligee, a child. Celeste knew that she could not help Miss Elinor's look not. Ah, but Celeste had regretted it when the visits of that flat-looking Mr. Grotzer ceased!

Elinor went to her own, much smaller room. She sat on the edge of her narrow bed and stared at a worn rug. Perhaps it was a mistake to hope or rest for her father.

She heard her mother leaving, heard the heavy steps flung across the shoulder. Then there was quiet. Elinor knew, she knew, but delayed, sickened by the thought of what she must do. Lida was right. She was deserting that one cigaret. He deserved some of her aunt's vast fortune. Miss Ella's money in his life, driven by Lida's nevertiring goading.

Elinor twisted her hands in misery. Celeste's words echoed in her ears. Ah—she with all the rest knew the story!

She brought a little breakfast for you —there Mademoiselle—in the small room on the way."

Mademoiselle must eat, Celeste reminded. Elinor's wrong she forgot she was a servant to remember that Elinor was young and sufferings and alone. She laid a hand on Elinor's shoulder.

"Thank you, Celeste!"

Elinor tried, because of Celeste's sing her anxiety, to eat as much as she could of "the little breakfast." The rest of the day passed slowly. She played chess with her father. She wondering if she were really as guilty as her mother said. Memories of Barrett Colvin sitting stiff and cold in Miss Ella's drawing room haunted the girl.

They followed another sleepless night; another day of much the same drear pattern. The third day was perhaps the most miserable with Lida, nervous and flaring up angrily or becoming sullenly mordbid. Everyone knew that at four-thirty would arrive the late Miss Sexton's drawing room and there a little later she will come for Elinor.

At length the long stretch was ended.

The funeral was gloomily correct. No one wept except Craven and Celeste. Mrs. Bessie Thrope, looking a little more bedraggled than usual in her shabby black. Lida was aware of the smartness of her own black attire. She studied Barrett Colvin who was staring at his hands, gripped between them. It was natural Lida thought, to realise how easily he had been managed. She supposed she was in for a bad hair hour with Vance Carter who would remind her of Lida's promise to divorce Bentwell—a thing she intended to do in time but only with the right man appeared. How white Elinor was! And how stuffy Bessie looked. Sentimental fool—he was actually blinking!

What a perfect old dodo the clergyman was! Well, Lida knew her share would be diminished by him, who, despite Miss Ella's stern disapproval, had had candids placed in his pocket.

The clergyman was droning. "We brought nothing into this world and it is certain we carry nothing out." The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away!"

Lida looked extremely pensive because she wanted to smile. So terribly apt, that remark!

Just an hour or two more and they'd all hear the will. Thank God, that suspense would be over! She had heard Mr. Grotzer speak to Barrett Colvin before the opening of the service to ask him to stay for the reading of the will. It had made Lida a little uneasy at first. But play. Barrett Colvin thought of Lida's fortune. Lida's fortune! Lida had left him nothing but the fact that he must not show what he felt, must not even look at Elinor, sitting beside her father and speaking of Scotch and swayed a little walking

Mr. Grotzer cleared his throat. The rustling and moving ceased tension was in the air. Mr. Grotzer began reading a long preamble in which Miss Ella rendered to God her gratitude for being all that she had been. . . .

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

Except for Sir Malud and his friends, most of the people in the gym cuisine of Nimmr were inclined pleasantly toward "Sir James." He was a gentleman, he had brought with him an air of freshness and newness that was rather a relief from the heavy atmosphere that surrounded Nimmr for nearly seven and a half centuries. He had brought new words, expressions and views which many of the knights and ladies were joyously adopting.

His friend Sir Richard was very popular. But lacking Sir Malud's wealth, he was less influential. Blake and Sir Richard had many stanch supporters though the majority of the court laughed when Malud laughed and frowned when he frowned, since even in Nimmr there flourished an early order of "yes-men". After the morning practice Blake, as was customary, advanced and bowed low before the Princess Guinalda.

"Thou didst well this morning, Sir James," said the Princess, speaking in the English used by all since the ride." Sir Malud could scarcely conceal a sneer at her remark. "Ozmosa!" he cried, "we're in error with a trenchant blade, a cavalry knife instead of a long-bow. I plain. I fain would meet thee tomorrow in fair till." "Hop to it, old bean, I'm on," snapped Blake; "wanna your pistol?" "I knowest not the meaning of thy silly words," returned Sir Malud, "but I think me, my actions shall speak louder than thy words."

ITALIAN AIRMAN BURNS TO DEATH IN CRASH

Aviator Burns to Death Plane Crashes on Runway Taking Off to Bagdad

General Francesco De Pinedo, Italian Airman Victim

LOAD IS BLAMED

Attempting To Fly 6300 Miles In 46 Hours For Record

Brooklyn, N.Y., Sept. 2 (AP)—General Francesco de Pinedo, one of Italy's most famous airmen, met flaming death shortly after dawn today when his huge plane crashed and burned up at the start of a take-off for Bagdad, Iraq.

A tremendous load of gasoline, 1,227 gallons caused his giant red, green and purple plane to sheer from a concrete runway and hit a fence at Floyd Bennett Airport. In a second it was a roaring mass of flames, and the flyer was burned beyond recognition.

The start of what the gallant flyer had hoped would be a nonstop record flight became a scene of horror. Spectators shuddered and covered their eyes as they saw fire engulf the airman.

Attendants rushed to the scene and tried to pull him out, but the flames forced them back. Michael Hicks Beach, a naval machinist's mate, was badly burned about the face trying to reach de Pinedo with a fire extinguisher.

The plane burned only a few seconds before it was a mass of metal

AUSTRIA TO ADD TO ARMY

Britain Agrees For Sake of Order To Increase of Troops

London, Sept. 2 (AP)—Great Britain has signified her willingness that Austria, with certain limitations, increase her military force from 23,000 to 30,000 on the ground that the present army is insufficient to maintain order and public security.

Foremost among these disasters the British Government ranks a "terrorist campaign conducted against the present government of Austria."

EX-PREMIER LEYGUES DIES

Minister of Marine In Present French Government Passes Away

Paris, Sept. 2 (AP)—Georges Leygues, former Premier and Foreign Minister of France, and Minister of Marine in the present government, died this noon.

He had been ill for the last few weeks and recently his condition became serious, but news of it was kept secret.

M. Leygues would have been 75 years old in November.

He entered Parliament in 1885, and ever since he represented his native department of Lot-et-Varonne in the Senate.

He first attained cabinet rank in 1894. Known as "the grand old man" of the government, M. Leygues was an uncompromising believer in a navy adequate for the home defence of France and for the protection of her farflung possessions overseas. At the London Naval Conference in 1930 he proved to be a stiff negotiator.

Until a few years ago he was a fervent mountain climber. In Paris his favorite exercise was fencing, and until recently he was often on his horse in the Bois de Boulogne.

BOAT SINKS AFTER CRASH

Crew of Freighter Is Reported Rescued Off Cape Fear

New York, Sept. 2 (AP)—Thirty-six men were saved from death by fire or drowning when the tanker Coldwater burst into flames and "presumably sank" after a collision with the liner President Wilson, wireless messages announced early today.

The coastwise tanker and the liner, bound for the Orient, collided about 200 miles off the coast of North Carolina at 11 p.m. last night a message from the master of the latter reached the Radio Marine Corporation, said:

"Sept. 1, about 11 p.m.," the message said "SS. Coldwater caught fire after a collision with the steamship President Wilson and presumably sank."

The position, given was Latitude 33.31 north, Longitude 75.45 west, which is approximately 200 miles off Cape Fear, N.C.

The first message did not say what happened to the tanker's crew but shortly afterwards the vessel's owners announced at Savannah, Ga., that she had saved all of them and was taking them to Norfolk, Va.

The liner, owned by the Dollar Steamship Company of San Francisco, was en route from New York to Caribbean ports, Honolulu and the Orient when the accident occurred. The Coldwater, a 290-foot vessel, sailed from Jacksonville, Fla., on August 28 for a trip up the Atlantic coast.

CIGARETTE HI-JACKERS SOUGHT IN CANADA

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 2 (CP)—All of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in tracing 8,000 cartons of cigarettes believed to have been smuggled into Canada from the United States has been asked by American authorities in an attempt to find the "hi-jackers" who are alleged to have taken a truckload of cigarettes at Detroit.

MOTOR GIANTS TUNED, READY FOR THE RACE

Harmsworth Competition To Provide Thrilling Spectacle

START AT 3 P.M.

Scott-Paine, Challenger, Says He Has Only One Chance In Four

Algonac, Mich., Sept. 2 (CP)—The greatest marine spectacle of the yearning for speed and power, the colossal races—brought its largest gathering in history to the banks of the St. Clair River today and long before dawn roads leading to the riverbanks, Canadian and American, were choked with traffic.

Five fine lines in the race's history today's meeting between the David and perhaps the Goliath of motorboatdom will be visible from both shores.

On the tiny hull of a freakish little craft, Great Britain has pinned her hopes of taking the trophy home. The giant Miss America X., holder in the past of the cup, will defend the trophy. And both pilots today scanned the weather, looked over their boats over, and then rested to wait the first starting gun at three o'clock eastern standard time.

OWNER UNSEEN SINCE BLAZE

Ruins of His Home In Bradford Show No Trace

Bradford, Ont., Sept. 2 (CP)—Searchers combing the ruins of the burned Bogert household home here after fire had destroyed it early today have found no trace of his body. It is thought he left before the blaze broke and has joined his family in Toronto.

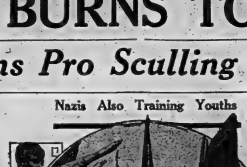
Mr. Rogers was seen by neighbors late last night at his house, accompanied by George Patient, 19, of whom no trace has been found since the blaze.

The frame building was burned to the ground today. For several hours firemen poured water on the ruins, then started to search for Rogers' body.

A son who was helping in the search for his father today was unable to explain why he would leave the scene of the fire without mentioning same.

FOREST FIRE HAZARD HIGH

Unusual Lack of Water In Streams and Swamps



Toronto, Sept. 2.—(CP)—In general the forest fire hazard throughout Ontario has been very high throughout the summer with unusual lack of water in the swamps, streams and lakes making fire extinguishing extremely difficult, E. J. Zavitz, Deputy Minister of Forests in the Provincial Government stated today.

The northwestern portion of the province, west of Lake Nipigon has had severe drought and unusually large number of fires caused by lightning have occurred during the early summer. Rainfall during the recent week has made the situation less serious, he said.

Throughout the northeastern clay belt fire hazard was high during July and early August; but enough rain fell in late August to improve conditions considerably. It is feared, however, that drying winds may increase the hazard if more rain does not fall.

Algoma region did not have an extremely high fire hazard the early part of the summer but at present weather conditions have made conditions dangerous and numerous small fires have broken out in North Bay, Parry Bound and Trent regions and rain has been frequent and conditions now are not dangerous.

Nazis Also Training Youths

Leaders of the Nazi movement in Germany are closely following the successful program of Italian Fascism even to the training of the rising generation. Upper shows a group of German boys, part of the 100,000 who paraded in Berlin recently, receiving the Nazi salute, while lower shows youthful Blackshirts on parade in Rome.

Nazi War Lords on Parade

Since the rise to power of Chancellor Adolf Hitler, Germany has undergone a renaissance to the old militaristic spirit of pre-war days. Here are Minister of War von Blomberg (right), head of Germany's land forces, and Admiral Raeder, head of naval forces, pictured at the ceremonies marking the opening of a new parade ground in Berlin recently.

Ottawa, Sept. 2.—(CP)—Seventy-three years ago yesterday, the late King Edward VII as Prince of Wales laid the cornerstone of the old parliament buildings in Ottawa. This interesting fact was disclosed in the report made by Colonel W. N. Ponton, K.C., of Belleville, Registrar of the Canadian Bar Association, read before that assembly today. Colonel Ponton recalled that as a boy he had been present at the ceremony.

The report praised the work of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett at the recent Economic Conference and the World Wheat Conference.

"Like the Canadians at Ypres, he saved the situation and laid the foundations for the future," the report said.

Men Greatest Forgetters Says "Lost and Found" Department Head

New York, Sept. 2 (AP) — "It's the men who leave their belongings behind them. They leave fire times as many things when they don't ask us women do."

Miss Mollie Pizzi, head of the lost and found department in a New York hotel, has been cataloguing the left-behinds of both sexes for some time now, and men, she says, "are awfully forgetful."

"They leave shirts, neckties, pyjama tops, false teeth. They even leave bottles of gin; not very good gin, usually. Once we found a quart of elegant cognac."

Since the time when Miss Pizzi has noticed that men have started writing back to have their things forwarded. "Women always have sent for the things they left, but men never used to bother," she said.

"The most unusual thing I ever knew that got left behind was a baby," said Y. A. Price, manager of another hotel. "However, the woman who left it also left the address of her husband from whom she was separated."

BEST FAIR IN YEARS OPINION EXPRESSED

Belleville Fair Closes In Blaze of Glory And Well Ahead

ALREADY PLANNING

Mistakes of This Year Will Be Rectified In Next Year's Show

Belleville's 1933 Fair is ended. A good job has been well done and carried out without a hitch. Fair officials are taking their first breathing spell in weeks, are enjoying a lull in the busy round of hectic last minute details and the strenuous work of weeks ahead. A distinct sigh of relief was heard in the office on the afternoon the last act was concluded in the grandstand Friday evening.

To say that officials of the Fair Board are well pleased with this year's effort would be making a mild statement. Visitors have said this fair had topped all records for exhibits, attractions and well managed details. Those who have been responsible for its success, which means every man connected with the air dome from the president to the gate keeper, are ready to agree, although modestly, that there are many days while not officially checked as yet is reported to be a highly satisfactory. Finances are believed to be in excellent condition. Unpaid accounts have been kept at a minimum. A keynote of satisfaction has been evident throughout.

But those who worked hard to put this fair across are not content to rest on their laurels of satisfactory achievement. They still see where even this fair could have been bettered, and with this experience to guide them will strive to make the 1934 fair better yet.

BOLT KILLS 3 IN BOOTH

Over 20 Take Refuge In Cold Drink Stand From Rain

Cabot, Ark., Sept. 2 (AP)— Three persons were killed and eight injured when lightning struck a cold drink stand here early today. The dead are George Snyder, 35, Little Rock; Cecil Pickard, 30, Cabot, and Earl Sneed, 20, Cabot.

The bolt struck the building a few minutes after a crowd of approximately 20 persons had sought shelter from a heavy rain.

Some of the injured were burned when the shock exploded a gas lamp hanging in the building.

Physicians, who treated the injured said all would probably recover.

The three men killed were burned badly, their clothing are almost torn their shoes torn from their feet.

Several other persons in the building at the time were shocked but stunned so they could not render aid.

FAIR FIGURES NOT TOTALED

Attendance During Week Higher Than Last Year

Figures had not yet been given today for total attendance at the Belleville Fair, but the gate at the Belleville Fair, and computation of the attendance for the last days at attendance on Friday had not yet been made up to a late hour. Total attendance however is believed to be far reaching a highly gratifying mark.

"We have been up terribly busy here in the office, that we just haven't had time to check them up", stated Mr. A. C. Dafoe, Treasurer, when questioned today. "Most of us working until two o'clock right here in the office this morning, so you see we haven't had much time. We'll have them the first of next week. Friday's attendance will be better than Thursday's.

Despite the fact, that officials of the Board with Mr. Dafoe labored far into the night and morning on the work, the majority of them were back after a short rest to work throughout the day Saturday.

160,000 NAZI VOW LOYALTY

Hitler Sees Future of Germans Assured For 1000 Years

Nuremberg, Germany, Sept. 2 (AP) —Brown-uniformed political organizers of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's Nazi party, to the number of 160,000, stood shoulder to shoulder in Nuremberg's largest meadow today and vowed anew their unflinging loyalty to the leader and the movement.

We found the key which, for all time, will close the door to our enemies," the Chancellor assured them.

"This meeting is a visible demonstration of the result of our fourteen years' fight. The party has become a state. Now our duty is to educate every German to be a citizen of this German state.

"You must form an iron front encompassing every German. We plan that we will never here two revolution. So will we meet 10, 100, and 1,000 years hence.

"Those new political organizers will continually emerge the nation's leaders on a selective principle."

The assembled brown shirts were not storm troopers, but represented the elite of political strategists.

From each local unit of the party the chief organizer and his ten most trusted co-workers who joined the party before 1930 were allowed to come to the Nurnberg parley.

CAR THROWN BY TRAIN INTO ANOTHER CAR

Three Killed and Three More Likely to Die in Crash

Oakland, Calif., Sept. 2 (AP)— Three persons were killed and seven others injured, three perhaps fatally as a Southern Pacific train struck an automobile at a crossing here early today and hurled it against another machine.

Those killed were Mrs. Eva Getchell, 38; Mrs. Elsie Steffins, 45, and Kenneth Steffins, 12, her son, all of San Francisco.

The most seriously injured were the husbands of the two women, Harry Getchell, 41, and Henry Steffins, 48. A. J. Vanderburg, 60, of Berkely, flagman on duty at the crossing.

NEW GOVERNMENT IN NOVA SCOTIA TUESDAY

Resignation of Former Government Accepted on Friday.

Halifax, Sept. 2 (CP)—Angus L. Macdonald, Liberal premier-designate will assume control of Nova Scotia's political affairs Tuesday, Premier Gordon S. Harrington's resignation was in the hands of Lieutenant-Governor Covert Friday night, and his successor stood ready to enter office with his incoming administration.

Lieutenant-Governor Covert accepted the resignation Friday afternoon yesterday, after calling upon Premier-elect Macdonald to form the government as soon on Tuesday. The latter was suggested by Premier Harrington, whose government will continue in office until the transfer of power.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 2 (CP) — Marion Fraura, 4, alleged bank robber whose break for libertyat Hamilton jail a week ago resulted in the suspension of one acting turnkey and the fining of another, was committed for trial today by Magistrate H. A. Murbridge on a charge of escaping legal custody.

Cattle Disease Halts War of Salisbury Plain

London, Sept. 2 (C.P. Cable)— An outbreak of foot and mouth disease among cattle of the district has checked the "Battle of Salisbury." Fifteen thousand troops encamped on Salisbury Plain for the annual manoeuvres' today were forbidden to leave the highways and while certain marching went on no dogs were allowed with the colonnes.

BOBBY PEARCE PRO SCULLER OF THE WORLD

Defeats Phelps, Title-Holder, By Quarter-Mile In Three

300 POWERFUL

Australian Wins Race In First Quarter-Mile of Conest

By ELMER DULMAGE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, September 2.—(CP)— Henry Robert (Bobby) Pearce, sculling's first wonder man since Ned Hanlan, held the world's championship for professionals today and with the cry to gold stores, that only a Pearce can open, Big Bob from Australia routed Ted Phelps, defending champion, with a quarter-mile defeat here last night in their titular contest.

The great man of the amateurs, never extended since he came out of obscurity in 1928 to win his first Olympic championship, pulled out ahead of the pros with a triumphant sweep of his oars, that left the sculling universe away behind.

Over a three-mile course laid inside the Lake Ontario breakwater of the Canadian National Exhibition, Pearce ran away from Phelps, making his third defence of the title he won in 1930. A crowd of 45,000 saw the contest. Bobby

WINNING NUMBERS ARE ANNOUNCED

The drawing for the guest tickets to the Belle Theatre, sponsored by the manager, George Fenton, took place on Friday evening at the Belle Theatre booths in the Memorial Arena building at the Fair grounds, Ella Worship, Mayor Tice making the draw. The first prize ticket number 4630, entitles the holder to tickets for two to the Belle for one month. Ticket number 2068 entitles the holder to two tickets for two weeks while tickets number 1987, 4064, 2843, 4008 entitle holders to one admission, the holders of the winning numbers should present themselves to Manager Forbes at the earliest possible moment. So popular was the drawing that over 4000 tickets were handed out during the Fair period.

BASKET PICNIC ON LABOR DAY

In conjunction with the South End Athletic aquatic program to be held on Monday, Labor Day, at Victoria Park, the Belleville Liberal Association is holding a basket picnic and sports program, which will include a softball tournament for girls for a home and home series, put on by Dr. J. A. Faulkner. Special prizes for the children's races will be announced on the grounds. Every one is invited to bring along the picnic basket and enjoy the entertainment and also visit the aquatic sports that the South End A. C. have sponsored. It should be a rip roaring time for the newly formed club, which has done so much to advance water sports in the city this year.

SOUTH END A. C. TO STAGE PROGRAM

The South End Athletic Club who have revived water sports in the city this year are staging a monster program on Monday, Labor Day with free admission to Victoria Park. In the afternoon a series of swimming races will be held and also rowing races for the members, and canoe races open to all. In the afternoon a series of sailing races will be held at this place and later the greasy pole competition will be held. A fancy diving program will be carried out and the complete feature will be surf board riding. The club has worked hard on this program and expect it to be the biggest one pulled off in the city in years.

OFFERS ADVICE ON FAIR ROADS

A well known citizen commented on the presence of stones on the walks on the fair grounds.

"Some complaints have been heard regarding the numerous rough stones about the Agricultural Park grounds interfering with strolls around the Midway between the various buildings and along by the animal sheds. Considerable employment could be furnished by having those annoying obstructions raked off for the benefit, too, of pedestrians and baby carriage pushers."

FOXBORO WINNERS IN PLAY-OFFS

Foxboro—A very large crowd attended the ball game on Friday evening, when Foxboro and Thurlow played an interesting game as it was to decide who would win the cup donated by W. W. Connor, M.P., and great enthusiasm was manifested when the announcement was made that Foxboro were the winners.

MME. HALE MILLER AT FASHION SHOW

An important announcement was made this morning by the Kiwanis Club Carnival Committee, and it is to the effect that they have secured the most outstanding style creator in Canada to conduct the Fashion Show for Kiwanis Carnival, which will be staged next week in the Armouries.

It was only after a great deal of effort that the services of Madame Hale Miller were secured for this show—it is at present directing and directing the Fashion Show at the Toronto Exhibition. However it is now definitely assured that Madame Miller will be here and she will give to the people of Belleville a replica of the splendid show she is now putting on in Toronto. Madame Miller will be in charge of the Fashion Show from the opening to the closing of the Carnival and will be present each night in person to describe and comment on the fashions displayed.

FINE SPECIMEN OF GLADIOLI SEEN

Grown in his extensive gladioli gardens on his home on Grover Street, Picton highway, Mr. James Halliday this morning brought to the office of the Ontario Intelligencer a fine specimen of the summer queen of gladioli. The spike is 52 inches in height, the foliage perfect and fourteen blooms and buds are borne on it.

OBITUARY

WILSON HARLOW

Stirling, Sept. 2—(Special)—One of Stirling's oldest and most prominent residents passed away on Friday morning at the Belleville General Hospital in the person of the late Wilson Harlow. Mr. Harlow has been sick for some time, and about a week ago underwent a successful operation for a serious internal ailment. A second operation was necessary however, and was performed on Friday morning. Mr. Harlow apparently stood the operation very well but suddenly took a turn for the worst and died within a few minutes. Only one daughter, Mrs. A. Bonter, and his wife survived when he passed away. While late Mr. Harlow was born in Ameliasburgh, consession of Rawdon years ago, the son of the late George and Jane Spice (Pughe) Harlow, and lived in that township till 13 years ago when he came to this village to make his home. He was a member of the Stirling United Church and a man well and favorably known throughout this vicinity. The sympathy of their many friends goes to those bereaved in this passing.

Surviving immediately are the widow, previous to marriage, Miss Izodema Ann Priory; one son, Warren of Stirling; and one two daughters (Myrtle) Mrs. Gilbert Thompson, of Rawdon, and (Alma) Mrs. Carman Presley of Stirling.

The funeral will be held Sunday from his late residence, to the Stirling United Church for service at 2.30 p.m. and interment made in the Stirling cemetery.

LATE JOSEPH S. DESHANE

Many friends and neighbors were Friday afternoon in attendance at the funeral of the late Joseph Stanley Deshane, which was held from the residence of his son, Harold Deshane, 31 Ridley street. The Rev. I. B. Naylor, pastor of the Tabernacle United Church conducted the service at the home and at the graveside in the Belleville Cemetery.

The late Mr. Deshane was proprietor of a taxi service and citizens of this city in life occupation acted as honorary bearers. William Hoyle, Charles Haight, Fred Horton, Ray Hamilton, Clayton Cronk and Jules H. Deniker.

Floral tributes:

Pillow, the family; basket, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Davidson; wreaths, Granddaughters, Dorothy and Thelma, Mrs. S. Smith and family, Taxi Drivers and Charles Haight; double wheel, Belleville Taxi Service; wheels, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hibbard, Mr. and Mrs. O. Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mattis and George Imbach, Daniel De Shane and family, Mr. and Mrs. Hibbard and family, Mrs. R. J. Brooks and family, Bell Telephone Company employees, Messrs. Lester and Sons, Mr. and Mrs. J. Noakes and family, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Hall, Mr. Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. J. Rigby, Mr. and Mrs. H. Iler and family, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Symons, Mrs. and Mrs. A. W. Rowland and family.

BEST FAIR IN YEARS

Mr. R. M. Mitchell, president of the Fair Board, when questioned, said he felt elated over the success this year.

Everyone Helped.

"Every man has worked hard to make it a success and I am glad that we have succeeded. Next year is Belleville's turn and we will do better as we go along. The exhibits from the Trenton and Stirling Merchants and manufacturers in this district, as well as the farmer exhibits from Hastings district helped us nobly in making this fair one of the best. The crowds have been shown during the last few days by the manufacturers and are connected with the fair, but we will have lots of help next year to make it a bigger success than ever and it will be our aim."

Start For Next Year.

First vice-president H. B. Stock declared himself eminently satisfied with the success of the past four days, and particularly with the attendance which had been offered the visitor. "Next year's fair appears to be a long way off, but it will start, but within a very short time you may depend on it that work will be commenced in earnest. Next year better than this one. All that I am afraid of is that we cannot better the performances in front of the grand stand. It would be hard to find anything better than that which has been offered this year."

Mr. Aselstine, the vice-president declared that exhibitors as well as visitors were highly pleased with the results of this year's successful fair. "Naturally we are not pleased with the results, but we won't be able to rest here. Generally the board commences work on the fair two or three months before opening day, but this coming year we started even earlier, and keep right at it until the last day. Everyone who is connected with the board this year has done his utmost to ensure a bigger and better fair than ever. We have been very successful, but this is only a start. The buildings which have always been a very difficult proposition to keep in good work this year for the committee, but we have had a lot of support from the manufacturers and merchants and I'd like to take the occasion to thank them for their co-operation. Without that it would have been much harder. The falling off was apparently for the decline in attendance at the fair on the last day was the lack of interest of the exhibitors manage to take their exhibits away before the closing hour. This year they have not done so, but have left everything in place. That has helped a lot."

Secretary Enthusiastic.

Secretary Arthur Meighen, H. Kelchson, was of the same opinion as fellow executive regarding next year's fair. "This one has been a good one, and apparently every one has been satisfied. Exhibitors as well as visitors have commended the board on the improvements this year. It has meant a lot of work getting it across, but now that the job is finished and has been a job that is well done, workers will have a slight vacation and then start in commence work on next year's bigger and better one".

At chairman of attractions and publicity, J. J. Symons had this to say: "Certainly well'ly it two have next year's fair larger and better than this one. The whole committee in charge of attractions is perfectly satisfied with the class of performances that have been given every day in front of the grand stand and we have received many glowing reports from fellow members of the board regarding it. However, next year we hope to have an even better performance and added to this will be something which will liven the whole program up. A number of clowns or tumblers could fill the bill. Don't give me the credit for the attractions that have been brought here. Without the help of the whole committee consisting of Mr. L. E. Walmsley, H. Stock, E. Finkle and R. E. Colling, I wouldn't have been able to do very much."

ONT-INTELL NEWSBOYS GUESTS OF CONKLIN SHOWS AT FAIR

Sixty Carriers Had Time of Their Lives On The Rides

Nearly sixty regular carriers of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer could tell you it was!

They were guests Friday evening of Jack Conklin, manager of Conklin's All-Canadian Shows now playing for the last day, Saturday, Labor Day and evening at the Fair Grounds. It was a healthy, lusty turnout, which spooked no interference or delay in visiting the many attractions and rides, which were all free.

Reminiscent of a game of follow-the-leader, with Gosling Bill Wright of the show, who handled the details at the head, in a whirlwind activity the ride guests and the larger ones, invaded the grounds early in the evening, and bowed less and pop-eyed at the strangest exhibits in the country, laughed and shouted at the funny antics of the performers in other attractions, flocked with genuine delight on the various rides and the big merry-go-round, and ended one solid hour and half of fun with a rousing cheer for the one who had made it possible.

"Aw, gee, quit your shovin' and lemme see." That was the theme song of the evening, although a few girl carriers were present with their white tickets issued by the Ontario Intelligencer as a badge of identification. It was typically a boys' time and the girls were left out of it.

"All set, boys and girls!" asked Mr. Wright.

Straight to the Ferris Wheel they headed for the stimulating exercise that lurid attraction was recommended for. Two carloads of seats were filled. High up into the air revolved the cheering sky riders. Screams again. Off again. On again. Then time the Caterpillar. A mad scramble for seats. Bigger boys held back while smaller boys and girls were young room. Then away again. Next the Whirl-a-Whirl, a breath-taking ride. One small boy holds back. "What's the matter, son?" queries Bill Wright, on the job to see that all got a ride and a look in.

"Might make me sick." responded the boy, who stood watching his friends ride in the various seats.

"Bras-saa-ack! Frraidy cat!" came the jeering chorus from the seated boys who had heard the remark. Off again on a dizzy, bumpy whirl. More rides of breath-taking character, but all enjoyable.

Then the side shows. Monkeys who ran races on a circular track; with little electric autos; an intelligent pony, who could do all manner of tricks; trained dogs and more monkeys. And a barker used to give them all the applause they needed. Another side show of strange wonders. Fat Lady and Judy Show. A man, eating fire. Picking dollar bills out of coat sleeves. No end of fun!

It's the usual custom for the owner of Conklin's Shows to invite the news carriers for one free night at each city. Thousands of children all over Canada have enjoyed the privilege.

"There is one thing I have noticed tonight," commented Mr. Wright, who had conducted the happy party thru the last side show on the grounds. "We have hundreds of children in hundreds of cities, but I don't think we have ever had any as well behaved as this lot in Belleville. The contrast is quite noticeable."

"Stay as long as you like," he urged before he left them.

And did the kids have fun? Three rousing cheers which split the air in the largest show on the grounds where the sight-seeing news carriers were left shortly after 9 o'clock showed that they had!

CHEESE BOARD!

Offerings on the Belleville Cheese Board Saturday morning amounted to 1630 boxes and all sold at 9½ cents, an advance of ½ cents over the price of a week ago.

21 COMPETE IN SCOUTS ACROSS-THE-LAKE SWIM

Interesting Acquatic Event At Stirling Most Successful

Stirling—The inauguration of the annual across-the-lake swim open to the Stirling Boy Scout Troop took place Monday night at Oak Lake at 6 p.m. and when official Starter Earl Lewis sounded the gong, twenty-one Scouts took the water for the mile swim from the northern shore of the lake to Bird's beach. The temperature of the water was good for the event and the cool surface of the lake, comparatively placid.

Contestants in the race included the three classes, junior, intermediate and senior and the close of the race disclosed the junior class, thirteen years and under, well represented in the prize-winning column. Some two hundred interested spectators gathered to witness the event and those among them who had ever watched the marathon swim at the Toronto Exhibition must have been reminded of the latter as the little fleet of twenty-five boats following the contestants made their way out of the west across the beautiful sunlit waters of Oak Lake.

Mr. Chris. Holmes of Belleville was on hand to witness the event, taken of the plunge and swim at its different stages. These movies will no doubt be shown at the grandstand in the Stirling Theatre to enable those who were unable to witness the swim itself, to see it on the screen.

Nineteen of the twenty-one contestants finished the race with the other two being forced out of the water at the completion of approximately half the course.

The first two winners fought out a real battle all through the race and the finish was a beautiful stroke of Billie Long, the thirteen-year-old champion, barely holding on to victory over the second place lad, Jack Potter, by a few inches but less effective stroke. Frank Butler came in a close third and fourth were winners, Bud Bailey, finished in less than fifteen minutes each.

The prize for best style, as awarded according to the opinion of six reputable judges, went to Lobbie Lucey, age 11 years, who negotiated the course with but the arm movement, but rather in the foot action, in which latter, many were deficient. As an instance that speed was not quite needed to the first three winners alone, the next five contestants passed the finish line within twenty minutes' time. It was unfortunate that the duration of the race was rendered less effective when the left pier, crowded with some fifty spectators, crowded into the water on the one side, gently rolling in a number of the more interested onlookers into the lake.

At the conclusion of the swim the Boy Scout Standard and the Union Jack was laden with the prizes, from which Scout Master Tom Ward called the gathering to order, and Rev. Wesley Wm. C. Reeve to make an address and the presentation of the prizes. Rev. Mr. C. E. Dobbs was likewise called upon to present the Senior prizes. Rev. A. E. Dedley, the junior prizes while Mr. Chas. P. Linn made the presentation of the special awards.

The event was a real success and citizens of Stirling and surrounding district are saying "hats off" to Tom Ward, the Scout Master, who was the silent power behind the scenes who put it over as no other undertaking of the kind has ever been put over in a similar manner in Stirling.

The following are the winners in the different classes and when they finished:

THRIFT SEEN IN SPENDING

Large Deposits Maintained In Penny Bank System

The penny bank of Ontario is playing no small part in the return to normalcy, J. H. Hillgartner, the Provincial Bank Inspector in the regular report, says:

"Many are the agencies advocated for effecting a return to normalcy in the economic world. Some of them are designed to improve commerce, others to help agriculture, others to aid governments. But none of them reach the masses of men and women as directly as does the practice of personal thrift.

"Thrift means good management of one's income,—wise spending, and regular saving. Penny Bank deposits and withdrawals giving as they do a cross-section of a large number of daily transactions, indicate that the people are resolutely seeking both prudence, and necessary, the number of withdrawals through out the province has been great; the money is needed for the purchase of essential. But the amounts of withdrawals have decreased, showing greater care in the spending of money for non-essentials.

"It is gratifying to see the large number of deposits maintained throughout the difficult months, — an undeniable evidence that the people are determined to save even small sums where such saving is possible. The accompanied list of schools, 80 per cent or over of the pupils made deposits each month during April, May and June.

King George School	66
Queen Victoria School	32
Queen Mary School	27
Albert Edward School	25

The total amount on deposit at the end of June, 1933, in Belleville was $8185.17.

Comparative figures of a year ago were $8185.17.

MARKET PAUSE TEMPORARY?

Trends Not Yet Clearly Defined Until Next Week

(By John L. Cooley)

New York, Sept. 2 (AP)—A gain in consumer buying is indicated and with the government's inflationary powers as potent weapons for use whenever necessary, there is every trust that the pause noted in recent weeks will prove temporary.

The week was uneventful in the stock market, which reflected the pause, with the week end's suspension as well as a willingness to go slow until post-Labor Day trends could be defined.

Wonderful companions and true friends are dogs. "Love me, love my dog"—is a very true saying as it is true regarding many people—they would rather they were absent than their dog—they have an affection for it which is very real and it matters not if it be a pure-bred pedigree or a mongrel, as long as it is truly dog it is a "good dog." Children love dogs, and they said to be a good idea to let them have a dog to romp and play with them. Now that the holidays are over and the children will be returning to school for a large part of the day there will be many lonesome dogs in every city, town, village and hamlet in the land. People, of course, have their preference in dogs—some like one breed and some another—some like them large, some medium and some small. In the small breed of dogs the Pekingese is very popular and to this end, now puppies of this breed may be bought from George Deline, 150 Front street. The Pekingese puppies which Mr. Deline owns are registered and pedigreed—if you see them you probably will not be able to resist the temptation to buy one and take it home immediately.

er, by quarter-mile in three mile contest at C.N.E. Friday.

Vacation time is now about over —the summer is almost past and preparations are being made for the handling of the increase in business which the fall generally brings. Heads of business concerns and their employees have in most instances enjoyed a vacation and now with renewed energy they are back at their posts anxious to accomplish something worth while. Without preparation it is difficult to make headway. This is a fact which should be carefully considered by young men and young women who hope to obtain positions in the business world—they must prepare themselves to enter business and they must keep on preparing themselves in order to win and hold success. Going in search of a position without having been trained to perform certain duties is generally a most discouraging undertaking, but when one has received a business education such as is given at the Ontario Business College in Belleville, the chances of securing a place are much better. This business college has an enviable reputation for the success of its graduates in many parts of the world—it is famed for the superiority of its courses. Students may enter at any time and commence courses preparing them for positions as accountants, bookkeepers, secretaries and stenographers.

PRESENTED WITH GIFTS PREVIOUS TO DEPARTURE

Rawdon.—Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lindsay attended service at Burnbrae Presbyterian Church on Sunday, the guest of Mr. D. A. McKendry, it being her first visit to the district since the day farewell, and they spent the day with Mrs. Lind's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Holmes.

The many friends of Rev. and Mrs. McKenzie tendered them a farewell evening recently on the premises and they were presented with a beautiful electric floor lamp and a purse of money. Rev. McKenzie resigned owing to ill-health.

The Misses Ethel and Neva Hagerman spent last week in Belleville the guest of their uncle, Mr. Joe Hagerman.

On Wednesday evening of last week a softball game was staged at the home of Mr. Ernest White, the two captains being Alfred Powell and Harold White, the latter winning by a score of 21-15. The line-up was as follows: No. 1—Harold White, Taye Andrews, Percy White, Wilbert Baker, Herb Higgs, Orwin Sharp, Merle Sharp, Ernest White. No. 2—Alfred Powell, Wilfred Shaw, Marguerite White, Raymond Mach, Eileen McMullen, Lorne Clement Scott.

Mrs. A. Hall is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Charley Morgan.

Mrs. Dostaler of Shannonville spent a day last week with her sister, Mrs. Warren Weldon.

Mrs. Addie Wallace of Toronto who has been holidaying with her cousin, Mrs. Frank Hutchinson for the past few weeks is returning home the last of this week.

Mr. Clifford Holmes received word on Saturday that he had been successful in passing all of his high school. Clifford will return to High School next week and try for his normal entrance.

Mrs. Frank Parsons, Ashley Dale, Bill Adey and Harold Hagerman left on Tuesday morning to attend the Exhibition in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Holmes and children of Whitby spent last Thursday visiting the former's brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes.

Misses Norma and Wanda Minkington have been holidaying with Miss Laura Brandworth.

Mrs and Mrs. James Linn were guests of Mrs. W. G. Pitman, Bloomfield, on Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Strawbridge spent Sunday with the former's sister, Mrs. Edith Sharp, at Wellman's.

Mrs. Robert Emmerson visited at the home of his niece, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Linn, on Tuesday.

On Tuesday evening the village folks on the fourth line staged a ball game at the home of Mr. Percy MacMullen. The leaders were Percy White and Cornel Mackett. Percy won and the game tied with a score of 25-25. The line-up was: No. 1—Percy White, Lorne White, Eileen MacMullen, Marie Sharp, Mackett and the game tied with a score of 25-25. PROPITIOUS WEATHER

The weather has been good-behavioured during the past four days, good-behavioured from the standpoint of the fair, but perhaps not so favorable as could be late crops. Anyhow it has not rained to dampen the hopes for the fair.

Rarely, has there been an exhibition which has been so surrounded with favorable circumstances. Good exhibits and entertainment can go far but the weather can mar and turn a success into a financial failure.

What the weather has been worth to the fair, directors know.

AN ANCIENT FIREARM

Mr. Frank Smith, of Madoc, possesses a military gun which saw service in the War of 1812 even though it was then fifty-seven or fifty-eight years old. Surely this fact indicates how slowly the modern rifle developed. The last century has seen marvellous developments in the type and design of firearms as it has in everything else which can be manufactured.

There is one point of certainty—there were few guns made of the type carried by George Smith, great-grandfather of Frank Smith when he served against the United States nearly a century and a quarter ago. Today modern military rifles are numbered by the millions and are little valued, but a gun of the age and type owned by Mr. Smith is a rarity and hence of great value.

When Mr. Smith looks upon this gun he can see in his mind's eye the vast changes which have taken place since that weapon was manufactured. Before Britain swept French control out of North America and before the American colonies of Britain revolted, this gun had been made ready for use. After the great Seven Years' War, which broke out a year after the manufacture of the weapon, came the U. S. Revolution, then the trek of the Loyalists, then the War of 1812, then the long days following the Napoleonic struggle, and all the great events of the nineteenth century in the liberal world, the industrial revolution, development of machinery, and the first third of the twentieth century which is in a turmoil which will have a future no one can yet visualize so rapidly events are moving.

If this gun escapes being destroyed by fire or being lost it will watch many generations pass, new ideas come, new inventions come and go.

In such a frame of mind one might wonder what would a museum think if it could think!

Mr. Smith is rich in the possession of this treasured firearm which his progenitor carried so long ago in the service of his king.

LABOR DAYS

The turn of the year has come with the advent of September and Labor Day, and the reopening of the schools. It is the season of work which has opened up. In church and in school as well as in business and it is hoped in industry there will be that activity which can truly be called labor. Refreshed from the holidays which have built up mind and body, the time has come for work.

It is significant that the Government of Canada feels that there should be a day set apart as Labor Day. But, undoubtedly, the full significance of it has not yet been realized. Labor in ordinary conversation is considered in this age as referring particularly to the physical work done in manufacturing plants or in unskilled labor. But labor should be made to mean all human effort. There can be no true division.

The man who rushes from the world today calls not for a sedative which only allows trouble to quiet down to break out afresh, but for changes of outlook and attitude, for the expansion of the true sense of human brotherhood. Most men believe in progress and there has been progress in the solution of labor and capital problems though there remains much yet to be accomplished. This progress will continue though it may never reach the ideal state, which perhaps cannot even be glimpsed at this stage in the world's history.

An example of the slowness with which evils are removed is indicated in the fact that President Roosevelt had to stipulate in his NRA program that there was to be no child labor. Who would think that little lives would not have to be protected by law in this age, but it is true that there are such sweatshops and a social condition which allowed them.

But with the poet man believes there is a good time coming with human brotherhood leading the way to an understanding of human needs.

Those who come back to the resumption of their duties this week-end can in their own spheres help to usher in this improved era.

Rest is not quitting the busy career; rest is the fitting of itself to its sphere.—J. Dwight.

THE FERRYMAN OF GLENORA

(By Wallace Havelock Robb, of Abbey Dawn)

O Ferryman take me over the bay,
O Ferryman carry me over;
Glenora's mill has the most of a fay,
Where the U. E. Loyalists hover.

Peaceful and old, at the foot of the steep,
O Ferryman, cross with me over;
Unreal with a past that lies quaintly asleep
Where the shades of the pioneers wander.

I'd paysden tolls just for climbing yon hill
And for viewing the land with its plenty;
And my grist you would bring o'er the Quinte.

Oh, Ferryman, I'll retŕn on a day,
And I'll call and you'll straightaway come over,
When Adolphustown see all in clover.

ADEPT AT STEALING WATER from the international waterways, Chicago has gone one better—having no land available in which to place the Exposition the Chicagoites calmly appropriated 427 acres of Lake Michigan, filled it in and placed their 1933 World's Fair thereon. Not content with that they have appropriated great chunks of sky space for the "Amos and Andy Sky Rides" and other aerial attractions. Great folks those Chicago waterlifters.

REV. ARCHDEACON BEAMISH, Rector of St. Thomas Anglican Church, Belleville, and his estimable wife, have been renewing old acquaintanceships here, after a short absence of several days during which the Archdeacon has been engaged in special work for the Church of England abroad. This work has meant residence in London, England, for considerable time. It also residence in Ostend, Belgium; Rome, Italy, and other places. The Archdeacon and Mrs. Beamish were warmly greeted by a host of friends who regret that they will shortly return to the Old Country. In order to say farewell to as many of his friends as possible, and receive old associations within the historic walls of grand old St. Thomas, the Archdeacon will take morning service on Sunday with a special message of faith, and hope and confidence to the members and friends of St. Thomas Church.

UNCLE SAM proposes to spend seventy million dollars on improvements to navigation in order to divert all the waterborne traffic he can to Buffalo, Albany and New York, and get in ahead, if possible, of the great inland sea-going route from the Great Lakes to the sea. Seventy million dollars isn't much to Uncle Sam, when he says it quick, but, my marine friend tells me: "We can blow h—l out of the Narrows for fifty thousand dollars, and this would give a channel to the docks right up to Belleville." Belleville Commerce Crusaders propose to make Belleville a seaport at the earliest possible opportunity. Get on the wagon citizens of the progressive sort, citizens with a vision, who believe in working for the advancement of Belleville and tomorrow and so far into the future as the eye can see.

AT THE CORNER of Front and Bridge Streets, Thursday afternoon—Toronto motorist speaking to Bellevillian—"I have looked in vain on the buildings of these two fine streets and I can't find a sign, but can see no sign of the name of the streets intersecting here. You home folks know them but those of us passing through would also like to know what you call your principal streets."

MICKEY MOUSE, Walter Disney's creation for the silver screen, bids fair to threaten the laurels of flesh and blood masterpieces. Mickey Mouse's presentation of "Noah's Ark" won four stars, the highest mark of quality given by a noted million-circulation magazine. Now comes Mickey Mouse's Gala Premier which cartoons Hollywood's higher-ups in a manner making delightful, hearty laugh-creating entertainment, even as George Arliss joins the Mickey Mouse cartoon parade. Charlie Chaplin, the Four Marx hysterics, Greta Garbo, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, and everybody else of the Hollywood headliners. SO, dat's two strikes for Mickey Mouse—another strike and the other fellows will be sure out. Manager George Kahan of the Belle Theatre, says Mickey Mouse is sure enough a "best seller."

HOW TO MAKE MAN OUT OF YOUR PROGENY

It Is Not Easiest Thing In World To Make Man Out of Son

By Leslie E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

It's not the easiest thing in the world to make a man out of your son. Indeed, it is an exceedingly difficult and often confounding job. For we tend to be lenient when it comes to ensuring our own flesh and blood. Added to that, there is another difficulty, the ego instinct in all of us, which prompts the feeling that our own sons are bound to be better and the next age.

Some boys are timid, shy, retiring, others are cold, domineering, daring, forward, aggressive. Upon the type of character your own son happens to possess depends the kind of bringing-up he should have.

At the outset every mother and father should settle in their own minds what kind of a man they want their boy eventually to be.

Although a mother in particular needs to make allowance for error, and is drawn by the closest of loving ties, for the boy's protection, she doubtedly redounds to his undoing. A boy requires a certain amount of roughage in the treatment accorded him, just as he requires it in the food that is to build powerful muscles and a sturdy frame.

A man's character rests largely upon his self-confidence, his fearlessness his determination to meet coming difficulties and his willingness, not only to play the game but hard. The aggressive personality surely has a better chance of success.

On the other hand, to make of one's darling "a mollycoddle" is one I may be pardoned the phrase, is not desirable either.

If a boy grows up caring only for comfortable things, for unenterprise fighting and the like, his aggressiveness is likely to be too pronounced, developing into pugnacity, quarrelsomeness, unwillingness and of fine feeling generally. He needs something to mellow his nature and to make him an understanding human being.

Attention should therefore be given in a boy's training to good literature, drama where the nobler emotions and their value to humankind, the finer ideals and tactics where restraint, refinement and considerations for others are exquisites.

Adverbs lavhys?s.

This mingling with other cultured individuals, which is indeed a necessity for every boy, no matter how young he may be, to mingle with the opposite sex and thus help to polish a boy and to smooth off the rough corners of his character. No boy, especially when he is an adolescent, can rub himself acceptable among the better class of girls unless he is polite. And surely this materialistic world of ours is in need of gentlemen, as well as ladies, as much as it is of anything else.

Developing a boy into manhood is a singularly gratifying duty. Few boys exist who will not respond to the higher values of life, even if they seem difficult and self-centered (in the beginning). Nor by can be reached, so to speak, and once you tap the boy nature, the primary side of his nature, one need have little worry about the rest.

The time to start a boy on the right road, however, is early, just as when he begins to talk and walk—the behavior habits that are set down then are never entirely eradicated.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Hot breads and pies have received a bad name, yet when bread is light and not soggy it is crisp, nutritious and delicious. Hot pie, neither is likely to produce digestive upsets if eaten slowly and with care. Pies, however, are better off eating very little pie and only cold bread, particularly when the latter is toasted or a little stale, because, in order to chew it into moisten it, the salivary glands are excited to flow freely.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

SEPT. 2, 1913

A terrible fire started in James Owen's livery stable on the rear of the New Queen's Hotel last evening shortly before eight o'clock which resulted in its complete destroying the stables and guiting the store of D. Phillips and the Temperance Hotel, both, of which are practically in ruins with the exception of the walls. How the fire originated is not known but as far as can be ascertained, while Mr. Owens was absent from the barn for a few moments the fire suddenly started and almost instantly the building was a mass of flames. Fortunately the horses were out and after hard work much of the harness was saved. The occupants of the Temperance Hotel became busy throwing bedding and furniture from the front street windows, the fire gradually work towards them. The wires were cut, finally cut leaving the place in darkness, the flames almost illuminating the interior making a fantastic scene, beautiful yet terrible to behold. On waged the firemen, assisted by citizens and running in hidden streets and in a few half hours' frantic work the fire was completely controlled. The Temperance Hotel was owned by Mr. Albert Adams, Mr. Owens had been in business but a few month. Mr. Wm. Arnold did gentleman service during the progress of the fire and got a bad burning on his arm and left. On the third floor of the Royal Queen's Hotel a number of bedrooms were occupied by ladies. The greatest fear was so dense that it filled the rooms, but to an extent that life was endangered. These ladies were all rescued by Mr. Arnott, one of the hotel guests, overcome by smoke. As site o'clock this morning and again at seven o'clock the fire brigade was called out to the smouldering embers rekindled by the breeze threatening to do further damage. Chief Chas. Queen's men have proved upon the scene of the fire until 10 o'clock, thus making in all six hours' fight.

30 YEARS AGO

SEPT. 2, 1903

Rev. Chas. A. Hanson who thirty years ago was assistant pastor of the Bridge Street Methodist Church in this city, left Saturday for Montreal to London partner of Coates, Son and Company, which has been officially adopted as the Unionist candidate and supported of Mr. Chamberlain in the London division, Cornwall.

Mr. Sandbanks is in Toronto on business.

Mr. Frank Doyle is home from New York on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Doyle, Alexander street.

Mr. Albert Vandervoort is spending his holidays in Toronto and Buffalo.

Mr. J. W. Thompson of Ingersoll is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Thompson, Sinclair street.

After a careful search nothing has been missed from the residence of Mr. J. W. Johnson, Victoria Avenue, which was broken into recently during the absence of the family from the city.

The pay for the members of the 15th Battalion who compsed the Governor General's guard of honor during his visit here, has arrived and may be obtained from Capt. Gerow.

40 YEARS AGO

SEPT. 2, 1893

Mr. F. O. Lockett and family have returned to the city from Bancroft, where they spent the summer.

Mr. F. C. Powell, curate of St. Thomas' Church, sailed on Aug. 31st from England for Canada.

Mr. Wm. Sproston has been appointed clerk illuminating the Grand Chief of the Sons of Scotland, Dr. Bell, Belleville, representing Hastings, Prince Edward Lennox and Addington and Frontenac.

Mrs. Poston today surveyed the lots on Victoria Avenue, which Mr. Horace Yeomans by the City Belleville and Mrs. Adams. Coleman street from the lower bridge to Hungerford's property. The deed was made over today. The price of the land was $400.00.

Mr. W. L. Bridger of the Dominion Express Co. at Toronto, has received instructions to proceed to Toronto to take charge of the express office at the Industrial Exhibition.

The Sandbanks Hotel was closed yesterday for the season.

50 YEARS AGO

SEPT. 2, 1883

Messrs. W. Hudson, Geo. Teale, W. Fralic and W. Logan have arrived—home after a trip to the Old Country. They report having had an enjoyable trip.

Last night about 10 o'clock the fiercest of the season. It screeched about the city with scarcely a moment's waning and blew with great fury. Happily no damage of consequence was done.

A team of the Toronto Bowling Club and one representing the Belleville Bowling Club play here yesterday on the "green" on Campbell street to play a return match. The Belleville team are like curling in that there are "rinds" and "skips" and the latter give their orders as go those of a curling match. The game was witnessed by many citizens who like the Bowling Club game for the first time. The Belleville players won by fourteen shots The following are the players: Belleville rinks: E. F. Potts, John Hawke, J. Ashley, Jas. Ham; T. Kelso, J. Lawrie, J. Gordon, skip.

Opinions on the Curbstone

Miss Rose O'Neil, daring serialist of the Saturday Evening Post

"No, I'm never afraid or even think of danger when I'm up there. Up there is a tiny stand over one hundred feet above the ground with nothing beneath her but space and legend (Mrs.) Probably it is because I have a lot of confidence in myself. On windy nights, or when the aeroplane swoops in the air makes the steel work and trapeze rock considerably, I get used to a bit more careful, but in clear weather it isn't so bad. It does require steady nerves I suppose, but we are in constant training for the work, and keep in practice all the time. We have to. We can't afford to take any chances. We don't like accidents—signs of danger—we're all sure of ourselves—I'm not a little slip or the rigging or something else that we have to look out for and be careful of."

Johnny Crooks, the Human Cyclone

"You don't have much time to think about it in my stunt. Crashing head on at seventy miles an hour through a wooden wall on a motorcycle). It's all over before you have a chance to hesitate. Of course we take chances when we hit that wall, but speed because there is always the chance of some stray bigger splinter of wood striking you like a bayonet. However, if it does, it will be over very quickly. Our fingers get pretty well accustomed to the fact that there is absolutely no fear connected with the building of the wall. The thing is generally constructed on the grounds by local carpenters no matter where we are, and is certainly not a competition at any time. It takes lots and lots of practice—that's the secret. When I first started in I used to use comparatively thin walls of wood. Now I use full inch lumber bought from your own local yard."

Dolly, the Doll Lady—Smallest Mother and Babe Alive:

"No, I don't mind people staring at me so much, that's how I make my living. But I don't would only realize that I'm human' after all, and am normal in every other respect. If, for my size, they could make it a bit smaller for me. You have no idea the thoughtlessness of some people who 'pop' into the tents to get into the tent. Often the baby is trying hard to get some sleep when some one will come in and deliberately lean over and look at me to see if it's true, or something. Then, too, you have all the idea of the highly personal questions they ask. Things that they wouldn't dream of asking their husband's friends. I've got used to being stared at wherever they go, but when it comes to being stared at when I'm trying to work out my brains, then that's something different."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking, and thinking and ma said, Willyum here's a very good article by P. Willis Hinkle, I think it is, on the art of how fathers and sons and how they drift apart in the world, how degrees invisibly to the naked eye the boy and his father grow apart in spirit and understanding. I read it to me, will you?

And she handed him the evening paper open at the article and pop read it, saying, "There's some good stuff in this, my son," and then Benny, climb on my knees and I'll tell you a little story of something that happened to me when I was just your age only perhaps a little younger.

Yes sir, in a minute, pop. I'm just finishing this. Then I said and pop said, O, don't hurry by any means.

Benny did you hear your father say sometimes to you, the ideer, Benny?

Yes sir, here I am, pop. I said, Benny I went and sat on his lap and he said, Well old top, I was thinking I'd tell you a story, and the dooce have you been eating.

You guessed it ole, pop, I said. Me and Puds Simkins was in his kitchen and we made a experiment to see if you could both eat a great big raw onion and keep our expressions looking as if we thawt they was apples. and we did it perfect, I said, and pop said, well then your imagination has been stimulated enough for one day and I'll save my contribution, pew.

And he pushed me off with one hand on account of holding the other one over his nose, and I went and finished the funnies.

BISONS AND LEAFS CLASH ON MONDAY

Series Will Decide Which Team Will Enter Playoffs

BISONS DIVIDE

Leafs Defeat Rochester And Go 2½ Games Ahead

By ORLO ROBERTSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the opening of the four-game series that is expected to settle the battle between Toronto and Buffalo for a position in the playoffs, only two days way, the Maple Leafs today hold a 2½ game advantage over the Bisons. The series will open Monday in Toronto with a doubleheader. Single games will be played Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Maple Leafs, with 91 games to play, had broke even in their last contests; while the Bisons had won 75 and dropped 80 with 13 to go.

While the Bisons were breaking even in a night doubleheader with Montreal Royals, the Maple Leafs took a close decision from Rochester 4-3. Buffalo won the opening contest 7-4 behind the effective pitching of the veteran right hander, Bill Cogdill, but the Royals pounded three Bison pitchers hard in the second game to win 15-12.

In defeating Rochester, Luke Hamlin turned in his 20th victory of the year. The Wings got to him for nine hits but he was strong in the pinches. He also contributed a timely single that drove in the tying run in the sixth inning. Ira Smith was the losing pitcher and it was the first time he had lost a game to Toronto since Sept. 1, 1930, until yesterday, he turned back the Leafs 11 times.

Newark Bears won their 10th game in the last 11 starts in defeating Baltimore Orioles 8-3 in the final game of the series. Don Brennan held the Orioles to seven scattered hits while his mates nicked Melton for 11.

SOFTBALL

But three runs were scored in a hectic softball game played in the Central Park League at Coleman Flats last evening when the Firemen downed the Grilla Garage nine by the score of 2 to 1 to jump into the leadership of the league.

Jim "Cap" Smith was on the hill-top for the fire fighters and was returned winner over Earl Clarke, who labored for the "mechanics". Smith showed but four safe hits throughout the entire seven innings played while his team mates gathered seven hits from the deliveries of Clarke.

The game was one of the fastest and best played contests of the season, Monday evening sees another game in this post-season loop like it, and Brown, the only two to score for the Firemen while Haley crossed the plate for the losers.

Grilla Garage: Barriage, J., Barriage, G. Barriage, Caddick, While, Boyle, Latchford, Clarke, Haley and Ridley.

Firemen—Bennett, Cornell, Morgan, Blaker, Weir, Knott, Brown, Walsh and Smith.

Score by innings:

Then down off Victoria Park the South End A.C. are staging a monster aquatic meet on the holiday. As we stated yesterday all kinds and classes of water sports are included. Classes for all ages are also being prepared so, that the young as well as the old may enjoy themselves day's fun along the water front.

With the re-opening of the schools on Tuesday all eyes will be turned towards the collegiate football squad. Coach Loi Shiels expects most of his last year's champions back, while a few of last year's juniors are about ready to step up into the senior category. It looks like another real good football season for the B.C.I. gridders.

Following the Trenton-Belleville Bearcat game last evening neither club could seem to agree where the third inning and final game would be played. Manager Grant Ashley of the Riverside Daisy softball club tossed a coin to decide, where the game would be played. Manager Smith of the Riverside Daisy refused this suggestion and wanted to play at the Airport. As the Airport diamond is not an official O.A.A. park the locals refused. Everything was in somewhat of a quandry when the homesters suggested they get the locals a guarantee of $30.00 to play the game in Trenton. Manager Ashley, after consulting all angles, demonstrated, that he was the better sportsman and agreed.

One bad innings, the fourth when the Trentonians scored seven runs, was all that was needed to down the Bearcats. The Riversides hit the ball with the base paths populated, that's the answer to the entire game. As a matter of fact pitcher Loughlin had the local batsmen popping up throughout. The deciding game will be played at Trenton next Wednesday.

A new professional sculling champion will be crowned in Toronto last evening when Bob Pearce beat Ted Fleetz by the proverbial city block. Pearce has now won all of the major sculling championships. He entered the Diamond Sculls, the Olympic sculling title and now has the professional sculling scalp dangling at his belt.

The horse races at the fair were excellent despite belief the small purses would not attract the better class of horses. The horsemen were pleased with the arrangements and only one serious accident marred the program.

RIVERSIDES EVEN COUNT

Bearcats On Short End of 11-8 Count In Replay of Tie

Trenton, Sept. 2 (Special)—During a fourth inning batting rally the Trenton Riverside Daisy softball team evened the play-off series with the Delaney Bearcats of Belleville when they won a replay game of their recent 18-all tie, by the score of 11 to 8 here last evening.

The local red and white clan outlit hit the deliveries of George Jenkinson, the mound star for the Visitors, profusely in that hectic fourth frame, previous to which the visitors held sway. Once the locals assumed the leadership of the contest they settled away to play championship calibre softball. Pounding out one base blows with the base paths well populated accounted for the Trenton win.

Herb Chambers was manager Smith's choice to assume the local mound duty but following a home run by Hanna and a double by Murray Green in the fifth he was derricked in favor of Clem Coughlin, who stopped the Bearcat rallies. George Jenkinson hurled for the visitors and was touched for thirteen safe hits, including four doubles. The visitors led in extra base hits when Hanna hit for the circuit, a Tuttle cloaked a triple and four doubles were counted by the Bearcats. Alexander, the locals centre fielder, let all the flutters of the day with a double and two singles, while Frank Langdon counted two timely doubles, both coming with men on base.

Regional Open Scoring.

The Bearcats assumed the offensive in the initial frame when they counted three runs on three hits coupled with an error. They scored two more in the third and two in the fifth. Their last counter came in the sixth. The locals forged two in the fourth when 11 local batsmen faced Jenkinson, while the side was retired. Their final two runs coming in the sixth following three singles and a fielder's choice.

Ken Chambers, Steenburg, Coughlin and Alexander looked the best for the Daisies while the latter made ar star shone in the firmament for the Bearcats. The team summaries:

BERTHA PATCH WINS FEATURE

Free-For-All And 2.20 Class Gives Racing Fans Thrill

The curtain was rung down on the harness racing in this city for this year, when the last day's racing of the fair was concluded on Friday afternoon with a free-for-all and a 2.20 class as the offering. The fastest racing of the week was witnessed and the horse lovers viewed horses that have worlds of speed and can turn it on in bunches. Only one slight accident marred the racing although no one was injured but a bike was destroyed and the horse implicated was forced out of one heat. The accident served to show the real class of Billy Hugo, owned in Sarnia, who won the 2.20 class in three heats.

Bertha Patch, the big black mare from Brampton last year work out to head a bunch of "bearcats" in the free-for-all with Walter Stone, the old Grand Circuit campaigner, turning the chief opposition. Lou Bennett won the first heat in slow time but the next heat saw the drivers "turn it on" and a mile in 2.08 within one-quarter second of the track record was the result. The two horses finished noses apart with Direct Boy, a Western Canada horse, in close attendance. After this burst of speed, Bertha Patch held command and went on to win the race.

Billy Hugo was much too good for the pacers in the 2.20 class. In the second heat, Cigarette and Billy Hugo locked in a gruelling mile but bottom turn and Cigarette's bike was damaged and Billy Hugo was slowed down practically to a walk. Hot Shot Hanover set out after the leaders and at the head of the lane was in the thick of the fight and the little black mare tried to take Margaret Dillon through the wrath. The fans lamped one of the sweetest trotters it had been their privilege to see in some years in Margaret Dillon. She had a nice way of going and was steady and had a burst of speed that drew huge plause from the onlookers. Billy Hugo in the second mile heat turned wire to wire in 2.09½ with last half mile in 1.01¼. The summary:

Free-For-All, Purse $200.00

Bertha Patch, H. Hastings, Brampton	2 1 1 1
Walter Stone, L. Bennett, Port Hope	1 2 2 2

BRAVES SET BACK FOR TWO

Giants Win Twin Bill And Practically Cinch Pennant

(By Herbert W. Baker, Associated Press Sports Writer)

The battle for Boston was crucial only to the Braves today.

"Memphis Bill" Terry led a couple of pitching aces yesterday the Redskins couldn't trump. New York Giants swept both games of a double-header increased their National League lead to seven games and dropped the Braves into third place. A single percentage point behind the revived Pittsburgh Pirates.

Forty-eight thousand persons looked on with not a little gasp at first Carl Hubbell, lean master of the screwball, and then Fred Fitzsimmons, portly right hander, stopped the Braves' spectacular rush which many Boston fans hoped would lead to just such another pennant as George Stallings' "Miracle Man" achieved in 1914.

THE BIG SIX

By The Canadian Press

Once again it is necessary to go to four decimal places to decide the batting leadership of the International League. Ike Boone went into first place yesterday by .0100 per cent when he got one hit in three times up while Julius Solters was going hitless in four tries. In the general shuffle yesterday Ollie Tucker of Buffalo went from a fourth place tie to third position and Moose Clabaugh dropped to sixth.

The batting leaders:

Boone, Toronto	508	91	184	.3622
Solters, Bal.	480	115	177	.3620
Tucker Buffalo	478	96	161	.337
Thompson, Albany	416	61	139	.336
Mullaney, Buf.	533	118	180	.338
Clabaugh, Bal.	364	81	.109	.325

Spying on Sports

By William Ritt
Central Press Canadian

THE LATEST drps on the major league managerial situation has Lew Fonseca and Bucky Harris remaining at the helm of the two western American league teams.

For that, even those who live in Chicago and Detroit, should hear that with regret.

Both men really deserve another chance, another season to prove they can get the best out of the material afforded them. Max Carey of Brooklyn has been given another year in which to raise the status of the Dodgers—so why not Fonseca and Harris?

It is the opinion of this department that Lew and Bucky are more deserving of another year's test than is Carey.

x x x

MAX INHERITED a pretty fair ball club from Uncle Wilbert Robinson. He made some changes, getting rid of many Brooklyn favorites and transplanting them with more serious players of his own choosing.

The White Sox and the Tigers, this year under Fonseca and Harris, have been almost completely rebuilt.

The Sox are much stronger than they were a year ago and wiser trades and purchases probably will bring to the potentialities of the club. Harris this season has been running a Tiger team of which neither he nor the owners themselves dared to hope such grand baseball.

The old rumor that Babe Ruth will be at the helm of the White Sox next year is still daily that eventuality becomes more doubtful. And the one undeniable fact that Ruth would attract attendance from every baseball precinct would be will be of little value next season as an active player—unless Fonseca is wrong.

And there is no reason to believe that Ruth would make a better manager than Fonseca. At least Lew has now had experience.

x x x

And that's something of a pity, indeed.

When Marty took over the club it was a hopeless affair without any brighter prospects visible. Then he added to his fame by bringing off the acquisition of several good players through deals made by Eddie Collins, the new general manager.

Though the club ownership seems determined to replace McManus before next year it wouldn't be doing a bad thing if Marty were given one more season with the improved club.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES
By ALEX. J. MORRISON
Central Press Canadian

ALEX MORRISON says:

Perhaps the most unprofitable thing a player can do is to practice his bad shots.

This is exactly what a player does when he insists on hitting another ball right after he has topped, hooked or sliced a shot.

Invariably, he repeats his faulty swing and succeeds only in duplicating the first bad shot.

The proper time to show that you can really make the shot is when you next come to that particular hole on which you fell down.

Next: The Danger Area.

There are about 25,000 miles of navigable rivers in the United States.

About 2,200,000 people in England are non-wealth or the population pay income taxes.

TIRLING BOWLING LUB ARRANGES TOURNAMENT

ourteen Rinks Meet For Mixed Doubles Tournament

Stirling—A mixed bowling tournament was staged at the local green on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, fourteen rinks of players competed in the tourney. Some rinks were chosen from Madoc. Tweed, Cobourg, Kingston, Toronto, Brighton and Stirling and play which was suspending for some at 6 o'clock was resumed and not to be completed until well on midnight. The weather conditions were very favorable for such event and a lively interest was seen in the play. Lunch was served the local club house by the ladies about 10 p.m.

The first prize was won by Donnell's rink of Stirling composed of Mrs. R. Donnell, skip; Miss Ellen Shea and J. E. O'Connell, with three wins and a plus of 30.

The awards were silver cake plates for the women and kerwood baskets for the men. The second prize of electric clocks was donated by the women and electric heaters by the men and was won by Holbert's rink of Tweed composed of Mrs. F. E. Holbert, skip; Mrs. Wagar and Holbert skip) with two wins and a plus of 37. A Stirling rink made up of Mrs. C. Bateman, skip; Mrs. H. Bastedo and F. Simonds (skip) placed third also with two wins and a plus of 24 to carry off the prizes donated by the ladies and the ladies and military brushes for the men. Fourth place taken by Derry's rink of Kingston composed of Mrs. Mrs. Derry, Mr. Heagle, Mrs. Heagle and Derry (skip) with 2 wins and a plus of 23, won for the majority, points for the losers. Prizes for the ladies and solo rugs for the men.

Anything new came in on the other end of the event as well when J. S. Reid's rink of Mrs. Reid, Mrs. Mallory, Mrs. J. G. Butler and J. Marston (skip) won the prize for the greatest plus, took the prize of glass sandwich plate for the ladies and bounders for the men. Stirling Bowling Club made a re-establishment with two rinks playing prizes while a Toronto rink took the night. Leaving Stirling on used of two Stirling ladies.

The second game in the O.A.S.A. of the Stirling club was staged at the local fair grounds on Monday evening when Belleville took the long end in two straight wins by defeating Tweed by a score of 11 to 3, by virtue of this win the Northern-ers are entitled to meet Frankford for the of the Napanee-Deseronto play-offs. The game was a neck and neck affair and what looked like a big game was converted into a win for Bill Heath, the Belleville boy who hit king from the north stepped up to the plate in the fifth inning and knocked a circuit clout to win the ball game. The score would have been closer but for a poor performance with the number of hits made, but not aided by a number of errors committed on both sides.

Brrr-rrrr-rrrr-ing!

"One man, ner ones, ner two men, nor yet three men would have hardly been sufficient to adequately care for the number of messages received over the telephone at the office of the Belleville Fair Secretary at dinner time on Wednesday from early in the morning until the last straggler had passed through the gates at night on the way home.

Brrr-rrrr-rrr-ing!

"Secretary's office . . . ? Oh, yes . . . Yes, I'd like to speak to Mr. Brown, please . . . He's on the grounds somewhere . . . Could you call him to the phone?

"What? I say he's on the grounds some place . . . What, you can't? Well, that's some office.

Brrr-rrrr-rrr-ing! "Could you tell me the time, please? Thank you so much . . . "Hello? That the office of the Fair . . . ? This is Mrs. speaking. Have you seen a little boy wearing a red sweater pass through the gates yet? Well, if you do, will you tell him to come right straight home here ? . . . Brrr-rrr-rig!

The bud of love blossomed full blown near the end of the Midway early last evening. Dusk had fallen. Crowds surged through the broad aisles, pushing and trampling. A challenge blared in the distance. The shouts of barkers in front of the booths blended with the rattle and bang of the rides. Everything stood added to the din. And above all sounded the lusty cheering as came the tempting aroma of hot dogs and sizzling hamburgers. Near one of the booths stood a little boy of six or seven gamely munching a candy kiss. Nearby stood a little girl of the same age, wistfully eyeing the gastronomical operations as she succeeded bite by bite, she edged slightly closer. The gentleman hovering over the dog he held in his hand suddenly became aware of the hungry scrutiny, the splendid dreamy eyes under the shed cloak. The bitts became diffident and awkward. He smiled, reached less steadily. Heroism came to the fore! A blandness replaced the bashfulness. He smiled. She smiled. With the largess of a prince came a magnificent gesture. Proffering the succulent dog at arm's length in the direction of the little girl: "Wanna bite?" And as the little Prince Charming held one end of the bun and weiner steadily, a hungry little girl took the other. . . . three solid bites of the delicious offering.

The booth in the Manufacturers Building was so pretty as glistening tinsel and vivid crepe paper could make it. And the exhibits would gladden the eye of the most pernickety house wife. Here stood a monstrous radio cabinet from which issued the delightful strains of a

"For the benefit of those who suffer from headaches, sick headaches and backaches, I would say that I have found Fruit-a-tives a splendid remedy. Nothing I ever took did so much for me as they did. sanded dance orchestra. There stood a new type electric washer, gleaming in its polish of silver, gold and nickel. Over-head, rose-red lights above bathed a number of other glass aids into an irresistible attraction for those who passed in their perigrinations to view the imposing sight. Leaning heavily on a can which appeared to be so aid as himself came a bent old man, a man who wore a long, white flowing beard; accompanying by the arm was a silver-haired old lady, kindly eyed and wrinkled. Faltering footsteps carried both straight to the booth. Then they paused. "Nice, isn't it?" murmured the old gentleman gratefully when came to the vivid specimen of electric washer. "Lovely," softly agreed his aged companion. "You didn't have these when I was a girl . . . People nowadays have so many things to help them . . . I guess I was born forty years too soon." she added, as both turned away.

There must be some reason. So far, however, diligent attempts to trace the psychology of the thing have failed. Why is it that women at one time were so very fond of feathered and real animal birds—on their hats. But now can you reconcile a stuffed bird on a hat with "Keep Pace With Safety" per. So there, that little lead on that might be a good story failed into nothingness. It all started with the remark of an attendant. "Never seen so many women lately." ing such an interest in chickens as they do this year," jestingly commented this veteran of many a Fall Fair at the Poultry House. "They've been here all day, and every one of the women—I mean the younger ones. "Flappers, I guess you call them," was hotly investigated. We took up our station in one corner of the house and faithfully noted the fact that there were many flappers greatly interested in the chickens. Some of them were close in to visit and look at the cute little bantams or pigeons. Others stood on the very regular aisel fowl such as you have for Sunday dinner. How come?

This was the fair.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY PREPARE FOR STIRLING FAIR

Rev. and Mrs. D. A. McKenzie Are Leaving For New Home

Stirling—A meeting of the Agricultural Society of the members and Agricultural grooms on Thursday evening at 8 p.m. with a good attendance of members. The meeting opened with President Ed. Fraser in the chair and the reading of the secretary's report by Secretary J. E. O'Donnell.

Messrs. Thos. Solmes, Arthur Wilson and Marsh of Belleville were present and addressed the members on the question of accident and rain insurance. After carefully considering the two propositions and prolonged argumentation, the question was finally laid over for consideration at a future meeting. A motion at a future meeting. A motion that the Frankford Band be secured for the fair at the usual price of $22.00 was made and carried as was also a motion that all cheese exhibited at the Stirling Fall Fair be left for the Fair Board to sell.

A committee in charge of Mr. William Pilgrim was appointed to provide for the printing of some one hundred bills for the purpose of advertising the local fair. It was ruling that all members of the fair be obliged to pay for their meals at the fair was made. Mr. Henry Parrell was appointed call man at the usual salary as all important matters had been dealt with the meeting adjourned.

Stirling residents have heard with regret of the departure of Rev. and Mrs. D. A. McKenzie from Trinity United Church, Stirling, to reside in Six Nations, Ontario.

Neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Wilson of the new Home Circle) gathered at the home of Mrs. Martin Donohoe in River Valley on Wednesday and presented the newlyweds with a miscellaneous shower.

Death—Donohoe

On August 26, at St. Batholomew Hospital, London, to the Rev. J. Powell, Nora Ellen, eldest daughter of Mrs. Jennie Donohoe of Stirling, and beloved sister to Alfred, Queen, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Denis of Kearney, Ont.

A large number of Stirling residents attended the funeral of the late John Mason of Springbrook, who died on Tuesday morning at the Belleville General Hospital, and whose funeral was held from his late residence on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mr. George Boulton, who has just recently returned from Powassan, where he has spent the last few months left on Saturday last for a visit to the Toronto Exhibition.

Those competing from Stirling were Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Whitby, Miss Ellen Shea, Dr. and Mrs. F. E. Ashley, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Munroe and Mr. Alfred Hayworth.

The Springbrook ball team journeyed to Marmora on Wednesday and engaged in a ball game with Marmora at the Civic Holiday celebration held in Marmora. The Springbrook lads emerged on the long end of a 7-7 score, although Mount Pleasant held the lead throughout. Mount Pleasant lineup was strengthened by Harry Brown and Ab Warren, while Tom Ward and Tip Bles played for Springbrook.

The Stirling Board of Education met on Monday evening with Chairman J. G. Belshaw, P. T. Ward, Dr. H. H. Aiger, C. R. Bastedo, E. G. Batley, E. A. Lopry and C. P. Linn present. The most important subject of the meeting was the chairman's report on the survey of the homes from which pupils will, in all probability, be entered the local high school. Principal Mr. H. Babcock, accompanied by Mr. H. R. Dishrowe of the High School staff toured the district and endeavored to work up enthusiasm for high school work among the county children eligible to enter high school this fall. It was felt by the board that due to the present period of depression the attendance might show a marked decrease. Some other matters were discussed, such as a repair on the boiler in the two schools and after the accounts had been passed the meeting adjourned.

Miss Mona Reid, Daphne Stagg and Mrs. F. Long visited Kingston and Montreal.

Exhibition visitors this week include Mrs. Thelma Tulloch, Marion Jones, Helen Boyd, Fred Joblin, Geo. Tulloch, Harry Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Pallister, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Whitehead and Charles Allen.

Misses Olga and Mary Tulloch were this week guests of their sister, Mrs. Albert Ethier of Belleville.

Mrs. Ida Morre, Belleville, and daughter of Ottawa, are visiting the former's grandfather, Mr. Thomas Heard for a few days.

Many from Stirling have visited the Belleville Fair this week.

NO CHANGE IN MART PRICES

Display of Vegetables and Produce Largest of Season

Expanding until vendors were forced to display their products on Pinnacle St., Belleville's produce market had a peak on Saturday, when the season's largest display of farm products was on hand.

No variation in prices was noted although considerable business was transacted during the hours of trading. Out-of-town buyers were scanning plants and foliages spotting the market place. Butter sold at 26c a pound, eggs bringing 17 and 19c a dozen, with seconds selling for 15c. The leading fall-fed chickens were offered at 50 to 75c a pair. Large dressed roasting chickens from 50 to 60c each with ducks selling at 75c each. Plenty of home cooking was on hand for the fall fair.

At the outside market fresh vegetables predominated, and brought a good market as the thrifty house wife filled her market basket. Vegetables for pickling purposes seemed to be the chief product for purchasing, cucumbers selling for 35c a basket, while peppers sold at the rate of three quarts per ten cents. Tomatoes 50c a bushel, potatoes $1 a bag, while a basket of squash 5c, celery 10c, marrows 10c, and pumpkins 15c, all found ready buyers. Beets, carrots, cabbage, onions and parsnips all sold for 5c a bunch, while corn brought 15c the dozen ears.

Many fine and varied sized melons added a seasonable tingle to the display, three water melons sold for 5 to 25c each with canteloupes selling at the same price. Pears brought 10c a basket, while 50c the peck, while other plums sold for the peck. Peaches, however, were offered at 60c a bushel, while Wealthies brought 10c a basket, or ten bought 15c the dozen ears.

HEAVIEST SEASON FOR EGG EXPORTS

Ottawa, Sept. 2—(CP)—With the export season for eggs approaching, preparations are now under way for what promises to be the heaviest season for some since 1926, says a report issued today by the Department of Agriculture.

The revival in exports of eggs this year brings a turn in the tide of decline in exports of eggs from Canada to the United Kingdom during the past few years. In the fiscal year of 1930-31 Canada exported 1,000,000 6,179,253 dozen fresh eggs, since that year, with only a few minor exceptions, exports have declined steadily, the year the total figure of exports was 270,300 dozen.

HIGH COMMISSIONER INVITED

OVER FIVE INCHES RAIN IN AUGUST

August just ended was a "wet month," with its forerunner, July, one of the driest on local record. During the past month a total of five and one-twenty-fifth inches of rain/cascaded at well spaced intervals over the district. During the month of July crops and gardens burned under an unbroken drought during which a time just one half inch of rain had been received.

BARGAIN BRIDE

By KATHRYNE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

© 1933 NEA SERVICE, INC.

Then the servants were mentioned, Mrs. Shuffry Lide, detected, twisting her gloves, which she had taken off, knowing how her hands looked against the black she wore. She heard the amounts which had been left the servants with growing resentment. No pointless, Lida reflected, such gowns were bagged or working. Imagine $20,000 for Cravens! And the interest from a sound $ invested at $100,000 for Miss Smythe for life. It was amazing.

CHAPTER 17

The lawyer's voice drooped on. "To my niece and nephew, Elizabeth and James Thorpe," he read, "$100."

Lida leaned forward to smile and nod as Bessie who sagged back limply looking like a pudding long boiled in a bag.

"To my nephew, Bentwell Stafford, $100."

The lawyer went on reading. Ten dollars to each of them. Ten dollars! The same sum for each of the three Thorpe boys. Bessie was crying almost uncontrollably, Lida saw. Jim had slipped an arm around her. Ida was working strangely, Bentwell sat stolid. Elinor's eyes were closed.

Lida, strained and leaning forward, heard the lawyer continue. "And I, Ella Caines Sexton, do name as sole legatee to the remainder of my fortune Harriet Holbrook Colvin who has never disappointed my faith in him and who has been nearly my friend. And if his conscience for some reason that I do not foresee makes him refuse this gift the amount entire shall then go to the purpose of suppressing in the United States such art as is made pernicious by featured the undraped female figure—"

The group moved rather blindly, stupidly. Miss Smythe triumphant, inclining her head to Elinor.

Lida pushed roughly toward Harriet Colvin. She was breathing hard.

"I quite understand your devotion to my aunt now!" she said. "And why you paid my daughter such attentions only to turn from her suddenly—why you offered her cigarets in this house, knowing how you could ignore my scruples. You deliberately tried to give her the impression that there was something about my daughter you didn't approve. Well, I congratulate you on your success in robbing—"

"Lida, please—!" Bentwell petitioned hoarsely.

Harriet was staring down at her wonder and sudden understanding blended in his unhappy eyes. Lord, how they all must hate him! He love to look for Elinor. She bewildered him, whiter than usual, she said gently, "I'm sorry my mother feels as she seems to. I suppose we're all upset. I know you didn't scheme and —Aunt Ella has every right to leave her money where she pleases."

Then, turning, she was gone.

Lida was aggrieved, imperious. "I shall take this to every court in the land!" she threatened, voice shrill and rising. "Everyone here knows I stayed with Bentwell and because that old hag hated divorce so. Bentwell's a sot! He's made my life—!"

"Silence!" boomed the lawyer.

"Silence, please, Mrs. Stafford," said Miss Smythe crisply. So many years she had been serving Even by Mrs. Stafford and all that time she had known how Mrs. Stafford cheated Miss Ella of extra. Miss Smythe was fond. She had looked forward to a handsome gift with the keenest pleasure but now — she could not refuse it. She turned and smiled at her and said, "I'm glad, Miss Smythe, that Aunt Ella remembered you as well. You deserve it more than anyone else."

"Come in! Come in!" barked Jim. "Just in time for dinner!"

A moment later Elinor sat looking at Jim. Bessie and Lida. Sexton had brough in chair for her. Jim had given her a drink. Elinor was crushed because Aunt Ella hadn't done something for Bessie and Jim.

However her own tactlessness could not have had anything to do with Bessie's grief. She had been with no help in sight and the constant fight against, ahead. She would have done anything to get them what they deserved.

"I'm so glad you ran over, darling," said Bessie. "I'm so glad—"

"I had to come . I—" but she could not finish. She put down her trembling again.

"Have some more fried potatoes," Jim urged. They were all so kind Elinor realized as she always did when she was with them, thought of them. Her eyes rested on Jim with gratitude. He was quite ready at work since his father could see seem to make any headway to these things going.

Jim Junior, working on ledgers dreamed of being an engineer, a bridge builder. Bert was strongly artistic. His interest was sure he could be a real success. Sexton's bent was as yet a mystery but he certainly needed good schooling. They had just the fall made very well! If only there was a way, even now, to right the matters!

Before the meal was finished Jim Junior said boldly, "Well, lets decide how we'll spend that $100!" Everyone laughed in a way that meant the tension was relieved.

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Burroughs

"Thou mayest choose thy weapons, Sirrah," said Malud to Blake, "Don't call me 'Sirrah.' I don't like it," answered Jimmy and now he was not smiling. "Listen to me, Mr. Malud! You are the only man in this who has not given me a fair chance. You are rich, but you have no intelligence, no heart or chivalry. In my country you'd be called a 'poor sport'."

"You are not so good a man or so great as Sir Richard, my friend," went on Jimmy, "nor do I think you are so good a man as I. To prove it, I will meet you on the morrow, using your own type of weapon, the sword and buckler—and on horseback." Seeing Sir Malud's wrath, the others hastily drawn away from Blake, who now stood alone, a few paces apart, with Sir Malud.

Then it was that Dulnalds stepped to his side. "Sir James," she said, "Thou speakest with thy mouth full!" She broke into a merry laugh. "Walk with me in the garden, Sir Knight," and taking his arm she guided him away. Sir James, that I might speak with thee alone," she said.

"Dost really think I'm wonderful?" she demanded. "This hard to know if men speak truth to such as I." "I hope to prove it," answered Jimmy. Now they were beyond the hearing of the others. Then suddenly laid her hand impulsively upon his." I thought thee away, Sir James, that I might speak

CELEBRATES HER 82ND BIRTHDAY

On Sunday, August 27th, Mrs. M. A. Tummon, formerly of Ivanhoe, but who now resides with her daughter, Mrs. Wm. J. Rise, on the 4th Con. of Sidney, celebrated her 82nd birthday.

On arriving home from church she was greeted by several relatives from Hallway, who came to spend the afternoon with her. A very pleasant time was spent and in the early evening all returned home wishing Mrs. Tummon many more happy birthdays.

Later in the evening, her only son and his wife and Mrs. Albert A. Tummon, of Trenton, also Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Tummon, of Shelly and Miss Cora Prest of Ivanhoe called to extend to Mrs. Tummon their best wishes for many more birthdays.

Mrs. Tummon is still quite active and performs many duties in the home.

FISHING CLUB IS ORGANIZED

Bancroft, Sept. 3—An enthusiastic meeting of cottage owners at Baptiste was held there Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of organizing a Game and Fish Protective Association. After considerable discussion it was unanimous that a club be organized to be known as the Baptiste Game and Fish Protective Association.

The following officers were elected:

President, E. George; Vice Pres., L. Reid; Sec.-Treas., F. Thomson. Membership Committee, Messrs. Storey, A. Nicoll, E. Snodgrass.

The fee for membership is $1.00. Anyone desirous of becoming a member of the newly formed association may do so by consulting with the President or Secretary. The object of the club is to cooperate with the Department of Game and Fisheries in the observance of the Game and Fishery laws and especially the protection of the fish during the spawning season.

Elsie, the Doll Lady's Baby Charms Folks

A very charming trouper she is, too, this blonde baby who will only have to grow a few inches to be as tall as her thirty-six inch mother. Elsie is a normal, healthy baby to whom fair surroundings, streams of visitors and the screech of midway sounds has become as commonplace as the daily bread ride is to the average infant.

Elsie sleeps soundly at night. In fact she has been a sleepy-time baby to most midway visitors who come in the evening and as friendly and obliging as her mother is. Like all other mothers she draws the line at waking Elsie out of her sleep.

But when Elsie does open her blue eyes and looks around she makes an easy conquest of all visitors. She smiles an adorable toothless grin, holds out her arms to "come" and after making friends loses no time in going back to her mother.

Dolly the Doll lady, who is in real life, Mrs. Bush is as exacting over Elsie's routine as are most mothers. Elsie gets her regular sleep, in hotels, in midway booths, anywhere she is, at the proper time. She is fed at just the right time and the result is that she is a healthy, lovely baby who might have given contestants, strong competition at the baby show.

Mrs. Bush, Boston-born, has been travelling for years. Her mother who is five feet eleven and her father, six feet nine resides in that city. She also has one sister, who is five feet seven in height.

She has covered many hundreds of miles of travelling and spends the winters in Miami.

Possessed of a fine singing voice whose deep tones come as a surprise to those who see the tiny lady, Dolly has regular engagements on broadcasting stations in Miami.

This afternoon, she with her husband and Elsie, will be travelling again and will carry away pleasant memories of Belleville Fair visitors.

Weddings

BUSH—MILLS

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, August 30, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mills, Cannifton, when their second daughter, Annie Margaret, became the bride of John Robert Bush, only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bush of Belleville. Rev. Mr. Merrick officiated.

The bride entered the drawing-room on the arm of her father to the strains of Lohengrin's bridal chorus played by Miss Jean Pope. The ceremony took place under the bank of bell with evergreens, white streamers and a large white wedding bell. The bride wore a profusion of gladioli and other flowers in season.

The attendant, Mrs. Harold Campbell, sister of the bride, wore a most beautiful frock in shades of rose, triple sheer crepe, made in similar style to that of the bride. With it she wore a small black velvet hat, black kid gloves and black shoes. Her bouquet was of roses and blue delphiniums.

Miss Rhoda Rigby, brother of the bride was groomsman.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. W. M. Barlow sang "I Love You Truly."

After the ceremony the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Ottawa and Eastern cities, the bride travelling in a smart suit of navy blue twill crepe with rosewood accessories. Hat, gloves and shoes in Oxford gray were worn with the pretty costume. Mr. and Mrs. Bush will reside at Lincham Street, Cannifton.

KENT—RIGBY

Emmanuel Church was the scene of a lovely September wedding at one o'clock this afternoon when Violet May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rigby became the bride of Mr. Cyril A. Kent, son of Mrs. Emily Kent. Bishop Marshall officiated at the ceremony. The church was bright with late summer flowers.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father entered the church to the strains of the wedding march played by the organist, Miss Phoebe Wilder. She made a charming picture in her gown of cerise blue triple sheer georgette fashioned on long, flowing lines, the skirt with a train. Her hat in the same shade of blue was edged with a small veil and she carried a shower bouquet of roses and lillies of the valley.

Miss Irene Hallam was bridesmaid and wore a beautiful frock in shades of rose, triple sheer crepe, made in similar style to that of the bride. With it she wore a small black velvet hat, black kid gloves and black shoes. Her bouquet was of roses and blue delphiniums.

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

"Thou art either a brave man or a very simple one," said Guinalda, "or thou wouldst never have chosen to meet Sir Maiud with sword and buckler. None be so skilled with those in Winnar as he. Because I thinkest that thou goest to thy death tomorrow, I have brought thee aside to warn thee." Blake's eyes twinkled. "What can be done about it now, fair Princess?" he asked.

"Thou art passing fair with thy lance," replied Guinalda. "It is not too late to change the selection of thy weapons. I beg thee to do so." "You care?" asked Blake softly, with a world of meaning in his voice. The Princess dropped her eyes. Then she looked up with a touch of haughtur in them. "I am the daughter of a Prince," she answered, "I care for the humblest of my father's subjects."

"I guess that will hold you for a while, Sir James," thought Blake, but to Guinalda he made no reply. Then he stamped her other gauntlet down on her. Presently she stamped her foot. "Thou hast an impudent smile, sirrah!" she exclaimed angrily. "Ah, Blekn, it not. Thou art too forward with the daughter of a Prince." I merely admired your lance, my lady." "Thou art a forward boor!" said Guinalda. "I shall not be insulted." Holding high her head, she walked haughtily away. Blake stepped quickly after her. "Tomorrow," he whispered "I meet Sir Maiud. With your favor upon me I could overthrow the best swordsmen in Winnar." The Princess turned, but deign to acknowledge that she had even heard his words as she joined the knights and ladies gathered about Sir Maiud.

EYELASHES, REAL AND COUNTERFEIT

Within the soul of every feminine mortal there is a yearning for long, black curly eyelashes. Some how they spell romance. They are beauty riches, even as naturally wavy locks, and a complexion that gets along on its own.

Eyes are prettier when veiled with long silky fringes, and these fascinating valances add to the pleasing expression of the countenance. No wonder the beauty aspirant lets out a heart-breaking yodel when she finds eyelids getting bald. She has a real grievance. But she needs not despair. New ones can be cultivated. And hosiery ones can be bought for less than a song.

When, without fly away, it is because the margins and linings of the eyelids are suffering from local disorders. Lashes are short-lived, haven't much vitality. Within a few weeks a new one sprouts, in full grown. This process of restoration takes place because the pupilla, which is in the winker manufacturing business, has been destroyed by disease. Scalpula is tough on them because it is sometimes responsible for the eye lashes falling when the lid eaves. Rubbing the eyes drags them out by the roots.

At the first sign of depletion of the winker ranks, have your druggist put up a solution of boric acid. Three times a day place a drop or two in the eye. This lotion will allay inflammation that'll be present. Soak pieces of lint in it, place over closed lids.

When conditions are normal again, touch the lid rims with vaseline. Put some on the upper lid. It must be seldom, make eyes look dewy. It's a fact that any number of gals have cultivated lovely long eye frills by the continued use of vaseline. Hair like substances. No need telling the beauty-ers that oil should go into the eyes. They know it.

Sties make cruel inroads on lash growths. Eye specialists have a way of handling them so if they occur in crops, see the eye doc. He'll fix them.

Lidses can be trained to take on the curves in by brushing upward. Keep a small brush for this purpose and let me warn you to keep it very clean. Scrub every day with soap and water, rinse and dry. Lash curling can be had. They resemble ladies curling iron don't have to be heated. They stretch the hairs, till they're straight. They stretch the hairs, till they're straight. What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

The antics of America's craziest family are brought to the screen in Paramount's "The Cornered Moon" starring Claudette Colbert, Richard Arlen and Mary Boland, at the Belle Today and Monday, matinee daily. The film is adapted from the famous New York play by Gertrude Tonkonogy which had such a long run on Broadway, also in the cast are Wallace Ford, Lyda Roberti, Tom Brown, Joan Marsh, Harold Albright and William Bakewell.

It is the story of the fortunes of the Hittingdon family of Brooklyn. In the hands of the addlehead mother, Mary Boland, is left the family's mother after the death of Papa Hittingdon. The self-centred children, played by Claudette Colbert, Wallace Ford, Tom Brown and William Bakewell are too busy with their own affairs to pay attention to mama's exploits in Wall Street. Everybody else is mad in the Hittingdegar mansion, and nobody knows what anybody else is talking about.

Claudette Colbert brings home her current "passion," a down-at-the-heels, arty novelist forever at work on one chapter, and when the manager crashes he lingers on for the free grub. On the advice of the family physician, Richard Arlen, the family decent to earth, with the exception of the mother, to settle its affairs. They all get jobs, try to live the natural, Lyda Roberti, who can't be fired because she does not speak English. They decide to take in boarders, the first of which is Arlen. Everything works out alright for the Hittingdon family in the end, as it always does, and the romance between Arlen and Colbert fosters nicely while the author-novelist is finally thrown out on the street. It ends on a happy note, and the family remains as insane as it always was with no one except Claudette Colbert and Richard Arlen, any the wiser.

AT THE CAPITOL

Romance, mixed with exciting adventure is the keynote of the Warner Bros. picture, "The Life of Jimmy Dolan," which opens today at the Capitol Theatre with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. in the starring role adding another strong characterization to his already long list of successes.

The story deals with a left-handed prizefighter who accidentally kills a man while drunk and is forced to change his name, abandon his profession, and practically penniless, becomes a homeless, friendless wanderer in his efforts to evade capture by the law. He dares not enter the ring again for fear that his peculiar stance may give him away. In his frantic wanderings, he enters a farming family consisting of a woman, a girl and four children. Here he finds romance and unexpected adventure which provides the story with a stirring climax.

A highly competent cast of screen favorites combines with Fairbanks in unfolding this unusually dramatic story. Playing opposite him is Loretta Young, marking their first appearance together since they appeared in "I Like Your Nerve", two years ago. Other important roles are played by Allan MacMahon, Lyle Talbot, Fifi Dorsay, Guy Kibbee, Harold Huber, Farina, Dawn O'Day, David Durand, Mickey Rooney, Shirley Grey, Arthur Hohl, Arthur DeKuh and George Meeker.

The story was adapted from the play by Bertram Millhauser and Beulah Marie Dix, the screen adaptation being the work of David Boehm and Erwin Gelsey.

The direction was in the hands of Archie Mayo who has won acclaim for a number of past successes, among which were "Bought", "Street of Women" and "Two Against the World".

"Haunted Gold"

A different type of Western picture, with a mystery background, is "Haunted Gold", at the Capitol today (Sunday). Dealing with the old "ghost towns" of California's gold rush days, with its present-day spooks, it presents John Wayne and his devil horse, Duke, in a series of the most unusual experiences this popular riding and roaming star has offered the followers of his western productions.

One of the many novelties is a colored cowboy, Wayne's bodyguard, whose terror of everything he sees—or imagines he sees—in the eerie, deserted mining camp, keeps an audience in roars of laughter.

Bring a dozen people, all strangers to one another, into a "ghost town" like this, all bent on the same errand, all terrified and mystified by the strangeness of the town in the vicinity of the deserted mine in which they are interested—and almost anything can happen.

Before John Wayne finally solves the mystery of the haunted mine, he has gone through fights and hair-breadth escapes sufficient number to make half a dozen ordinary thrillers.

The complete show to-day, Monday and Tuesday commence at 2:45, 7:15 and 9:40. Monday and Wednesday are dinnerware gift days.

2 MEN DROWNED AT NORTHPORT IN SKIFF ACCIDENT

C. M. Carrie Alone of Fishing Party Saved when Skiff Upset by Wave

Second Wave Sweeps Toronto Men Away From Boat

CARRIE'S HEROISM

Forty Minutes In Water Before He Is Rescued, He Says

Upset into the waters of the Bay of Quinte half a mile east of Northport when a small wave hit their skiff in which they were fishing at four-forty-five o'clock on Monday afternoon, two prominent Toronto men, E. J. Repath, 73 years or 286 Spadina Road, and William Dick, 54 years of 1003 De Grassi Street, were drowned after their companion, Charles M. Carrie of 918 Euclid Ave. had made heroic efforts to save them by act and by word of encouragement. All the while the tragedy was being enacted on the north shore of Prince Edward County from the land words of encouragement were shouted to the men as they clung to the boat "to hang on" for their lives, Carrie joining in the admonition. Then a moment later when them and Repath was seen some distance away while Dick slowly gave in and sank to his death as Carrie thought he had him safely on the boat.

This was the end of a happy friendship which found expression in numerous outings and fishing expeditions for the three men were friends for many years and belonged to the same fraternity of Masonry.

Boats Recovered

The bodies were recovered one hour and a quarter and one hour and a half after the tragedy. Long before this after four minutes immersion in the water Carrie was picked up by rescuers as he clung though weakening in the face of the choppy water to the upturned craft, which had proven too slippery a hold for his companions. It was some time before he was brought ashore as the rescuers had to go for a boat to get to the shipwrecked Toronto men, who was about fifteen yards off shore where the water is at least fifteen feet deep.

The three men had come down from Toronto on Sunday afternoon and planned to leave for home a few minutes later than the time when the two of them were washed to their deaths.

"We were to leave for home at five o'clock this afternoon," said Mr. Carrie to the Ontario Intelligencer last night at the Northport Fishing Lodge where they had been staying, and to which the bodies of the victims had been brought after their recovery.

Though he was busy carrying out his bargain and duties of the dead companions who were to have gone back with him in his car, and that he was suffering from the awful strain of the loss of his friends and the shock of the long immersion Mr. Carrie was courtesy itself, took time in the sitting room of the lodge to tell of the scene which was enacted off shore east of Northport.

Wave Hits Boat

"We had been fishing all morning and had come in and had our lunch and then went out again in the afternoon at two o'clock. We had caught some fish and it was getting to the time when we were to take our departure. Mr. Dick was sitting in the bow of the boat, Mr. Repath in the centre and I was in the stern.

"It was a quarter to five for I looked at my watch at the time as I knew that we should soon have to go in. We were sitting quietly in the boat when a wave came along and splashed over the end of the boat. It seems to have struck Mr. Dick on the shoulder. Whether it startled him or not I do not know, but evidently he moved. The stern was lifted and the boat turned over and we were all hurled into the water.

"I and Mr. Dick were all on alongside the boat, and hanging on to it. Then a big wave came along and lifted it up and upset it again. As far as I can recollect, I had Mr. Dick safely on the boat. I swam along the side, hanging to the gunwale. When I looked around I saw Repath thirty or forty feet away and Dick about five feet away. The boat was resting on the bottom at that place.

"I then tried to get Dick aboard the boat, but he was unable to do so. There he clung for what seemed an interminable time as he waited for relief. The upsetting of the boat in the small was noticed by Mrs. A. H. Reinholdt, who with her husband operates the Northport Fishing Lodge. She immediately realized the plight of the men and gave the alarm and going to the shore shouted that help was coming.

Almost Exhausted

"I was in the water forty minutes and though still conscious I was feeling exhausted," said Mr. Carrie.

It was Charles Reid who with Mr. Reinholdt and another man, got a boat and went to the rescue, Reid effecting the saving of the men. The condition of Carrie was indicated by the fact that he thought that Reid had gone to one boat and Reid said that it was Carrie who caught hold of him as he leaned over from his rescuing skiff.

"He says I grabbed him. It must be so, though I thought he grasped me," remarked Mr. Carrie.

About an hour and half after the drowning William Woodock of Northport, with grappling hooks dragged for the bodies and an hour later the other.

Coroner Dr. Whiteman or Picton, called to the scene, and hearing the account of the accident, decided that an inquest was necessary and signed the necessary release of the bodies.

Mr. Repath recently retired from his position at the chemical building of the University of Toronto, of which he had been in charge for many years. Mr. Dick was in the contracting business, and Mr. Carrie is a former member of the Toronto Board of Trade and at present vice-chairman of the Old Age Pension Board of Toronto.

The bodies were brought to Belleville by the Reinholdts and arrived shortly before midnight and prepared for burial and then taken to Toronto by motor. Mr. Carrie followed in the car in which he had driven his late companions to the fishing camp.

"I'm against Richey," he asserted vehemently.

"I'm sorry to hear that", commented the voter, "I happen to be Dr. Richey."

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 5 (CP)—Illinois is using electricity to catch its fish.

Here's how: high voltage lamps are used for feeding and breeding ponds at Matloon, attract bugs, which are killed by the lamps. They fall into the water the fish gobble them down. It's cheaper than buying fish food.

Whopper of Fish Throws Back Two Dollar Plug Into Boat

It may sound a bit fishy, but Mr. George Finch of Belleville swears to the veracity of the tale.

Three of them sat in a boat on Wallington Bay last week. Mr. Finch, a friend from Ohio, and Mr. A. Calnan of Bloomfield, made up the party. The visitor from Ohio, an ar t with expensive tackle, cast his plug far out in to the water and had the satisfaction of seeing it snapped speedily and savagely. For some moments man and fish fought and then the line parted near the end. "That was a two dollar plug," mourned the crestfallen. "Such things will happen," commiserated Mr. Finch. As he finished the words a huge lunge broke water not five feet away from the boat, snapped its head from side to side vigorously and flung the two dollar plug back into the boat again

Originating in a garage at the rear of Harry Scott's barber shop, in the Gowsell building, Foxboro, about 11.45 p.m. Monday night the most destructive fire ever to threaten the village of Foxboro completely devastated the centre seven buildings, including Burley Hamilton's general store, Wm. Wetmore's post office and general store, Scott's barber shop and adjoining building, the home of Richard Tew, W. Sherwood and all adjoining buildings. All night long the conflagration raged until at the time the entire village was threatened in a fire that it is estimated that fully $75,000.00 damage was done.

Fire Department, under Fire Chief Lynch from Belleville was dispatched to the scene of the fire about midnight but owing to the inadequate fire fighting apparatus they were forced to centre their activities on the surrounding buildings to stop the spread of flames. Another de-

HINDENBURG'S WILL INDICATES HOHENZOLLERN RETURN TO POWER

The will of Paul von Hindenburg, extreme left, president of Germany, addressed " To the German People," is said to contain plans for the return of the Hohenzollern family to the headship of the German state. In the asserted testament, recently written, President Hindenburg is expected to urge the nation to elect one of the Hohenzollerns as regent of the throne, for which the most likely candidate would be former Prince Louis Ferdinand, right centre, grandson of former Kaiser Wilhelm II, extreme right, and now an employee of a Detroit automobile concern. Prince Wilhelm, shown in centre with his four recent bride, forfeited his right to the throne because he married below his rank. Chancellor Adolf Hitler, left centre, would assume as chief of government under the plan. The Hohenzollern palace, sum mer residence of the royal family at Potsdam, is pictured at the top.

$50,000 FIRE DAMAGE AT PORT HOPE

Firemen Manage To Put Out Blaze After Three Hours

WAREHOUSE BURNS

Five Thousand Bags of Flour In Storage Ruined

Port Hope, Ont., Sept. 5.—(CP)—Breaking out shortly after dawn today, a fire of unknown origin gutted the Scullthorpe's grain warehouse here, causing a loss of stock valued at $50,000.

After battling the blaze for more than three hours, firemen managed to extinguish it at the source, between the floor level of the brick structure.

One fatality was narrowly averted when a fireman, carrying a hose was about to enter the hole cut through the wall under the floor. Before he could enter the wall-gap the floor, weighted down by tons of grain and flour, collapsed suddenly.

Among the stock ruined by flame and water was 5,000 bags of flour owned by the Robin Hood Mills, Limited, and a quantity of seed owned by Scullthorpe. Four thousand square feet of flooring was burned away.

The flour destroyed was covered by insurance, but Scullthorpe's stock only had partial coverage.

VISCOUNT GREY IS STILL UNCONSCIOUS

Christon Bank, England, Sept. 5.—(AP)—An official Bulletin this morning said Viscount Grey of Falloden, one-time British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, who has been gravely ill for days "had a quiet night although he is weaker and still unconscious".

At his home it was said the Viscount had not regained consciousness since a relapse yesterday morning.

Prize Catch of Grey Trout King of Weslemkoon

Fishing at Weslemkoon Lake has been up to the usual high standard this season with good catches recorded by both Canadian and United States summer colonies. Bass fishing has been excellent and some grey trout have been caught, but the championship for the season for this water was captured Monday by Cornell H. Scott, of Belleville, manager of the local Hydro Electric system, and a guest at the Cliff Walker camp where all the big fish stories come from and where most of the big fish go.

Mr. Scott was fishing deep water and was trout trolling about noon when he felt a strike that threw a dazzling fish into the air the next hour was the busiest man in Canada. For more than one-half hour the fish kept the deep water and was not seen at all, and only surrendered after nearly an hour's hard fight. This fish was a beautiful specimen of grey trout and weighed eighteen pounds, measured thirty-one inches in length, 19 inches girth and with a tail spread of eight inches.

Slightly larger grey trout may have been caught in Weslemkoon but none more beautiful and Mr. Scott is very proud of his catch, which was duly photographed and certified to for the benefit of posterity, as well as the generous Thomases of the present day and generations. The catch holds the championship for this season thus far, and-Mr. Scott dares any fisherman of note to beat him.

ROOSEVELT TO DELAY ACTION

Administration Hopeful Public Opinion Will Force Hand of Ford

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Public opinion, apparently was the first chosen jury of President Roosevelt's recovery administration for deciding the case of Henry Ford's conspicuous absence from NRA membership.

As the rest of the United States Automobile Industry began its first official work day under the blue eagle, NRA leaders evidenced every intention —for the present, at least —of letting nature take its course with Ford—The industrial czar's pelgn's first major holdout.

U.S. WARSHIPS SAIL TO CUBA TO FACE COUP

Coup d' Etat Succeeds In Ousting New Regime

BLOODLESS CHANGE

Swift-Moving Developments Force Precautions In U. S.

Washington, Sept. 5 (AP)—Warships of the United States Navy were ordered to Cuba today because of the coup d'etat there.

A cruiser and three destroyers were dispatched to protect American lives and property from danger in threatened strife precipitated by the revolt of the army against the new provisional government.

(Copyright, 1933 by the A. P.)

Havana, Sept. 5—Cuba's revolutionary government, less than one month old, prepared to resign today in favor of a commission of five selected men selected by leaders of soldiers, sailors and national police who seized power through a bloodless coup d'etat last night.

The coup d'etat placed power in the hands of the extreme Radical Socialists, representing the student group, the A.B.C. Revolutionary Society which was largely instrumental in the overthrow of Machado and certain university professors.

Automobiles were driven at high speed through the city, carrying men who shouting "Viva" and "New Revolution!" and fired into the air.

Saw Belleville for First Time 21 Years Ago

Mr. G. M. James, author and proprietor of The James Texts, publishers of text books for school teachers and students, came to Belleville from Winnipeg 21 years ago today, landing here at 3 o'clock of a Sunday morning. Mr. James looking Belleville over, saw that it was good, and decided to stay in the Bay of Quinte district. From that decision arose The James Texts, which from small beginnings has grown to the status of a large publishing house. This business of text books for students and teachers, model examination papers, a.:d aids to students in every line of school work, was conducted by Mr. James at the Front and ably assisted by him his long experience as a High School Principal and specialist in mathematics and other subjects.

Belleville benefited by the arrival of Mr. James twenty-one years ago, and his decision to become a permanent resident, while Mr. James benefited by finding in all things surroundings to work out his ideas to the outstanding success achieved.

Sees Fire Ruins from Airplane

"Just like the pictures you see of wartime France," commented James F. Day, the Ontario Intelligencer's Trenton correspondent, as he related what he saw this morning as he passed in an aeroplane over the village of enbore. "We were up two hundred feet as we went over and everything looked level and flat, grey and ashy in color, with a sign here and there of smoke from the ruins. Then we circles the village and at the height of one thousand feet you could still smell the smoke."

Returning from Marmora, Monday evening, a prominent Customs official or this city was one of the first motorists at the Foxboro fire area actively lent his aid in fighting the flames, assisting those who had been rendered homeless and administering first aid.

When the church bell started ringing the dread alarm, he states, from one end of the village to the other doors flew open and the householders made their appearance in all kinds of night attire to see certain where the fire was. Flowing robes dominated the thoroughfare for some time as the frightened people of Foxboro donned more presentable attire.

Confusion reigned for some time before organization was underway, and the basis of control was the bucket brigade.

Today many of the wells in the village are dry but as one of the residents put it they'll fill up again. Foxboro had a fire last night that will long remain as a source of conversation for citizens of the community and the many incidents connected with it will furnish material for local and varied talks for a good while.

At the height of the blaze a woman was taken with a weak spell in the street and was taken to a neighbor's.

TEN THOUSAND STITCHES

San Francisco, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Ten thousand stitches went into a purse made here as a gift for President Roosevelt by Mrs. J. D. Reeng. Each stitch represented a "hope for success".

The purse bears a red, white and blue shield and on the reverse side the legend "To our beloved President—F.D.R."

THOUSANDS IN CITY SCHOOLS

Large Attendance At Public, Separate Schools And Collegiate

School days are here again.

After a vacation of over two months, children were this morning seen wending their way to school buildings situated in various parts of the city. It was a busy day for the principals of the four public school, also the Sisters of St. Michael's Academy, in allotting new pupils to their respective classes. The total registration of all over a slight increase over the number of pupils who were attending previous to the holidays. The registration of the four public schools totalled 1,903 and was as follows:

King George

The registration this morning, Principal L. A. Kells stated was 778 with the expectation that there would be a few more. There were 36 teachers on the teaching staff and there has been no changes; all the teachers before Mr. Kells's previous five years respective classes today.

Queen Mary

Principal G. I. Frederick is in charge of this school in the western part of the city and the number registered today totalled 472 of which 240 were beginners. Twenty-six pupils were transferred from this school to King George School.

Queen Victoria

The registration at this school for the first day over the Principal A. C. Wilkins was 540, which is a slight increase. A number of pupils were in attendance for the first time.

Queen Alexandra

This school is presided over by Principal C. W. Anderson in place of Mr. M. W. Mott, who resigned. The registration was 510 about the usual number as before the holidays, Mr. Geo. Wallace is the assistant principal.

Collegiate

It is confidentially expected that the total registration at the Belleville Collegiate will be 1,000 when the classes are revised and in running order.

St. Michael's

At St. Michael's Academy there was a large attendance this morning. About four hundred pupils were registered in the Academy and Public School, a number of little ones beginning their school career. In the High School department over hundred and twenty-five were registered. Sister Superior in charge at present will do Fourth Form work this year, but in the near time, the local Academy registration this year is higher than that of last term.

Qualifies for Five Scholarships Douglas Bankier Sets Record

J. Douglas Bankier, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Bankier, brilliant student of Belleville Collegiate Institute, has created a remarkable record in his Upper School examinations which his marks qualified him for five scholarships and Queen's University, only one of which he can retain.

Announcement was made by the University this week end of scholarship winners. Douglas won the Sir Sandford Fleming Scholarship of two hundred dollars for the highest marks in mathematics. The four other scholarships awarded him, which reverted to next ranking stu-dents, after he had selected the first award were the Andrew Mallory Scholarship of $200, any four subjects; Williamson No. 1, English and History Leitch Memorial No. 1, Arts, any four subjects and the Nowak Scholarship in Mathematics and Physics.

Douglas will enter Queen's University this fall after a most successful career at Belleville Collegiate Institute to which his previous high scholastic attainments have brought honor. Not only in his studies, but in his literary talents has Douglas shown exceptional talents and gives promise of a successful future in all his undertakings.

LARGE CATCH OF FISH IS TAKEN

One of the season's largest catches of game fish was procured by Messrs Fred Yoisin and Walter Keller of this city on Labor Day at Moira Lake. The two disciples of Izaak Walton returned to the city with 15 fine pickerel, pike and bass. The largest of the catch were four pickerel weighing anywhere from three and one-half to four pounds each. Many friends of the two local anglers admireg the fine catch.

LITTLE DAMAGE AS WHEELS LOCK

A minor automobile accident occurred in front of the Ontario School for the Deaf about 2.20 a.m. Sunday, when a car driven eastward by John Barmick of Toronto, accidentally locked wheels with a truck being driven in the opposite direction in charge of O. Noble of Campbellton. No serious damage was done either vehicle.

CAR CRASHES FOXBORO FENCE

Sudden application of the brakes on his car is thought to be the cause for an automobile accident about 5.30 p.m. Monday at the junction of the Madoc and Stirling roads in Foxboro, when a car driven by D. A. Weaver of this city, crashed thru a nearby fence. Driving south on the Stirling road, driver said he applied his brake at the intersection with the result car skidded across the highway and through the fence. The front of the car was badly damaged and a portion of the fence ripped out.

BLIND BULL DOG HELD AT POUND

A blind female brindle bull terrier picked up on the Bay Bridge road last evening awaits an owner at the city pound. The animal, described by the custodian of the pound as totally blind, but apparently of good breeding, was tagless and collarless when secured.

All World Meets at Restaurant

John Kikes Celebrates Third Anniversary of London Lunch

Three years ago Sunday last a new place of business—a much needed one and one of convenience, an appreciated one—was started in Belleville. On that date, John Kikes opened his London Lunch on Front Street and the business has been an outstanding success since inaugurated. Twice in its short years of existence, the premises have required extension.

Mr. Kikes came to Belleville in 1920 from Youngstown, Ohio, where he had been engaged in the lunch-counter and restaurant business for a number of years. He arrived from Greece as a boy in 1904, and since by industry and integrity, has advanced himself to an enviable financial position. He is a member of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, and finds time from his business life to occasionally enjoy his membership in the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club. In 1920 he married; his wife had, previous to the union, been a resident of this city. Five children, 3 boys and 2 girls, resulted from the marriage and they are as popular with their little playmates as are their parents with a wide circle of friends.

Mr. Kikes has 10 courteous employees now engaged in his London Lunch and they have worked harmoniously with the proprietor in building up a fine and lucrative business.

Aside from the large local and countryside patronage, the restaurant enjoys, it is the stopping place of the trans-provincial buses and drivers of trucking and transport lines, also make it their chosen eating place while in route through Belleville.

Sunday afternoon and evening, Mr. and Mrs. Kikes entertained at their home, 140 William St., a large party of friends who congregated to mark the third anniversary of Mr. Kikes' advent in the business life of the community and to wish him continued success in his undertaking.

AUTOMOBILE HITS TRUCK

No One Injured As Auto Moving Slowly At Time

No serious motor accidents were reported in the local community over the holiday. One accident that might have resulted in serious injury was averted about 9 p.m. Monday, when a car driven by Mr. A. Brigden, 38 Dorval Rd., Toronto, collided with a parked transport near Shannonville.

Mr. Brigden was proceeding westward when he suddenly came upon a large Motorways transport and trailer. The driver of the car alleges that no rear lights were displayed on the rear trailer. His car, which was travelling at a rather slow rate of speed, collided with the rear of the parked trailer causing slight damages to the front of the vehicle.

The radiator, fenders and lights were damaged. The Provincial Police investigated and found that no person had been injured nor was the fact that the car was travelling at a moderate rate of speed.

ARCHDEACON IS PREACHER

Venerable G. R. Beamish Speaks To His Old Congregation

At the eleven o'clock service in St. Thomas' Church on Sunday morning a large congregation was privileged to hear the Ven. Archdeacon Beamish, M.A., deliver an able sermon on prayer and worship. The text upon which the Archdeacon based his remarks was the tenth verse of the eighteenth chapter of St. Luke: "Two men went up into the temple to pray; the One a Pharisee and the other a Publican." The great lessons to be learned from this verse and the parable which immediately follows it in which the attitude and the spirit in prayer is extolled, were presented by the preacher in a most interesting and convincing manner. The duty of public worship and the great power of prayer were emphasized by the Archdeacon and he urged his hearers to continue in prayer and to come to church to meet God, to speak to God and to listen to him praise, thanksgiving and glory.

Many persons in the congregation, who were present on Sunday the time Archdeacon Beamish was actively engaged in the ministry, were pleased to see him taking part in the service and to hear him speak from the pulpit.

Victoria Park Scene of Various Activities on Labor Day

South End Club And Liberals Stage Programs

One of the largest open air meets held in this city for some time was staged by the South End Athletic Club on Victoria Park Monday. Games, amusements, contests and competitions kept spectators entertained, while the programme which was presented by the club tested the skill of the various contestants.

One of the features was the punt sailing races which were held. Boulter's Joins again nosed her way to victory in the "A" class, time, setting up the excellent time of one hour, thirty-five minutes and twenty-four seconds to beat the Alley You II sailed by Volunteer by a handy margin. In "B" class the Scrapper with the time of one hour, twenty-four minutes and thirty seconds defeated the Let's Go and the Gypsy. In "C" class the Kind Go Too, in a race with several new boats, including the Big Bird Zephyr, Rainy Days and the Skipper, passed the finish buoy some distance ahead of the competitors. Ron Wallace, consistent winner in "D" class, retained her flag and reputation when she romped home ahead of the Isabell, the Bobby C and My Own. Boss in "E" class chalking up the time of one hour, minutes and thirty seconds in her race in that class, to defeat several other boats of the juvenile class.

In the swimming races for boys over 12 years W. Corms took the honors in the one quarter mile race, R. McKenna was second, with Al Storms third. In the one half mile race, G. Lazjaman, R. Collin and D. Easter finished in the order named. The swimmity race for boys under 12 years, was won by Ken Sheenor, with Joseph Boyle second and Ern Hay, third. In the girls' race, Mis Edna Bury, "Mickey" Asslatine and Lillian Pointer finished in order named.

The ladies' diving contest attracted a number of contestants who were defeated by Miss Helen McQuade, in the men's diving contest, Mark Storm captured honors. The Greasy Pole competition which was witnessed by hundreds of spectators who thronged the east side of the park was won by Bud Canbury; the canoe race by Mr. Jack Lumley and A. Liddle.

Spectators were well satisfied with the ambitious effort of the South End Athletic Club to provide to the city one of the largest open air gatherings seen for some time.

During the afternoon's programme a softball tournament was successfully staged with the local Belleville Fruit winning the fine large silver trophy donated by the club. The trophy was presented by Dr. J. Albert Faulkner on the grounds.

The series was of the knockout nature with the Mountain View Maids defeating the Maple Leafs of Belleville and the Belleville Fruit downing the South End girls in the first round.

In the final series the Fruit lassies showed the superiority by defeating the Maids 17 to 6. Bob Lewis was on the hilltop for the winners while Ila Wood pitched for the losing nine.

All of the games were umpired by George Clapper and thoroughly enjoyed by the large crowd who attended the Labor Day gathering.

The game was one of the features presented by the Liberals' Association who held a highly successful basket picnic on the park grounds. The day was enlivened for young and old by the numerous attractions which were offered. A regular hornest to goodness clown on the grounds kept young and old in screams of laughter, while the candy scramble and other attractions offered a pleasing variety to the day's entertainment.

R. C. M. P. Uncover Thriving Drug Business Among Chinese and Eastern Indians of British Columbia—Test Case Before Courts.

By PERCY C. RICHARDS

Central Press Canadian Writer

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 2 — "How much am I bid for this lot?" the bailiff's assistant asked a group of farmers as he held up a small sack of chaff.

Strange as it may seem, this simple auctioneering phrase led to the uncovering of a thriving drug racket by members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police—a racket that is entirely new to this country, but one which would have proved of a highly dangerous character had it not been for the bids that were made for the sack of chaff.

There were some East Indians among the group facing the bailiff's assistant, who were in charge of the chattels on a farm that had gone into liquidation. The bid rose to $4 for the sack of chaff, and it was knocked down to a turbaned Sikh.

Some days later the bailiff's assistant received the story of how he had sold a sack of chaff for $4, and of how, a few days later, he had been approached by another East Indian who said he would have paid $25 for it.

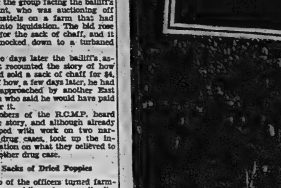
Members of the R.C.M.P. heard of the story, and were immediately swamped with work on two narcotic drug cases. Both cases led to investigation on what they believed to be another drug case.

Secrets of Buried Poppies

Two of the officers turned farmers for a while and eventually discovered that through the large rural district of Victoria, adjacent to Victoria, there had been planted in three different farms fields and fields of poppies.

They were also keen in discovering that the sack of chaff sold for $4 had been nothing more or less than dried poppy heads that formed the farm that had been auctioned.

The poppy heads were analyzed and found to contain eight per cent morphine.



However, the police faced a difficult problem. The crop of this grass-like plant, which is a highly dangerous drug, but it is illegal to harvest them, for only licensed farms harvested their crops surreptitiously, a sacrifice might be played off during the time of the night and sent to one of the lumber mills along the coast, being operated by Indians.

Here the poppy heads were sold to the Sikhs or Hindus and made into a tea, which has a stimulating effect just the same as cocaine or morphine.

Related smiling, however, eventually rewarded the two officers assigned to the case, and they succeeded to solve a trickster of the poppies, valued at more than $1,000 and arrested three East Indians.

Can Poppies Be Grown?

The case is now in the courts and takes the form of a test case to see whether poppies can be grown in such large quantities and in acreage manner. With some ten acres of poppies under cultivation, is ready to be seen what a menace this new racket would have become.

Opium poppies under cultivation near Victoria. Inset shows poppy heads enlarged. The seed pods are brewed into a tea, which contains eight per cent. morphine, and when drunk has a stimulating effect on those who drink it.

Already the R.C.M.P. are kept busy tracing narcotics smuggled into this country from China, without having the cultivation of drugs contend with in Canada. Fortunately, Vancouver Island is the only place in Canada where opium poppies can be successfully grown so that the range of activity is confined.

Value of poppy heads is placed at $24 a ton, so that there is fabulous wealth represented in the ten acres of poppies now under cultivation here.

Aggravating the drug situation is the cunning manner in which refined drugs are smuggled into the country and concealed here.

Children Sold Opium

Just prior to the discovery of the truckload of poppy heads, Canadian officers traced a shipment of opium to Vancouver Island. There it was lost for a while, but eventually uncovered in the possession of two children of the molasses-like opium were found concealed in cans of chicken pea.

Recently an amusing incident occurred in which four boys raised enough money to go to the theatre, but when the Chinese attached themselves to the extent of several thousand dollars. This incident also happened in the Port Alberni district. The boys found an East Indian with Chinese partners pointed on them. They stopped a Chinese and four boys with $1,000 in possession. He held them "sausage" whereupon the boys sold a kid to the Chinese for fifty cents. They sold another kid to a Hungarian for $1.75, and took the remainder home, where it was discovered that they contained opium. Police are now trying to locate the source of supply.

★ STAR GAZING ★

By BOB McSTAY

Central Press Canadian Writer

The transatlantic migration of Hollywood stars to England has been a summer phenomenon. Approximately twenty well-established picture players have crossed the Atlantic. To name just a few, the Hollywood expeditionary force has included Bebe Daniels, Thelma Todd, Gloria Swanson, Jeanette MacDonald, Constance Cummings and Sally Eilers. The male contingent has Boris Karloff, Fredric Marshall, Victor McLaglen, Ronald Colman and Charles Laughton, all the men named are big shakedown who rose to cinematic fame in Hollywood; all the feminine stars named had never appeared in a British film before.

Now that the technical equipment for British picture production is on a par with that of Hollywood, many of the expatriated English players are looking for home because there is where their hearts have always been. Several big films of the silent screen have taken the eastward passage because they feel that there are greater opportunities for the art as called artistry in England. The present financial condition of many Hollywood producers and the disturbing reports of talking pictures also strengthen that ancient urge for self-preservation. As one British producer says: "Hollywood's out of such eminent American players does not mean being organized to surround an all-American complex; the players possessed to be sold in the market and our bids were sufficient to command their services."

To cap the situation, the report has been confirmed that Douglas Fairbanks and his son, Douglas Jr., have decided to remain in England where a new $1,000,000 producing concern is now being organized according to the British press, this sees the end of Hollywood's supremacy and the beginning of England's leadership in the film industry. Among the "British stars who have been invited to throw in their lot with the Fairbanks are Charles Chaplin, Clive Brook, Ronald Colman, Herbert Marshall, Reginald Denny, Charles Laughton, Colman and Brook have already completed their desire to settle down in their native England. It also accounts for the decision of Mr. Chaplin to doubtedly leave a tremendous gap in the Hollywood colony, a colony who have been noted for their masculinity.

The sentiment which prompted Leslie Howard to wear the military uniform in a trunk all these years and refuse to have long hair and stand lay in the mind of the old lady who thus addressed him: "Young man, your hair is might come in handy some day." When the property department of the Warner Brothers studios got short of measuring Mr. Howard for the uniform that he has to wear in an "Captured," he said: "Why not have me up over, I've got one in the trunk somewhere. Suppose I dig it out."

So he dug it out and the trimworn bit of a lieutenant in the King's Own Scottish Borderers admirably, with a minor alteration here and there, for the somewhat different registration it were about what was needed for the German officer in the picture. The uniform which has been adapted from the short story, "Fellow Prisoners," written by Sir Phillip Gibbs, the famous English war correspondent and novelist.

Leslie Howard was a soldier before he was an actor and had been a bank clerk before that. Not until he was discharged after the armistice did he don sock and buskin for his first theatrical role, that of Percy in "Peg O' My Heart," then touring the English provinces. A Broadway and American stage debut in 1920, Leslie Howard has gained as great a popularity in motion picture circles under the direction of the talkies a few years ago.

Strangely enough, the most successful British films on this continent have been the musical comedy or operetta type and, judging from film trade-paper reports, "Bitter Sweet" appears to be the most auspicious in music, theme and photography. As a stage play, seen in Canada with the blonde and beauteous Evelyn Laye in the leading role, the stage version charmed multitudes, but a picture, it should multiply that fine reception. Once again, the versatility of Noel Coward is indicated. First the English matinee idol, then his Private Lives" transferred to the screen, a hilarious comedy of domestic tempers, and now the author's musical beauty of "Cavalcade." The third is "Bitter Sweet," just a simple story of a great love in which a husband gives his life in the protection of his wife's honor. Much of a perfect pattern of loveliness lies in the melodies. It is the first starring picture of Anna Neagle, the little chorus girl of two years ago, who snatched the cinematic plum when even Evelyn Laye, the star of the stage piece, was reaching for the film role.

SUSPENDED BALL PLAYER TESTS STRENGTH OF ATHLETIC UNION BY ACTION IN CIVIL COURTS

Widespread Interest In "Test" Case—Result Will Have Far-Reaching Effect—Judge Doubts A. A. U. of C. Has the Right to Declare Player a Professional With Hearing

SUSPENDED IN ONE LEAGUE, PLAYERS NOW REPORTED PLAYING IN ANOTHER

With amateur sports in Canada at the crossroads of the professional-amateur rift, which states the coming A.A.U. of C. conclave in Winnipeg assuredly is the face, wide interest throughout the Dominion is being manifested in the current McNulty test case in Toronto. The following article gives the facts of the case and includes some hitherto unrevealed details; another instance of the Man on the Street's desire for more, apparently, than do the official facts.

By ARCHIBALD NEWMAN

Special to the Ontario Intelligencer

Toronto, Sept. 3—Has the amateur athletic union of Canada "cut its own throat" in its attempt to ban a player from taking part in amateur sports? Has the association by declare a man a non-amateur with all the legal rights in the way of a sue on his character?

Such questions are being asked, presume to label all players who leave its fold to play in professional leagues as "technical professionals"?

And why have the Ottawa and district branch of the A.A.U. of C. taken their act in allowing at least one player, suspended at the instance of the Toronto and District Basketball Association, to join the Perth, Ont., team under the jurisdiction of the Ontario A.B.A.?

These are the questions Canadian sportsmen are demanding an answer for, as a result of Dr. "Yay, sport" Hall's refusal to grant Nobby Hall from Hamilton, who is seeing the Toronto Senior Amateur Baseball League, McNulty playing under the colors of the Danforth club. These players did not ask for, and did not gain, a release from the T.A.A. of C. with the result that that organization suspended them, and passed on the suspension to the Toronto and District Ontario Amateur Baseball Association. The latter body upheld the suggestions and referred the matter to the Ontario branch of the A.A.U. of C., who likewise okayed the ruling and recommended the suspensions to the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada. No action has been taken by the latter body as yet.

All this was done with the utmost of secrecy. No statement was made public, and it is only by inference that the players can be said to have been suspended for joining the outlaw league.

On the other hand is Ed. Finley, who appeared for the A.A.U. of C. before Judge McClung in answer to the demand of McNulty's counsel, Frank Regan, that some explanation be given for the action of the union. Finley claimed, according to the sponsors of the "test case," that the A.A.U. of C. officials think it's a matter of "le rot est le roi," in other words the union is a law unto itself, and that it's above itself the authority to say what is "to be or not to be" in other Canadian clubs, without so much as making any explanation of its actions.

For the only advice Joe McNulty got thereon of the colleagues were given that they had been suspended from participating in amateur baseball, which means in the final analysis from all amateur sports sponsored by the A.A.U. of C., was no appearance in the daily press of news articles purporting to be advertised from "official" sources.

No explanation was given of the action of the T.A.B.A. in spite of the demand that McNulty made that he be given a definite reason for their action.

Second Judge Refused Confidences

Apart from the fact that McNulty was granted an interim injunction by Judge McClung, which restrained officials of the A.A.U. of C., Ontario branch, from preventing him in engaging in amateur baseball for a further week and also apart from the fact that the A.A.U. of C. has not yet passed on his suspension, the outlook for his participation in rugby and hockey this year looks dark. Immediately following the limit of the first injunction, a second judge, Mr. Justice Kelly, refused the application of continuance of the injunction. His lordship said he was satisfied that the A.A.U. of C. had every right to suspend McNulty.

In opposing the application Fred G. McBrien, M.P.P., stated that Mc-Nulty was playing baseball with amateur sport in Ontario, where 100,000 farms are being considered acreage of paper.

The story in a nutshell, as told us by Garrett Frankland, secretary of the Toronto Senior Amateur Baseball League, is as follows: Joe McNulty, star baseball, rugby and hockey player, is a registered member of the T.A.B.A. in the beginning of the season. When the Eastern Baseball team in Toronto owing allegiance to the T.A.B.A. disbanded with the playing conditions obtaining under the T.A.B.A. and organized Inter Leagues, McNulty joined the colors of the Danforth club. These players did not ask for, and did not gain, a release from the T.A. A. of C. with the result that that organization suspended them, and passed on the suspension to the Toronto and Ontario Amateur Baseball Association. The latter body upheld the suggestions and referred the matter to the Ontario branch of the A.A.U. of C., who likewise okayed the ruling and recommended the suspensions to the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada. No action has been taken by the latter body as yet.

All this was done with the utmost of secrecy. No statement was made public, and it is only by inference that the players can be said to have been suspended for joining the outlaw league.

FOXBORO'S HEAVY LOSS

Foxboro fire sufferers have the sympathy of the entire community in the loss they have undergone in the conflagration which has swept away a large portion of the centre of the village. One of the prettiest villages in Ontario, Foxboro, has had a number of fires which have threatened the place, but efforts of the villagers have hitherto succeeded in preventing the spread of the flames beyond certain limits. But today's fire was the largest and most disastrous in the village's history.

Fortunately the villagers with the aid of firemen from Stirling and Belleville were able to stem the advance of the flames towards morning. Without any means of pumping water it was a foregone conclusion that the chief duty was to save the untouched property. This they were successful in doing after there had been caused a loss of fifty or seventy-five thousand dollars.

The question has again come up forcibly of fire protection in the rural districts. There have been a number of bad fires this year in small villages and the need of some form of protection is making itself felt. Surely there will be serious consideration of some other method of coping with outbreaks than the bucket brigade. The problem is a big one and one requiring much thought to devise some satisfactory way.

ART IN THE STREETS

Art's exuberant carnival in Washington Square folds its tents at sundown tonight. This is the fourth show in the open-air bargain-counter series. Each recurrence seems more hectic than the last; and if discveries of consequence be scarcer than lark puddings, at any rate there can be none to gainsay that the occasion is, as usual, lushly upholstered. Artists, refusing "no reasonable offer" stand patiently by to invite the co-operation of those who lined up since 7 a.m. in the hope of getting to barter "useful merchandise."

Let experts in Bohemiana aver that, even with Macdougal Alley and Greenwich Village in eclipse cannot as yet quite summon the magnificent spontaneity, the seasoned casualness, of St. Michael's Bridge, Left Bank or Rond's renowned rag fair; that art in the streets of New York hasn't yet climbed, quite, to the lordly status of the still in the streets of Prague, Odedigo, sir, give us time! And surely not in the Quartier Latin itself could be found a more lavish overplus of yieldings out of what has been termed the "rowdy rathskeller" of the subconscious.

It may strike you now and then as almost indecent—certainly enough it by publishap! Artists exultantly in the sunshine of the pavement—to pry into these unburthenings of mankind's troubled psyche. With, straightforward, so gross a din in your ears of cocophonous reds and purples, with so strong a hogo in yur nostrils of miasmic greens and yellows ("a garden of evil that stale vessel of Sancho Panza would say), you feel impelled to cary: "Enough!" But the floodgates are open: the turbulent, naive, unbridling confessions will not now be stayed.

Trudging these cluttered sidewalks, we surprise our neighbor's soul stripped of custodian clothes, naked as space and eternity; whilst vendors, making the most of an uncalendared holiday, sell ice cream or go about with blade magnificently displayed on ear for corn? Plain wherewithal. That may indeed seem banquet, in a stringent hour.—New York Times.

HARMSWORTH RACE

The Harmsworth Trophy Race is again a thing of the past. This year's race did not have the thrills and excitement which marked the last competition when Kaye Don was the challenger. This year the British boat was of an unique type as to length and weight as well as construction.

What effect the two race victory of Wood will have over future construction of boats remains to be seen. Wood stuck by the heavy craft and, in Monday's race he did not let Miss America go her limit, merely allowing her to keep her place in the lead.

THIS DISCONTENT

The thing that never happened,
What promise it unfolds!
The gift life never gave us,
What strong allure it holds!

For we are seekers ever,
Always the fields afar
Are shining to our vision
And lovely as a star.

The beauty that eludes us,
The goal we cannot reach,
The song within our bosoms
Which is too sweet for speech.

Are parts of this, our portion:
To love the beckoning quest,
To hold of lesser value
The goods we have possessed.

And by this trait man rises;
This restless discontent
First set him on his journey
From slime to firmament!

THE RECORD "MAMMOTH CHEESE"

One of the exhibits at the New York State Fair at Syracuse is to be a "mammoth cheese" weighing 12,000 lbs. that is expected to open the eyes of the natives, says Brockville Recorder-Times which goes on to show that this Syracuse effort is a puny one compared to what Canada has done, and points out that this cheese, large though it is, will be a mere pygmy in comparison with one that Canada sent to the World's Fair in Chicago 40 years ago and that cheese, it is worth remarking, was a product of the eastern part of Ontario, still famous for its dairy production.

"This reminds me," writes G. A. Marson, of Montreal, to the Gazette, "of the mammoth cheese exhibit at Canada, which formed part of the Canadian exhibit and which I saw at the World's Columbian Exhibition at Chicago in 1893. This enormous mass of cheese was manufactured at the Dominion Experimental Dairy Station, at Perth, Ont., under the supervision of Prof. James W. Robertson, who was then acting as Dominion Dairy Commissioner. As much as 207,200 pounds of milk were used in making it, that quantity being equal to the milk of 10,000 cows for one day in September. The cheese weighed 22,000 pounds net. It was encased in the mould or hoop of steel in which it was pressed and a pressure of more than two hundred tons was applied to make it perfectly solid. It measured 22 feet in circumference by six feet in height. A special truck was made for transporting it through Great Britain after it left Chicago. It was later sold to Mr. T. J. Lipton, of London, England, who exhibited it as a feature of his business in every large city of Great Britain and Ireland."

Syracuse Fair may have its 12,000-lb. cheese, but Canada made and displayed one of 22,000 lbs. 40 years ago. And that record does not seem to have been exceed ed since that time.

BELLEVILLE FAIR, 1933, fades away into the back corridors of memory—the last exhibition of the depression years, during which the officials, with County backing and round help from Sept the old flag flying on Belleville Fair, and never missed a year. Belleville Fair has emerged from the trying ordeal of several years of unfavorable business and employment conditions with honor and not too serious scars. Other Fairs just folded up and quit. Belleville Fair, which has been always keep the old flag flying as the logical place to exhibit each fall the prideful products of Central Ontario including, of course, the best part of it, the Bay of Quinte section. A Central Ontario Exhibition is just as important and necessary as the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto, and can be made very beneficial and interesting. Belleville business men readily realize the importance of looking ahead and building up the Belleville Fair year by year into provincial importance.

BELLEVILLE FAIR, 1933 model, was entirely satisfactory, making good in spite of handicaps. Belleville Fair, 1934 model, should begin at once, with an augmented staff, on its way to the Biggest and Best standard which must be achieved, on the road to Central Ontario and Provincial status. Toronto Fair has achieved National status largely because of the efforts in that direction of Toronto business men. There is room and demand for a Central Ontario Fall Fair and Belleville is the logical place for it and equipped with the best grounds and buildings. The same holds good for a Provincial Fair here in the future.

Starting Beauty Contests Young

The search for beauty goes on apace with more than usual energy at the moment in the United States. Here we have two charming prize winners, the 18-months-old one-year-old Barbara Coleman, of Philadelphia, who was selected as winning baby in the annual Ocean City, N.J., baby parade. Little Barbara was received with royal honors by Miss Iona Beverly, of the same city, who was "Queen" of the parade. A beauteous lens-full for any camera.

Sept. 5, 1893

Passers by the hospital lot yesterday afternoon stopped and asked the reason for the presence of the police power and they soon found out that there was to be a game of ball between teams composed of printers and cigar-makers, and they joined the crowd and took seats up on the sidewalk. The latter had sent forth a sweeping challenge to play any nine printers in the city and they were promptly taken up. Some one told these cigar-makers that they could play ball and now they are looking for that party. The printers wanted to go to bat first as they were afraid they would not get an innings if their opponents got in before them. They won the toss. The umpire was a little "careless" in the first few innings, but braced up and did better towards the latter part of the game. It was terrible slaughter as the scores will show. The "wrog rollers" cut frightful gashes in the atmosphere in their endeavour to locate the "leather", but they did not find it often enough to pull the game out. For three innings in succession a mark like this "0" represented the sum total of their runs and in the meantime the typos were knocking out the runs in right shape. A tall slim printer, who was playing first base, ran against the ball while it was in motion and "killed the rest". Howe for the "makers" did good work behind the bat and Macdiarmid in the rame position for the printers, played ball. But this is not the last of it—there will be another conflict. Following are the names of the players: Cigar-makers — F. Kinnerly, F. McPlarane, G. Thompson, F. Howe, G. Fortune, H. Thompson, A. Williams, F. Bruce, R. Mackie. Printers—Phil. Harrison, J. Grove, T. Macdiarmid, J. Davidson, Lou Pringle, H. Austin, E. T. Cherry, W. Reid, G. Thompson. The score was 16 to 36 in favor of the printers. Batteries — Printers, Grove, Cherry, Macdiarmid; cigar-makers, Thompson, Williams, Fortune, Howe. Umpire, W. Stewart.

50 YEARS AGO

Sept. 5, 1883

Since last Wednesday, August 29th, about one hundred and seventy militiamen and laymen have been assembled in our city at Bridge Street Methodist Church discussing the question of Methodist Union. Never in the Methodist Church probably has there been such a discussion. Not a man who occupied the arena of debate, except two, professed to be opposed to organic union—all the rest declared themselves ready to the unification of Methodism. It was not to be supposed that on such an important matter there were not as many interests involved, that all would be of one mind. Hence the subject was looked at from every possible standpoint with a view to see whether it were possible that a union could be effected with as little inconvenience as possible. Not a few were of the opinion that the difficulties were insurmountable. The probable effect on the finances of the church which may cause privation to the missionaries and widows and orphan children, awakened many interests, while the introduction of general superintendency and the introduction of lay delegation to the annual conferences, has been the occasion of much debate. Happily, however, the question has now been settled and though it cannot be said that all have acted in favor of the basis, yet there is a sufficiently large vote—more than three-fourths — to justify the hope that the unification of Methodism in Canada will become a grand fact. The debate has been conducted with great ability. Both sides have ably defended their respective positions, and though as in all exciting debates there is often necessarily more or less of personality, still there was not much to complain of. Ministers are gentlemen and withal they are men and when a good bit was given or a nice point made, there could be no fear but they enjoyment which broke the tedium of monotony. It was near midnight last night, Sept. 3rd., when the vote was taken and soon there was a crowd at the telegraph office to convey the news to all parts of the Dominion. Tomorrow will be a memorable day, as representatives from four branches of the Methodist family will meet in the Methodist Episcopal Tabernacle, enter into a formal union and form a discipline for the United Church. The eyes of Methodism, not only Episcopal to Canada for the last few days and now that the matter has been so far consummated, we can fancy we hear the universal doxology. The four bodies compose the Methodist Church of Canada, the Methodist Episcopal Church ,the Primitive Methodist and the Bible Christian Churches and form the Union General Conference.

EXCITED HORSE SITS ON LAP OF MAN

New York, Sept. 5.—(AP)—James Glover held a horse on his lap and then rode it home in a taxi.

Glover tied his horse to a telephone pole one last night and went into a beer saloon to refresh himself with a pint brew.

When he came out, he clambered into the saddle and said "giddap" with the confidence that the horse got away to a running start.

But he soon reached the end of the journey, when he turned up to untie from the telephone pole. The jerk landed Glover on the sidewalk, where he promptly sat in his lap.

An ambulance surgeon patched him up.

BOY BURIES BIKES HE HAS STOLEN

TORONTO, Sept. 5— A 15-year-old boy was held on four charges of bicycle theft Saturday night after Detectives Albert Johns and Detective John Atkinson had found a secret cache of bicycles from under the floor of a shed at the rear of 34 Elizabeth Street house, and other parts which had been buried in the cellar of the house.

One bicycle which had been stolen only a few hours previous was dug up, the police state. It is said that the boy had a system of stealing bicycles dismembering them, burying parts and then changing identities with the remaining two vehicles when he wanted one for a ride. The case is still under investigation.

Would you make a contract with your business partner whereby, following his death, your income from the business would be reduced 85%.

Obviously You Would Not.

Yet isn't it true that you now have just such an arrangement with your "home partner — your wife?

In other words, assuming that 85% of your income is earning power and 15% from investments, is not your financial plan at home exactly the same as under such an arrangement with your business partner?

Probably you have realized all this, but could see no way to provide an adequate income against the inevitable loss of your earning power. PLOW HORSE WINS SWIM

Old Dobbin Is Champion In Labor Day Regatta

Portland, Ore., Sept. 5.—(CP)—Just a plow horse 24 hours ago, "Old Dobbin" was a champion today.

For "Old Dobbin" won the first equine swimming contest ever held in this section and sponsors of the Oswego Lake Labor Day Regatta proclaimed him the titleholder of the northwest. As the horses lined up on the beach for the start, several entries from riding academies, sleek and shiny, pranced about like queens in capsules. But "Old Dobbin" and another of his kind stood steady, paying little attention to the proceedings. Riders took their places on the horses' mounts. The starter's gun boomed and the horses were urged into the water. One course was a buoy over several hundred feet from shore and back again.

"Old Dobbin" needed little urging. With the same steadiness he had shown on shore, the broad-backed work horse went into the lead and was never headed. Rounding the buoy he started on the homward stretch, swimming just as easily as if it was an everyday occurrence.

He won all by himself. Despite the crowd's cheers for the Pts. and his rider, Geraldine Sidney "Old Dobbin" still maintained his composed demeanor.

DON'T LET COMMON CONSTIPATION DULL THE JOY OF LIVING

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brings Relief

Constipation takes the sunshine out of your days. It may bring headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sleeplessness, sallow skins, pimples. If neglected, it can seriously impair health.

Fortunately, you can avoid this condition by eating a delicious cereal. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides two things needed to overcome common constipation—"bulk" and vitamin B. ALL-BRAN is also a rich source of blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetables. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears out the intestinal wastes.

How much better than dosing yourself with patent medicines. Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. With each meal in chrunkle cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

ROYALS WIN TWO GAMES 6 RUN RALLY

Two Canadian Teams Very Close Together As Result

3 CONTENDERS

(By Herbert Barter, Associated Press Sports Writer).

It looked as if the International League would have to wait until the last four days of the season to determine whether Toronto Maple Leafs or Montreal Royals will gain the second northern play-off position.

The Royals' double victory over Rochester yesterday, coupled with Toronto's even split with Buffalo in Bisons, left the two Canadian outfits only 2 1-2 games apart and facing a five-game series with one another starting Thursday and winding up Sunday, the final day of the regular season. Buffalo, a game and a half behind Montreal, still has an outside chance of winning the second qualifying place.

Standing of three three contenders today are:

Club	.. ..	.. ..	Won Lost
Toronto	.. ..	.. ..	80 79
Montreal	.. ..	.. ..	78 80
Buffalo	.. ..	.. ..	77 84

The champion Newark Bears and Baltimore Orioles definitely have clinched the two southern play-off posts and Rochester is "in" as the top of northern representative.

Chuy Cayden limited the Red Wings to six hits as Montreal took the first game from Rochester 4-2 and his triple and Manager Oscar Roettger's double featured a three run rally in the fifth inning that really clinched the game. Bill McAfee and Jim Lindsay allowed only three hits in the nightcap but the Royals used these with four passes to score five runs in the second and third frames, and win 6-3.

A six run rally in the seventh innings enabled Toronto beat Buffalo in the opening game of their double header 12-9, but the Bisons came back to take the nightcap 9-0 as Phil Gallivan allowed only six hits.

Nearly 8,000 spectators saw the wild first game which took nearly three hours to play. Each team used four pitchers and 14 men all told and made 14 hits apiece. Seventeen bases on balls were handed out, the Leafs drawing 10. Ollie Tucker of Buffalo hit his 26th homer in the seventh.

NEW TORONTO WINS IN 9TH

Kingston Ponies Surprised In Squeeze Play At Kingston

Kingston, Sept. 5 (CP)—New Toronto, champions of the West Toronto League, pulled the unexpected here Saturday afternoon when they defeated Kingston Ponies, champions of the Central Ontario League by the score of 2 to 1 in the first of the O.S.A.A. senior playdowns. It was only in the ninth inning of the beautifully pitched battle that New Toronto squeezed over the winning run to give them an edge in the series.

Stafford and Jamieson netted in masterful fashion, each only allowing only four hits. It was a nice game to win and a tough one to lose, for "Sammy" Jamieson, ace hurler of the Ponies, after allowing two hits in the first inning, was not hit safely again until the eighth. Stafford was just as good, pitching a no-hit game up to the sixth when two hits scored the only run.

New Toronto secured two hits in the first inning, but were halted when McQuaid's great throw to the plate cut off Dean. In the third inning the visitors scored their first run without a hit. Eisner hit to Compeau, who booted the ball to left field and the runner went second to second on the play. Stafford rolled to Stone, Eisner taking third. Evans hit-hand to Compeau who came over to second to get the ball and retire the batter, but Eisner scored.

The game developed into a duel pitching battle until the sixth when Ponies evened the count. Quinn slashed a three-bagger to centre for the first Kingston hit and scored on Jamieson's hard single through short. Vince was safe when Stafford dropped his bunt fly but the next three men went down in order.

After that McQuaid scratched a hit in the eighth and J. Arnieli singled in the seventh, but fine fielding, especially by Adams halted their rallies.

New Toronto won the game in the ninth. Globe led off with a three-bagger to centre. McGillop struck out, but on a nicely worked squeeze play, Globe came home. Stone as Adams tapped a slow roller to Smith who retired Adams at first. Holdesby struck out and then Stafford proceeded to lighten up after allowing a single by Arnieli in the last of the ninth.

Victorias Stage Rally in Ninth to Defeat by 9-7 Crystalacs Labor Day

Exhibition Game Arranged To Keep Team In Condition

BLAKER'S HITTING

Staging a ninth inning rally an augmented team playing under the colors of the Belleville Victorias defeated the local Crystalacs by the score of 9 to 7, Labor Day morning in an exhibition game played at the Fair Ground. The winning team's roster consisted of members of the Belleville Nationals intermingled with local intermediates and all-star juniors. The Art Young-led Crystalac juniors led the handpicked team presented by Manager Fanning for eight innings only to falter in the ninth, when the Vics scored five runs and assured themselves of victory before a small crowd of fans.

The exhibition game was arranged by Manager Young to endeavor keeping his champion Crystalacs in condition for their coming Belleville-Toronto series. The local kids started Frank Lee on the hill-top and after hurling four innings he retired in favour of "Rusty" Langstaff, who incidentally blanked the senior intermediates for three straight frames. "Wild Bill" Hammett finished the game on the mound and was credited with the loss when the older players staged their final rally in the ninth. Bud Wilkins, Ernie Smith, Earl Bawden and Ralph Dey all hurled for the Chummy Gerow-coached clan with Dey being credited with the win. "Mace" Rigby was replaced by Semark in the fourth inning of a nonchalant attempt made by Rigby in the field.

Lionel Blaker led the hitters of the day with a triple, a double and a single. "Piper" Latchford also hit for three bases while Murney Green and Ioll counted doubles for the winners. "Doc" Over with three singles led the juniors while Sinfield also rounded three one base blows. Scro collected a pair with Dean Ford hitting for a double. The local juniors journey to Toronto on September 9th with the return game being played in Belleville on the 13th.

The line-ups:

Score by innings:

Victorias 0 3 2 0 0 0 0 0 3—9 runs
Crystalacs 0 0 0 3 4 0 0 0 0—7 runs

Umpires—Colling and Marsole.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

If history ever repeated itself in the sport world it was at Kingston last Saturday when the Ponies bowed to Bob Weatherup's New Toronto champions by the score of 2 to 1. About this time last year the Ponies lost a game in the senior play-downs against the identically same club and in about the same manner. The Daley-coached clan were merely trying to hit the ball out of the lot and ended up by popping out to the infielders.

Baseball is a queer game. The Wednesday previous the Ponies lambasted the offerings of "Russ" Kitchen to all parts of the ball park in Napanee. New Kitchen had plenty of speed and a fine assortment of curves. Three days later along comes a left-hander from New Toronto who just boasts a fair but fair control and a glove. His name Cole trip happened to be Stafford. All Stafford did all afternoon was throw 'em down the middle alley and believe it or not the Ponies hitters were practically helpless. What puzzles us is how a team of hitters like the Ponies can assume the right-about-face complex as did the Ponies from Wednesday to Monday.

Most any hurler in the C. O. B. L. could spot Stafford cards and spades and then show him the way home. The Ponies couldn't do it. The keys coasted through to the batter's championship but were "in the money" seemed to falter. Knowing them as we do, however, they should yet come through. Rap on the outside looking in. It looks as though they're not moneyed ball players. In the ninth inning the Toronto southpaws pulled just about the slickest squeeze play we have seen in many a moon though.

"Jake" Vanover's Picton intermediates apparently experienced little trouble in making it two straight at Yarker last Saturday, the score was 10 to 5 for the Prince Edward County crew. A slight change has been made in the third round of the intermediate O. H. A. A. playoffs. Picton journey to Peterboro on Wednesday with the return game being played at Picton next Saturday. Big Ken Church, hurling his first game in ten days, stopped the Yarker crew, Earlier in the season the Picton club dropped a closely played exhibition game in Peterboro. The Vanover crew are playing a much better class of ball now, however, and a real series is assured.

Although Monday morning's junior-intermediate-senior tilt did not attract many fans a real practice was enjoyed by Art Young's charges. Skipper Young had all of his available players in the contest and in return Manager Fanning used four hurlers against the kids. Two right-handers and two southpaws labored on the mound against the kids so as to give them plenty of pitching variation from the hilltop. The kids-out was thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated by all. The score of 10 to 7 about indicates play. The intermediates outhit their kid rivals 11 to 11. The secret of the win was the ability of the older players to run bases. It is to be hoped that some of the younger players had their eyes wide open and learned some little baseball during the contest.

Gar Wood, the "Old Fox" of the motor boat racing world, experienced little trouble in defending the Harmsworth Trophy with his Miss America X, against the English challenger, Miss Britain III. As was expected the "grey thatched" American ran romped home by an impressive wins over his smaller English rival. Kaye Don, Pilot Paine, the challenger, more than made a race of it during the second heat on Monday, but a few hundred yards separated the two boats at the finishing line.

Yesterday's South End A. C. aquatic meet held at Victoria Park was a most successful affair and glowing words of praise were heard by the large crowd present. Without fear of contradiction the "greasy pole" event surpassed all others. The other events, including the soft ball, surf riding, swimming and paint race were also thoroughly enjoyed. There is no reason why the day could not be staged annually, we'd suggest.

The recent sweep of the series by the Giants over the Braves should settle the issue in the National League. It now looks like the Senators and the Braves for the world's series. Oh yes, and what opened today in "the little red school house."

HIGHER PRICES OF GRAIN

Chicago, Sept. 5.—Higher prices for grains prevailed early today. An unexpected sharp upturn in wheat quotations at Liverpool was an outstanding feature and was attributed largely to Argentine reports of critical crop conditions because of drought. Opening ½ to 1 cent higher, prices afterward reacted somewhat. Corn started unchanged to ½ up, and subsequently sagged.

GAR WOOD IS WINNER BY 22 SECONDS TIME

Scott-Paine Only About Quarter Mile In Rear In Second Race

FIRST RACE

Miss Britain Almost Upsets During Labor Day Race

Marine City, Mich., Sept. 5—Less than a quarter mile ahead of a tiny, rocketing craft of metal driven by a man who seemed possessed of iron nerves and who took chances which sent thousands of spectators into screams, Gar Wood yesterday drove his big Miss America X to another Harmsworth victory.

He gained victory, but another man gained the plaudits of the spectators for driving one of the most sensational, thrilling, hazardous races ever seen in a Harmsworth.

To Hubert Scott-Paine, red-haired, pug-jawed, bare-headed Southampton boat builder, went the cheers of admiration.

For 33 of the 35 miles Scott-Paine drove his little, pitching Ingersoll craft into the foaming wake of Miss America. Time after time the miles-long lines of spectators gasped and screamed as his boat leaped into the air, plunged into a smother of spray or rolled on her beam.

Like a Porpoise

And time after time Scott-Paine stuck to it, drove hey on, seemingly the elfinsen of the gods. Time after time he went through conditions which promised disaster, yet was spared. His little craft looked like a crazy porpoise, twisting, jumping and bravely clinging to the big defender, calmly attempting to overcome its lead, gallantly trying for victory.

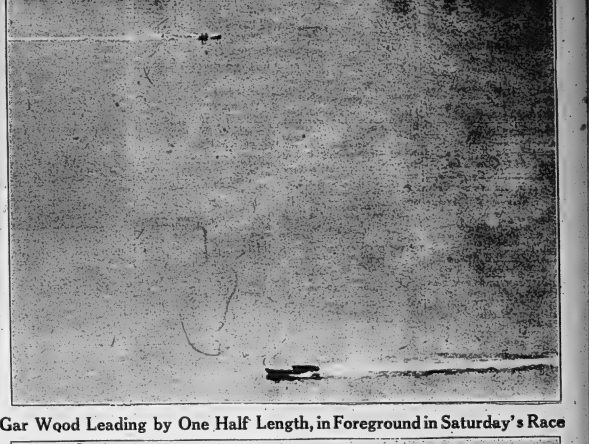
Scott-Paine was the race.

No records were broken. Gar Wood was subpressed at any time. The Algonac boat builder did not need once to reach any one of the three-lap records which Kaye Don had hung up. His highest record of the day was no faster than Don's average in 1931.

100-Mile Speed Admitted

Although the record showed his top speed for the final lap was 87.215 the figures represented the average for seven nautical miles around an ellipse. On the final straightaways his little metal challenger was roaring at terrific speed which veteran speed boat men said must have exceeded 100 miles an hour.

Loses First Race



Algonac, Mich, Sept. 4—Defeated in the opening heat of the Harmsworth Trophy race, Hubert Scott-Paine, British challenger, was hopeful that smoother water would prevail in the second contest with Gar Wood.

The British pilot said that throughout Saturday's opening heat he did not get accustomed to the water. "There was a roll in the water; no surface," he said. "It was impossible to see where the roll began or where it finished."

IRENE PIRIE SWIM WINNER

Becomes Amateur Swim Champion of Canada

Toronto, Sept. 5.—Maintaining her reputation for consistency, 17-year-old Irene Pirie swam into first position and won the women's one-mile amateur swimming championship of the Dominion and the gold trophy for Canada, at the Canadian National Exhibition on Saturday.

The first Canadian girl to win the trophy, she established a record in time, covering the one mile for the Barker Gold Trophy in 25 minutes and 29 seconds, and beating the record of last year's champion, Florence Goudard of Buffalo, by almost a minute. From the beginning she hadn't a competitor and she reaching the finish 50 to 80 yards ahead of her closest opponents. Miss Pirie has finished second last year, and third in 1931.

The race between Betty Baichelor and Martha Gribble was a battle to the finish. Almost the length of the course the two swam side by side, rhythmically and without an much as a second's difference on the stroke. But as Betty neared the finish she pulled ahead of Martha and came up on the finishing float six seconds before her contestant.

All three were members of the Delphinia. Irene and Betty are Toronto girls, but Martha hails from Barrie, and her third place win was the sensation of the race. She has had little training and has only recently come to Toronto in order to be coached.

few inches in the lead. Soon, however, he opened up Miss America's engines sang drew away. Finishing the first lap of the course, he had a lead of three-quarters of a mile, and gradually extended it until he was at the lower end of the course before the British pilot had made the turn at the upper end.

The defender held this margin to the end of the race, and apparently had a wealth of power in reserve as he swung across the line for the finish.

Threat of a thing entry disappeared a few minutes before race time, when Horace E. Dodge's Delphine V, being brought up to the timer's stand preparatory to the start, was destroyed by fire. Neither Bill Horn, in the pilot's seat, nor Clarence (Red) Gallagher, mechanic, was hurt, both leaping from the flaming craft as Horn drove her up on the beach below the lower turn of the Harmsworth course. Horn said he believed a backfire caused the blaze.

ALEXANDER—SOWARDS

Kingston, September 5.—In St. James' Church there was solemnized this morning, the marriage of Helen Patricia, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Sowards, Kingston, and Dr. Frederick Archibald Alexander, of Belleville, son of the late Samuel Alexander and of Mrs. Alexander, Arden, the officiating priest being Rev. Father Feeney, rector of St. Mary's Cathedral.

The bride entered the chapel on the arm of her father, and wore a frock of pale pink organdy cut in long simple lines, with fine bits in of delphinium blue and gloves, shoes and stockings of blue. Her flower bouquet was of roses and delphiniums.

Her bridesmaid, Miss Rita O'Brien Ottawa, wore a blue frock of point d'esprit and a hat of blue felt, and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of pink and blue.

Mrs. John F. Sowards, mother of the bride, wore a tailored dress of grey, a matching hat and a corsage bouquet of roses. Mrs. Samuel Alexander, of Arden, mother of the groom, was in grey with a small hat and a shoulder knot of dark red roses. Mrs. James Sowards, grandmother of the bride wore a black gown and black hat, and carried roses.

After a reception at the Collingwood Golf and Country Club, the bride and groom left for Montreal by motor, whence they will sail for Bermuda on the Lady Rodney, Mrs. Alexander travelling in a navy-blue cloth suit and a turban of the same material. Among the out-of-town guests were— Mr. and Mrs. William McCutcheon, Trenton; and Miss Lena Warren, Deseronto.

BROWNING—TURNER

The marriage was solemnized at St. Andrew's Manse, on Saturday evening at eight o'clock when Hazel Audrey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Turner, became the bride of Mr. Robert Browning, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Browning. Rev. Dr. J. A. Seymour was the officiating clergyman.

The bride wore a graceful gown of Mirlec blue fashioned in jacket effect with matching hat. She carried an arm bouquet of roses.

Miss Aletha Reid was bridesmaid and was smartly attired in wood brown satin and carried roses. Mr. J. Purdy was groomsman.

After the ceremony wedding supper was served at the Belmont; the twenty-five guests being present. The bride and groom will take up residence in this city.

NORRIS—COLDEN

An interesting wedding took place last evening at six o'clock at the home of the bride, when Hannah Eleanor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Colden, became the bride of Mr. Lee David Norris of Sulphide. Rev. I. B. Naylor, pastor of Tabernacle United Church, officiating.

The bride wore a pretty gown of navy blue crepe and her bridesmaid Miss Hannah May Colden was attired in Alice Blue. Mr. Thomas Henry Colden was groomsman.

Supper was served to over sixty guests after the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Norris will reside in Belleville.

THURGOOD—TAYLOR

A very pretty wedding took place at John Street United Church on Monday afternoon at four o'clock, when Miss Louie Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Taylor, was united in marriage to Mr. Harold Thurgood, also of this city. Rev. Robert Hall performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father wore a charming gown of wine chiffon velvet, with gray hat and accessories and carried pink roses.

Mr. E. Sunderland was groomsman.

Wedding music was played by Mr. Leo D. Riggs, organist of the church, and during the signing of the register, Mr. J. D. Bashier sang "Because".

After the ceremony a reception and buffet luncheon was held at the bride's home, Mrs. Taylor mother of the bride, in a fetching gown of mosque blue Parisian lace and wearing a corsage of pink roses, received with the bridal couple, about thirty guests being present. The ground presents to the bridesmaid, was a silver necklace set with a turquoise, and to the groomsman a gold watch chain.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Thurgood left on a honeymoon to be spent at Oak Lake, the bride travelling in a chic grey tweed ensemble. On their return they will reside in Belleville. The bride and groom, both very popular in the city, received many lovely and useful gifts.

Three Canadian Boys Win $5,000 Scholarships

At the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, three Canadians were among the seven boys in North America to win university scholarships donated by the Fisher Body Craftsmen's Guild for building the best miniature model Napoleonic coaches among thousands submitted in this year's competition. R. S. McLaughlin, president of the Canadian section of the Guild, is here seen congratulating the winners who are, from left to right: Richard Guthrie and Donald Tennent, both of London, Ontario; and Joseph Olafson, of Leslie, Saskatchewan. Although only two scholarships were originally offered in Canada, Olafson and Tennent ran a dead heat for the junior division and judges were unable to decide whose coach was the better. Mr. McLaughlin's influence resulted in scholarship awards going to both seniors.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 5.—(CP)—The Standard Mining Market showed little change in today's trading from its movements in the closing days of August and the early part of July last year. The tone was good with some price advances in the speed group, slightly unsteady in the Base Metal and Silver section and firm to strong in the oils. The turn-over was in average summer volume.

Dome and McIntyre were up $1.50 each and Hollinger, Lake Shore, and Wright Hargreaves were unchanged while Teck gained 5, Pioneer 15 and Beaketon and Bidgood turned a dollar each.

Mid-session quotations were 1-8 lower to unchanged, with October trading at 70 1-2, Pioneer at 1.60, Base Metal at 77 3-8 cents, Liverpool prices near the close were 1-16 to 1-8 lower but these quotations were 5-8d to 3-4d above Friday's final values.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 5.—(CP)—Industrial shares were carried a little lower in the final half hour of today's short day at the New York after holding fairly steady through the day. A few strong interlisted shares took losses ranging from fractions to two points. Volume was small.

Walkers' Common sagged 2 to 68, Distillers Seagrams 2 to 27 1-4, Industrial Alcohol 1-4 to 17 3-4.

Nickel fell off in the final trading to close at 221.25 down 50 cents. Smelting was steady. Ford of Canada ads off a point to 15, Brazilian 3-8 shares.

New York, Sept. 5, (AP)—Stocks moved in a dull and lower range today. Pressure was applied by a few sellers in the absence of any buying interest prices worked fractions to around a point lower in late dealings. POLICE COURT

Charged with having housebreaking implements in their possession by night Gordon Monohan and Leo Martin, both of this city, were committed for trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction following their preliminary hearing at which all evidence submitted by the Crown was heard during Tuesday's police court proceedings held before Magistrate Millar.

Monohan and Martin elected trial by judge or jury when arraigned before His Worship last Friday when Harry Mattis, a third member of the trio arrested recently by Constables Evans and Taylor, was sentenced to serve three months in the Ontario Reformatory on a similar charge. The same evidence submitted against Mattis was given by the officers in the Monohan-Martin case.

Gordon Woodcock faced a charge of the theft of an automobile from one Thos. Reith of Hungerford in the same court. He entered a plea of guilty. Woodcock being remanded, in custody, for one week Woodcock was arrested in Toronto on Saturday following an information laid by the local office of the provincial police relating to the theft of the car. He was brought to Belleville yesterday.

B. C. Donnan, K.C., conducted the prosecutions throughout.

BITTEN BY DOG ON WEST STREET

Charles Austin, 29 Charlotte St., reported to the police that he had been severely bitten on the leg by a large police dog while walking along a west side street on Monday. Mr. Austin was taken to the office of Dr. S. Cronk, bleeding profusely from the results of the dog bite and medical attention was administered. The owner of the canine was informed of the incident by the police.

GAMES HELD AT TRENTON ON LABOR DAY

Dorothy Gilbert And Bob Schroder Swim Winners

Trenton, Sept. 5 (Special)—Perfect weather conditions prevailed for the Labor Day celebration in Trenton yesterday, sponsored by the Unemployed Association. Sports, ball games, races and a street dance in the evening made the day most enjoyable for both players and onlookers. The water was fine for bathers and gents seemed to have the greatest following.

At two p.m. Al Combes started the ladies' swim with fifteen entrants from the railway bridge over the Trent canal. The course was a long one for the day and back to the Government Dock for the finish.

Nearly fifty boats of all description, from the water wise life boat to bridges and west bank of the river held hundreds of swim fans.

A point lower in the Murray Canal was barred from competition as she was in the C.N.E. swim in Toronto last year, but she went the course for superior to the other participants.

Dorothy Gilbert crossed the line the winner in 1 hour and 15 mins., with Irene Thompson and Bernice Smith 2nd and 3rd respectively, with only one and a half minutes separating first and third.

Bob Schroder won the men's swim in the remarkable time of 55 minutes. Gilbert Carlisle Lawrence captured second position and R. M. Donald third.

Jess Baker held second position throughout but had to be taken from the water on the home stretch after he was seized with cramps.

At 11.30 a.m. the C.P.R. were defeated 15-6. A big first inning for the visitors when they scored nine runs against the old timers. The railroaders, Morris started on the mound for the Trenton but was relieved by Hepburn in the fifth.

Score by innings:

Iroquois	9 0 2 0 2 0 2 — 15
C.P.R.	6 0 2 2 1 3 — 6

At 3 p.m. Brandish Imperials furnished the opposition and after a good start each side run lead by the third. For started to weaken and was replaced by Lorne Ferguson, but edged two frames when Sager was called upon. The game ended 13-8 for the visitors.

Score by innings:

Brandish Imperials	1 0 0 6 2 4 0 — 13
Imperials	0 1 1 2 1 0 1 — 6

Wooler Leads gave the visitors a good run for a while only one run when the game ended 8-7 for the island champs.

"Soup" Free pitched a fine game, while Hepburn and Lorne Wallace for before the Leafs could be downed.

Score by innings:

The evening was taken up by the dancers on the market square after the various prize winners had been awarded their prizes by Secretary Frank M. Hlasek at the judges' stand. Round and square dancing found great patronage with Earl Bainford doing the calling.

The lucky dance ticket won the bridge lamp for K. Lyons of the R.S. Collier which was in Trenton with a coal cargo.

3 Legged Wet, Trenton

The Trenton police report an exceptionally quiet Monday night with only one accident in this district.

Wm. Whyte of Benson Ave., Toronto, driving east on Saturday afternoon, took the ditch to avoid striking another car when a westbound car was approaching and passing another motorist travelling in the same direction. Mrs. Whyte, Mrs. Whyte, his wife, injured the driver, Wm. Whyte, received cuts as the car turned over in the ditch and landed on its top. Dr. Farley of Trenton attended the injured.

The accident happened about 5 p.m. south of the limited near Henry Black's farm.

The car, almost completely wrecked was towed to Graham's Garage.

Change in Schedule

President Rollins of the Central Park softball league, Belleville, announced a change in schedule on account of rain-out games. The remaining games will be called at 5.45 p.m. sharp. Last night the Pirates beat the Cubs by default when Desorcio Packers by default, when the latter failed to show up.

Gerald Vance's Firemen are on top of the league with 4 games won and no loss.

Sept. 6—Firemen vs. Desoronto Packers.

Sept. 7—LaBrash Imperials vs. Foreign. Legion.

Sept. 8—College Hill vs. Firemen.

Sept. 9—Grills Garage vs. Foreign Legion.

League Standing:

	Won	Lost
Firemen	3	0
College Hill Cubs	2	0
Foreign Legion	1	0
LaBrash Imperials	2	2
Grills Garage	1	2
Desorcio Packers	0	4

Cash Clubs Thomas Coleman

The funeral of the late Cash Clubs Thomas Coleman, chief engineer of the Trenton Power Dam, will leave from St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Saturday afternoon with Rev. Kelly officiating. —

Members of the Trenton Fire Brigade attended the body to pay the last respects to their former comrade. The mass of floral offerings showed the esteem of the deceased by the community.

Form the church the cortege proceeded to Mt. Evergreen Cemetery, headed by Trailer Officer Huffman and H.T. Officers Spencer and Byles, where interment was made.

The bearers were J. Goodsell, N. J. McDonald, W. Taylor, J. Grainger and O. Alyea.

Late Agnes McLaren Cumming

A large number of friends, neighbors and prominent citizens were in attendance on Saturday afternoon at the funeral of the late Mrs. J. Ross Cumming, Glen Ross, on Cluff's Creek celebrated Solemn Requiem Mass at St. Mary-Magdalen Church. The many floral tributes and mass cards showed the high esteem the late Mrs. Cumming was held in locally.

Interment took place in the Catholic Cemetery.

The bearers were W. A. Fraser, M.P., T. J. Ireland, M.P.P., Col. J. E. Bywater, A. A. Cullan, H. Whittier and C. Foster.

MELONS COMMAND CITY MARKET

Melons were the predominant commodity on Belleville's Tuesday market and both watermelon and muskmelons sold for the duration from 5 cents upwards to 25 cents. The market was a busy one and the offering of seasonal fruits and vegetables in addition to melons in crates sold at 30 and 35 cents a basket. Niagara peaches were 50c for the 11 quart basket. Pears, red and Lombard plums from that district were retailed at 25 cents. Clapp's Favorite pears were selling at 45 and 50 cents a basket. Tomatoes sold at 40 and 45 cents a bushel and corn at 10 cents a dozen or two dozen for 25 cents. Cauliflower from 10 to 25 cents. There were a few eggs for sale at 18 cents a dozen.

Pickling cucumbers were again a noteworthy offering and sold from 25 cents and 30 cents a peck to 40 cents ket to 40 cents with midget gherkins bringing 60 cents for a like quantity.

Prices for other commodities were the same as at Saturday's market.

Release the Pressure

A simple mechanical operation, that and that alone will give to the imprisoned impulses free flow to the channels that help to human body and restore health.

We have been trained by diligent and intensive training to find these occluded nerves along the spinal cord and to correct the misaligned vertebrae for you. This is the secret of health. If you are sick have the pressure released from the impinged nerves and get well and happy.

POETRY

Appreciation

Dedicated to Mrs. Ethel Milligan, Belleville, Ont.

Sometimes we think we're quite alone,
And that no one cares,
Then suddenly we find a friend
Who shows us that he shares
Our joys and sorrows, hopes and fears,
And helps us bear our cares

Supreme Value of Individual Has Place in Modern Thought

"Disregard of Human Dying Age," Says Value, Element In This Dying Age," Says Rev. I. B. Naylor In Labor Day Sermon

In the course of a Labour Day sermon in Tabernacle United Church on Monday morning, Rev. I. B. Naylor stated his opinion that there is an increasing place in the world's life of Christ's valuation of Human Personality. There is dawning the recognition of the supreme value of the individual. Continuing Mr. Naylor said: "The weakness and waste of the age that is dying has been its disregard of human value when compared with property values. It is said that Napoleon stated, when told his Russian campaign would cost a million lives, 'What are a million men to me?' It is one of those saying which are almost too perfect to be true, but whether he said it or not, he lived it. And a multitude of his historians—'Little Napoleons'—'near Napoleons'—would-be Napoleons have lived by that creed. And it is a voice of an age that is dying. If I did not believe that Christ is through the mercenary of standing in a Christian pulpit. Let us not imagine that the age is dead. There is still an appalling disregard of human personality.

"O God, that bread should be so dear,
And flesh and blood so cheap."

Wendell Phillips in his anti-slavery crusade challenged "Put your capital as high as the skies. If it is human life, interpret the pulse of a girl will beat it down. That cannot exist. Blessing fulfilled. With equal truth we can say to the capitalist who piles his wealth on itself on the bodies and souls of men—'Rear your smoke stacks up until they touch the sky. Pile your dividends into the bank until they burst the sides. If your system is founded on iniquity or its profits come from the exploitation of humanities, the pulse of a wrong or defrauded child will beat it down. It is in the public to the mightiest force in the world—the heart-beat of the Son of God."

The hymns, prayers, lessons and special music were all in harmony with the spirit of Labour Day.

HARVEST-TIDE ON RESERVE

Rev. A. L. Geen Assists In Communion Service In Tyendinaga

The annual Harvest Festival was held in Christ Church on Mohawk Reserve on Sunday last, the day was fair ang a goodly congregation assembled. The service opened with "Come Ye Thankful Come" as the surpliced choir and clergy marched into the side. The rector, Rev. F. Hall, Pringle conducted the Harvest Festival service, assisted by Rev. A. L. Geen. Before the service a hymn in Mohawk was sung. The special preacher was Rev. A. L. Geen (Esq. je to his Mohawk friends). He took as his text the 100th Psalm, basing his discourse on the "Harvest" of the Christian. The Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacle, after describing and explaining these festivals which every male over 13 years was required to come to Jerusalem and attend. the preacher gave a graphic description of the landscape of Palestine and of Jerusalem. He then spoke of the special necessity of special Thanksgiving services to remind us that God is the author and giver of all the blessings that we enjoy, both spiritual, which man is so apt to forget. After speaking of the Fatherlove of God, he closed with the line "Love is the greatest gift that man demands my life, my soul, my all."

YOUNG TORIES AND LIBERALS ARE STUDYING

Newmarket, Sept. 5—Its students drawn from the ranks of young Ontario Conservatives in all parts of Ontario, the first Liberal-Conservative summer school will open here Monday. As an innovation in Canadian political activity, its program is attracting considerable attention. For one week the more than a hundred young men will give their serious attentions to the study of current Canadian problems. They will be given lectures and papers by professors selected from all Ontario universities as well as a number of men outstanding in public life.

Port Hope, Sept. 5—With noted speakers to be present from Canada, United States and Great Britain, the Liberal summer conference opens in the Trinity College School auditorium Monday, and sessions will continue until September 9. Hon. Vincent Massey of Port Hope, former minister to the United States, will preside.

Officials announced, in reply to numerous inquiries, that all sessions of the school are open to the public.

The summer conference, the main theme of which will be "Canada and the World Crisis" is designed to direct organized thought to the present day problems of government in the widest sense of the word.

CUBANS MAY USE BOYCOTT

Protest To Prevent Stay of Machado In Canada

Montreal, Sept. 5—"I am profoundly appreciative of the generosity and hospitality offered to the Canadians and Canadians and of the British spirit of justice which has greeted me and my friends in exile," General Gerardo Machado y Morales, deposed president of Cuba, said in a prepared statement to the Canadian people through the press, which was released on arrival here.

Accompanied by Dr. Octavio Averhoff, former Cuban secretary of the treasury, Eugenio Molinet, former Cuban Secretary of Agriculture, and Manuel Moreno, aid de camp, the former president arrived aboard the liner Lady Somerset from Nassau, Bahamas, where he was forced to seek refuge when revolution forced him to leave his own country.

"I will engage in no political activities during my stay in Canada, though I shall seek to vindicate my good name wherever I have an opportunity to do so before Canadians. For the present, however, I shall simply rest quietly in Montreal" the statement said.

The rumor that I and my colleagues have brought with us great sums of money is totally without foundation. We have with us barely sufficient pocket money to meet our travelling expenses. All my property, real and otherwise, is in Cuba, and I have no money in any account outside Cuba."

St. John, N.B., Sept. 5—The Associated Peruto Shippers of Newmarket expressed serious alarm when word was received that portrezeras at Havana, Cuba, will, according to a Havana newspaper article, boycott the handling of all cargoes received from any country extending an asylum to General Machado deposed Cuban president, who arrived at Montreal, yesterday for a three months' stay, with the permission of the Canadian government.

THIEVES PLANT STALKS AFTER THEFT

Lindsay, Sept. 5—Mrs. W. M. Corbett, living a mile west of town reports that thieves picked up over half of her potato patch, cleaned all the potatoes out of the hills and planted the stalks back in the ground. They made such a good job of it that their work went unnoticed until the stalks were noticed dropping and finally turning brown.

Danes Are Aroused By Hitler Suggestion

Copenhagen, Denmark, Sept. 5—Blunt warning was voiced by Premier T. A. M. Stauning that Denmark was prepared to withstand by force if necessary any effort to revive the Schleswig frontier.

"Anyone can work for a change in the law," the premier said, "but illegal action will meet with hard refutation from the strong united will of Denmark.

"We will not be governed by machine guns, private police nor corps of soldiers. Denmark acknowledges the right of other peoples to select the form of their own state, but wishes to remain democratic."

Drowning Take 2 elds.4/31
All three men were members of the Rand Chapter Grotto. Both the dead men had been members since the inception of the Grotto ten years ago, and both were members of the executive. Mr. Carrie is prominent in the Orange Order.

Mr. Repath was a Past Master of several Masonic lodges in the city, a Trustee of the Grotto, and a supervisor of the Grotto at the University of Toronto. He is survived by his widow and one daughter, a Mrs. Whitter, who resides on a farm on the Lake Shore road. He was born in England coming to Canada many years ago.

Mr. Dack was born in Scotland, coming to Canada over thirty years ago. He was a carpenter by trade, being employed by Weller and Company. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Isabella Dick; two sons, Russell and Robert, and two daughters Effie and Jean.

TORONTO, Sept. 5.—The three members of the Rand Grotto initiation party of which two were drowned at Northport Monday night, were all initiated in fraternal work, and the party was organized last Friday, the evening before they went to the city last night. All three left the Grotto rooms at the Masonic Temple at three o'clock Saturday afternoon. They intended to motor to Belleville to return to Toronto last night.

"My husband said he would be back sometime this morning," Mrs. Repath said last night. "In fact, I was expecting he would be back before I arrived back from Greenwood. I was away on a week-end visit to my daughter over the week-end."

Didn't Want to Go

William Dack did not want to go on the fatal trip, neighbors of the family said last night. "I've got things to attend to over the holidays, and while I would like to go don't think I'd better," he said only a week ago.

"I told him not to spoil the party," said Mrs. Dick, "and now I wish I'd never urged him to go along."

Mr. Dick was well known all through the east end of the city, and had been associated with A. W. Weller and Company, building contractors, for 25 years. He was popular in fraternal circles and was a member of the Rand Ghar Grotto, an ex-descent of Caledonia Lodge, A.F. and A.M., and a former director of Christie Camp, Sons of Scotland.

Mr. Repath also was actively identified with the Grotto. He had been a trustee since its inception, which is over ten years ago, and for eight years he had served on the executive committee.

Both men were connected with various lodges. Mr. Repath was a Past Master of three or four. He was also an honorary life member of High Park Lodge and active in the chapter.

Picton, Sept. 5.—In the bitterly cold and choppy Bay of Quinte, Charles H. Carrie, prominent Toronto-Mason, former alderman and school trustee, fought for 40 minutes, Monday the weariness and despair of two companions who clung with him to an overturned boat, saw them one by one sink beneath the waves, and was rescued by a split-second margin.

E. J. Repath and William Dick, fellow members with Mr. Carrie of the Rand Ghar Grotto in Toronto, died their lives gurgle for the constant shouting of Mr. Carrie—heard even on shore where a solitary and helpless woman watched the chilling tragedy adjuring the weakening men to "hang on boys! They're coming."

While, Fred Reinhold, ran half a mile to Northport Village, secured a boat and started out for the overturned skiff to which the three men were clinging, more than 40 minutes elapsed.

And all this time, with waves breaking over his head, and the cold water draining the feeling from his fingers and the strength from his body, Mr. Carrie clung to the keel, strong and clear, and plainly audible above, crying half a hundred times, "Hang on boys! They're coming."

On shore stood Mr. Reinhold, straining her eyes to count the heads ringed about the dark bottom of the capsized boat.

The other and older men—Repath and Dick—were silent, all their energies presumably exhausted by the fight against wind and water.

First one head sank beneath the waves. Repath's heart, it is believed, had failed, and he went under. Still Mr. Carrie clung on, crying with its message of courage to the second man. But soon he, too, gave up.

Move Is Blamed

The capsizing of the boat was caused by a sudden movement of one of the members of the party, according to Provincial Constable Robert Armond of Picton, who helped recover the bodies.

"One suggestion we gave hit the stern, where Mr. Repath was sitting," police officer said. "The front of the new spindled and overturned and hit him on the head.

"Mr. Repath, who is 71, made a big splash in, fit that, and his sudden move toward the side of the boat," proceeded the officer, "and I was told that this started the boat rolling. A moment later it upset and dumped all three into the bay.

"Mr. Dick was supposed to be able to swim a little, but the other couldn't. Mr. Carrie told me he had been in the water about 40 minutes when he was rescued.

"We recovered the others' bodies, but they had been in for a week or more about an hour, and they were quite evidently dead.

"I went for the coroner—Dr. Hutchinson—and he came down the bodies and released them to be taken to Toronto.

The boat was about 15 feet long —a bit heavy for oars, but they had unshipped the outboard motor and had taken her out in the morning. All day the afternoon with oars she did not sink."

FLAT IRON FLIES TOWARDS TWO

Toronto, Sept. 5.—In a brawl in a house at 61 St. Patrick street early afternoon, Peter Overchuk smashed his wife, Mary, were injured when Peter struck with a flat iron. Overchuk emerged from the fracas with a bad scalp wound and is in Toronto General Hospital.

His wife received cuts on the head, but on being attended by a doctor was able to remain at home. A boarder, Peter Boyko, was arrested by Detective Johns and Constable Atkinson (716) charged with wounding and assaulting and beating a female.

Boyko, police said, had been drinking and starting to fight with Overchuk, hurled the flat-iron at him. The iron struck him on the head, and in the fray Mrs. Overchuk received cuts on the head.

Parents Brought To Fair By Children

Chicago, Sept. 5 (CP)—Usually the parents bring the children to the World's Fair, but that's not the way it worked out with Lorraine Lemire, eight, of Manchester, N.H., and Kenneth Jones, seven, of Rutford, R.I.

They won a Boston newspaper contest as the most typical New England boy and girl, and a trip to the fair as their prizes, they got permission to bring their parents.

BEER DRINKER ON SIDE-LINES IN CALIFORNIA

"Noble Experiment," Says MacDiarmid, "Not Quite Success"

OLDTIMERS WAIT

"It's drinking bitter beer today the real thing tomorrow," said Jack Young, The Hanging of Danny Deever is a good song for any man with a conformation. Tune in on KFI or KHJ any evening and see. As a famous breakfast food manufacturer has advertised—there is a reason. It is a sad story for the Californians who are beer drinkers. To those who stick to orange juice it is a funny story and they laugh loud and long. They are still laughing over the dry years there was a lot of near-beer manufacturing and grunts. Sometimes grunts are great beer drinkers. When the new legal beer came in with President Roosevelt, there was a great rush of the thirsty Californians for the new "three point two" beer. There are three large breweries in Los Angeles but they were not prepared for such. They worked night and day but could not begin to fill the demand. It was not like the old saloon days when it cost $1,000 for a saloon, [illegible] beer license only cost $25.00 and it was amazing how many had $25. Every corner saloon never opened back, the drug stores and oil stations too opened their doors. Everything appeared on all the restaurant, soft drink parlors, drug stores, dry goods stores and grocery stores. Other stores that were closed because they were "all sold out of business on account of the president's order" had signs that they were beer stores. For the first week or two the "drys"—they should have known better, San Francisco brewers—were in a panic. Then the thirsty angels and still there was plenty of beer. Refrigerator cars from eastern breweries were appealed to and cool carloads were coming down. Then! That helped some especially when some brands retailed at 35c per bottle. Then the beer was not to soon tired of having to give up 35 cents for beer and still not enjoy the flavor of the brands. This particular brand was brewed by Hon. Anheuser-Busch of the Quinte, some years ago and it sold then for 25 cents a bottle. It was the favorite of the authority. Still it did not prove popular and soon left the market. Under Government, Belleville was always loyal to Ontario Hydro. A few months ago American travellers asked Jim for beer and he told them that the Belleville brands were just as good. That was the start of "Buy British". Jim is a Tory.

The readers of this great family journal are not all beer drinkers. Those who are not will enjoy learning that a great many beer drinkers in Los Angeles have been converted. They are back drinking Scotch. They have no reason to blame. The drinkers complained that Canada was getting the best German brands. The local Health Inspectors have been labelling these brands and found some of them as low as one per cent. None of them had more than three per cent alcoholic content of the old temperance beer. The health authorities in Los Angeles said that the brewers were fooling the public with the "three" label and there are thousands of cases of eastern beer held in storage. Now when the owners go to receive no payment and face a fine also.

It is the fact that the boys were allowed to drink Belleville that makes them so mad. Their pride is hurt. They don't like to admit that into the thousands and was but partially covered with insurance. It was stated this morning that his stock alone was valued at $3,000. The York and Sherwood brands will all furnishings were a complete loss. Mr. Hamilton owned a Ford sedan delivery truck from his burned garage and barn.

All that remains of this portion of the once fine village was but a smouldering heap of charred timbers and stone. The fire was first seen by a passing motorist who turned in the alarm. He was just next to discover the blaze and gave the alarm.

The insurance plans regarding the rebuilding of this fire-swept portion of the village could not be ascertained on Tuesday as each owner of destroyed property was too overcome to make public statements.

During the fighting of the fire the Belleville and Stirling fire departments their activities centred on saving the surrounding buildings, owing to inadequate water facilities.

The local department were heartily thankful to Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Ashley who served refreshments to them at five o'clock Tuesday morning.

LEGION NOT IN POLITICAL LIFE

Windsor, Sept. 5—Captain Jules J. Perry, President of the Ontario Command of the Canadian Legion, denied a suggestion the Legion was going into politics. He said such a move would be unconstitutional.

Explaining a resolution passed at the Ontario Command's convention here this week, Captain Perry said it meant the legion intended to influence all political parties to assist ex-service men.

The resolutions passed at Windsor in my judgment, represent an expression on resentment that up many ex-service men, who thought life itself was not too great a sacrifice for King and Country to-day destitute, and are existing on charity," said the Legion President said. They are denied the opportunity to earn their own living.

"While ex-service men, trained as they were in a school of discipline, and exceedingly patient, it is obvious things will continue as they are indefinitely."

STORES, BARNS HOUSES BURN

tachment from the Stirling fire department was also on hand but not until the pumper from Frankford was procured. A 30 thousand gallon tank was the raging inferno checked.

Origin a Mystery

Just how the fire originated is still a mystery as Mr. Wm. Prentice personally locked the garage in which the fire originated on Sunday and Monday night. Mr. Scott, who usually looks after the garage for the purpose, or parking his car, was at that time visiting friends in Hamilton.

Mr. Scott was informed by phone a neighbor, who assures the Ontario Intelligencer that everything was in less fully amounted to $25,000, also locked his garage, but a few feet away from the garage was a gas tank of 1,500 gallons, and no sign of any fire was noticed. It is thought that the fire originated was owned by Miss Ethel Gowsell as was the adjoining garage and building, and also in further southward and adjoining in the home of Mrs. Sherwood and York. So intense was the heat that the houses on the east side of the opposite side of the street were badly scorched, even window panes being cracked and abandoned owing to the intense heat coming from the conflagration. Belleville firemen, police and Hydro poles fell prey to the raging fire until all communication with the village was cut off and the village became isolated. John Eggleston, of the Eggleston Inn Hamilton store, was badly scorched fain the intense heat while Joseph's Dancing Academy adjoining the fire from the fire also caught, but the blaze was controlled before any real damage was done.

The south end of Mrs. Peter Silks' home, the residence to the north of the building in which the fire started, was badly scorched and the building did catch fire, but following the efforts of an organized bucket brigade the home was saved.

Heavy Loss

The loss, which is estimated by the village authorities at the village at $75,000 was but partially covered by insurance, the Gowsell block having only $12,000 insurance thereon. Miss Ethel Gowsell, owner of the building, was also a heavy loser as her building more insurance on the building today. Mr. Hamilton's loss was by the largest individual loss to be had but recently stocked his store for the fall season. Mr. William Prentice, who operates the village post office, as well as a general store and garage, had his loss also lumped into the thousands and was but partially covered with insurance. It was stated this morning that his stock alone was valued at $3,000. The York and Sherwood hotels with all furnishings were a complete loss. Mr. Hamilton owned a Ford sedan delivery truck from his burned garage and barn.

All that remains of this portion of the once fine village was but a smouldering heap of charred timbers and stone. The fire was first seen by a passing motorist who turned in the alarm. He was just next to discover the blaze and gave the alarm.

DOZEN HOUSES ARE DESTROYED BY FIRE

Blue River, Que., Sept. 5— Twelve houses, a mill belonging to Fraser Realties, Limited, and then freight sheds and siding, were destroyed by fire which swept over a large part of this small village, but had been brought under control early Monday.

Cause of the fire had not been learned, as volunteer firefighters, after fighting the blaze all day, and bringing it under control, stood about the lumber yard near the mill where the blaze was still creeping slowly. It was reported all danger had passed for the remainder of the village and that the blaze would be out before morning. Complete lack of wind favored the bucket brigade in fighting the blaze.

FOREST FIRES BLOCK ROADS

Scores of Motorists Are Stranded on Trans-Canada Highways . . .

Winnipeg, Sept. 5—Scores of motorists, stranded on the trans-Canada highway when forestry officials closed the road as forest fires endangered motor travel, made their way into Winnipeg early today.

Twice closed during the week-end, as fires blazed a path near the highway between Whitemouth and Rennie, Man., the road was opened late last night and many motorists bound from Kenora, Ont., where they spent the holiday, immediately started for their homes here. Others camped at Whitemouth during the night, in tents, tourists camps, hotels and private homes.

SHE OFTEN WISHED SHE COULD DIE

First Bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her Wonderfully

"My trouble is the Change. I was so weak I could hardly walk. I kept a girl to do my work. I would be awake all night and I often wished I could die. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and tried that. The first bottle helped me. I am now on my fourth and I am gaining strength and energy all the time."

"NERVES" she called it
—it was really her KIDNEYS

She tried to get through each day as best she could. Never comfortable—always distressed. Low in vitality—lower in spirits. She hadn't thought of her kidneys, until a friend suggested Dodd's Kidney Pills—for over three generations the favorite kidney tonic and remedy. Seeking relief she immediately took Dodd's. The "washed out" feeling was soon replaced by clear headed energy and restful sleep. Headache, backache, and other signs of faulty kidneys soon disappeared.

BARGAIN BRIDE

By KATHERINE MAVELAND TAYLOR

© 1933 NEA SERVICE, INC.

Bessie began to plan. Elinor's eyes filled, hearing her, so many deeds were made plain by Bessie's plans—a suit for Jim, a new frock for Elinor, the half repaired set of glass cooking dishes (Bessie had always wanted to have a glass!), some new sheets, a new rug for the hall, some bath towels, and a bath mat, for Bessie, a new white porcelain sink for the kitchen.

"What!" said young Jim when the $100 had been spent at least three times. Everyone laughed at Elinor with the rest but instantly.

"You haven't told me, Bessie," Elinor was saying, "what you're going to do with your $10, I do wish, dear, I had been more sure of you."

"I'm going to blow it on a party that we'll have here!" Elinor answered, Sexton let out a whoop, "Ice cream and cream cake!" he added gloatingly at her youngest cousin.

"Cousin Elinor, can we have that kind of cake you get at the German shop on Hay street? I know—it has whipped cream on it and jelly inside—!" Sexton said excitedly.

"Certainly!" she assured him. "We'll have lots of cake!"

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Like mushrooms, was having a bad half hour. Vance Carter had pushed past Mignon to reach her, although she had given the strictest orders about receiving no one. He found her curled up on a chaise lounge in the drawing room, looking frightfully untidy and tired, raving the rage and tears that she had shed.

"Darling!" he whispered unsteadily, nearing her.

She sat erect, frightened, sorry because he had come. He took her both hands.

"Some one may hear!" she warned.

He laughed the brimming, assured laugh of a man who feels that he is near his goal. "They'll all know how it is—has been—this as soon anyhow," he stated. "You know that!"

She sank back. He was obviously going to be very difficult!

"You'll marry your wife soon?" he asked, bending toward her, his eyes narrowed.

"I—I don't know, Vance—"

"Why?"

"Bennwell depends on me so!" she confided with nervous haste. "After we came to from the funeral he told me how much I mean to him. He's threatened my life if I leave him—"

"Lida!"

"I can't seem to see any way out! I can't bring myself to give him that blow just now, Vance. He has been —so disappointed! Aunt Ella left him $100!"

"You said—!"

"I know, dear, but how could I foresee?"

"I'm not going to let anything keep us apart! Vance said. Lida has not known that his chin could be heard.

"Oh dear! she whimpered. She covered her face.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

When Vance left an hour later he retained that she was firm in her resolve not to ask for a divorce. Miserable, he hurried to his favorite speakeasy. Two cocktails and he felt somewhat cheered.

"Another, Abe!"

"Yes, sir—"

An hour later he was unsteady on his feet, but certain otherwise and smiling grimly. He summoned a taxicab and went to his rooms. There he took off his dress clothes, put on a small Spanish revolver and inspected it.

"All right—" he murmured thickly. He put it into a pocket, returned to the street, hailed a taxi and to his waiting cab.

"Where to, sir?" Driver asked.

"Park avenue. Know the number—don't seem to remember. However, it's a second thought he had it. Wilkins, spelling the night doorman, answered the door. Yes, it was that Carter man again, he was. The one who had been coming there so much to see Mrs. Stafford. And more "shoo" than usual, too.

Smiling cynically, Wilkins watched Vance Carter march toward the elevator. "Swell gang they are!" the doorman thought. "And a swell chance that nice girl has!" He wished to call Lida Stafford and warn the girl something. Already the news of it had spread, and with Lida's screaming fit, just before the service.

Wilkins saw Vance Carter fumbling in a rear pocket as he plopped into the brass cage. Then, after a nothing down in response to his ring. Wilkins supposed he was researching for a flask. "You need another drink!" Wilkins thought scornfully. "If you didn't like it you might sober up in a week or two and have to drink it!"

The elevator boy winked at the doorman, shrugged his slender shoulders and again turned toward the street.

A moment later tenants of the fourteenth floor heard a shot. They thought it sounded like a backfire of the elevator corridor, that the sound had come from outside.

Elinor was at the dishes for Bessie, painstakingly and a trifle slowly, when the telephone rang. "You go, Jim," she called. "Mother's hands are in the dish water—"

Bert moved toward the dark rear hall where the phone was barking. "Hello! Bert had a girl and didn't want the family to know. She was aware from the inflection of the ragging that would be his if they got onto it.

"Mother!" Junior called, turning toward the kitchen. "It's Benson. He wants to speak to you—"

"Don't you mean he wants Elinor, dear?"

"No, he said you."

"Tell him to hold the line a minute." Bessie was wiping her dented, water-corrugated hands

"Yes, Benson?" she said a moment later, "Mrs. Benson speaking. You wished to speak to me? WHAT?"

There was a moment's pause. Bessie turned from the telephone. "Jim," she called steadily. "Take Elinor into the front room and show her that nice Billie Sexton's Section made at school. Then she turned again to the telephone. "Just a minute, Benson—"

Elinor followed docilely but she was troubled, almost alarmed. Her aunt's tone had been sharpening by some vast mood. Elinor knew that something unpleasant had happened. She admired the honest composure but she continued to wonder and worry.

Bessie was slow to appear. Elinor heard her calling her husband. She heard him coming down the stairs. Then there was an interval punctuated by the sibilant, heart-broken silence that means a whispered colloquy.

CHAPTER 10

Elinor tried to reassure herself, hold herself she was becoming absurdly nervous. Nothing could have happened.

But why was Aunt Bessie waking? Why didn't she come?

Elinor said, "It's the nicest Sunday I ever spent, Section. It really is!"

Then Bessie came. Jim Sexton followed her, carrying a glass of wine in his unsteady hand. Bessie was smiling rather shyly. Elinor's heart went cold.

"Sexton," Bessie said, "run upstairs now, please—"

"Aw!" Sexton murmured rebelliously, but he went. Bessie drew Elinor down beside her on the sofa. "Benson telephoned," she began, "to say that your father—eh—has had an accident. Now don't be frightened, darling! It may not be serious—"

"What?" Elinor moistened her lips. Jim offered the glass, patted her shoulder as she drank.

Bessie was holding one of Elinor's smooth hands between her work-scarred, cushioned ones. "Well it seems—Benson things it may be only a slight injury—that Vance Carter came to your apartment. He had been drinking and he had a gun. He shot at your father—"

Elinor had never fainted before but the day had been too much for her. Within a few hours she had witnessing the horror of death, had seen her father bitterly disappointed and crushed by her self's failure to remember him, had heard her mother's hysterical accusation that Elinor herself was to blame. She had felt Barrett Colvin's chill glance, brief and heart-rending. Only a moment he had looked at her, then turned his eyes away. That, more than anything else, had hurtled her pitifully and bitterly and completely miserable. A dreadful day!

"Put her down flat Jim!" Bessie ordered. She knelt clumsily beside Elinor to fan her and the water spotted, darkened apron she still wore. "I told Benson you'd take her home—"

"Of course—"

"Have you enough in your pockets for taxi fare?"

"I don't know—"

"Jim Junior has some change."

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Elinor opened her eyes. There was a dazed wonder in them for a moment. Then she remembered.

"There, there, darling!" Bessie murmured. She was thought, "If worse comes to worse we can manage—we won't have to mortgage her interest in! Poor child, if Bennwell gave she will have no one—"

Jim Junior ordered the taxicab. A little later Sexton stood on the street, wondering if any of the neighbors would happen to see the cab drive away. Then, before Elinor, Bessie had climbed in paying the fare—and tipping the driver a little. That made Bessie cry. It was so like Elinor to think of that, to be such a time.

"Tell me about it" she said, wiping her eyes. The boys stood, a tense trio.

"It's pretty bad," Jim told them. "It's about as bad as it could be, I think. Shot through the left lung. They've looked up Vance Carter, but he's not home. Not since last night, she added after a short pause.

"Yes, but she knows that anyhow" Jim Junior thought. But said again Bessie brimmed her eyes.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Somewhere a clock with an asthmatic precise to its strike announced that it was four.

"We'd better turn in," said Jim Senior. "Everything's been done full—"

Meantime Elinor, without taking off her outer wraps, had gone to her father's room to stand by his bed. She was very quiet, dazed, and he was breathing noisily, stertorously, swabbing in sheet. She felt clearly, yet through the dullness that grown of side nerves: freshly taxed.

The doctor looks dat Elinor intently. He didn't want any screaming in the room such as had come from the strong lungs of the patient's neurotic wife. But some pretty girl was evidently controlled.

"You're Miss Stafford?"

"Yes."

"I'm Doctor Morsn. Live five flows down."

"Can you tell me Doctor—?"

"It's a little hard to say tonight, get the right attention for Bennwell Stafford who might be at that very moment dying.

"Lo!" what mess!" Barrett groaned half-aloud. He raced the hall, waiting for Hutton and the car.

Bessie had been cleaning the refrigerator, trying through activity to keep off her anxiety and worry.

When Maggie gave her the card on which was engraved, "Mr. Barrett H. Colvin" she cast a stricken glance down at her dress. She wished she looked neater. But after taking off her apron, folding it and using it on a chair, she hurried to the parlor where Barrett still stood, too restless to sit down.

"Sit down, Mr. Colvin. No—not in that chair. The springs are broken. Isn't it terrible—I mean about Bennwell? You've heard, of course—"

He nodded, frowning. He set Bessie smoothed her house dress over her fat knees and waited. She saw his teeth set on his lower lip. Brows drawn, he stared at the worn patch in the rug. She knew he wasn't really seeing the rug, that he was miserable. She felt real pity for him.

"I came to know what I can do," he said abruptly.

CHAPTER 20

Bessie said honestly, "You can do anything for Lida Stafford; nothing for Elinor."

Barrett Colvin looked up quickly. "You mean — Miss Stafford has pride?"

An immense amount. I don't know where she got it nor all the lovely qualities she has, though I always liked Bennwell when he was a boy." She turned her head to hide her hot, tear-filled eyes.

"Would Miss Stafford resent my offering her mother help?"

"I think it would kill her!"

She heard him mutter, "God—!" Bessie disapproved of blasphemy but she understood his need for it.

"I've got to get around that damn—excuse me!" Barrett said, "I want you to let me put your boys through college. You will, won't you?" For the first time he saw the room and read the need that was apparent everywhere. He must manage to help them somehow!

"I don't know, Mr. Colvin. I'd have to talk with Jim, my husband. We don't take help very easily. We aren't—just that kind." But she answered uncertainly.

"But this isn't help, Mrs. Thrope it isn't my money. It belongs to you and the Stafords!"

She shook her head. "Aunt Ella was a her right mind," she reminded gently. His colorless face stiffened. He was doomed to a force beside with pride, she saw. Perhaps his arguments would do no more than strengthen the pride he saw before him in a frayed wash house dress that had cost $2. If the battle were futile he would be haunted by the slobbiness of that room; by the chair that he could not sit on because the springs were broken; with those three boys who must go to work before they should have stopped their schooling.

"Mrs. Thrope," he confessed, "this whole thing makes me miserable—"

"I've no doubt of that, Mr. Colvin," she agreed in her kind way. "But you couldn't help it and it's done and over!"

"But," he protested, "one can right a wrong—when it's as simple as this one!"

"I don't know about that, Mr. Colvin," she said slowly, uncertain-

SEPT 5 — MR. AND MRS. — UNDER THE INFLUENCE

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

After days of fruitless effort, Sheik Ibn Jad began to despair of finding a way into the Valley of the Golden Lion. Then he had a bright idea. He would send Fejlaan, his slave, to the mountain Galla tribe. Being a Galla himself, Fejlaan could doubtless persuade his people, who knew the country, to lead the Arabs toward the secret entrance, if the Sheik paid them enough.

So Fejlaan set out alone and came in due time to the Galla villages. To his great joy, he found there his own family. A feast was held in his honor, which even the old chief Batando, attended. To him Fejlaan related the story of the many Arabs, explaining how the Sheik desired to enter the Forbidden Valley and would reward the Galla richly if some of their warriors would guide him to the mountain pass.

"There are two ways in," said Batando, much pleased with the young rascal's pride and native beer, "the young women the Arabs seize you, perhaps have forgotten where, every Galla knows. There are two ways in—but there is no way out of the Forbidden City. Since our fathers' fathers' time, many men have gone in, but it is known that no man has ever come out of it."

"And why have they not come out?" asked Fejlaan, though he shook his head. "We cannot even guess their fate. Some say that those who inhabit the valley are the spirits of the dead, and others that it is peopled by leopards. But no one knows. Go then, Fejlaan. Tell your Sheik we will lead him to the entrance. If we die, he and the old goat laughed at his little joke, "we will not have to fight him."

DR. BURROWS GEOLOGIST, IS DEAD, AGED 55

NOTED FIGURE

His Part In Ontario Development In Mining

Toronto, Sept. 5.—Dr. Alfred G. Burrows, 55, Brantford, Provincial Geologist, died in the Private Patients' Pavilion, Toronto General Hospital, in his fifty-sixth year. He had been in failing health for several months, but it was only a few weeks ago that he entered the hospital for an operation. For some time he made favorable progress toward recovery, then suffered a relapse and death came late on Saturday.

Son of Frederick Burrows, a former public school inspector of Lennox and Addington counties, Dr. Burrows was born there, educated in the public and high schools and at Queen's University, graduating in geology and mineralogy, gaining his B.Sc. degree therefrom in 1900, having previously taken his M.A. in arts. For a time he was demonstrator in mineralogy at Queen's.

For more than three decades he had been a prominent figure in the Ontario public service. In 1902 he was appointed provincial assayist at Belleville. His first practical field experience in geology and mineralogy was gained as a member of one of ten parties despatched in 1903 to explore Northern Ontario, then largely a vast wilderness. His party was engaged in establishing the resources of arable land, timber and geological conditions generally that proved to be of inestimable value later. In fact it was through that information, coupled with his keen intuitive and deductive powers that he founded his remarkable career. He was subsequently leader of other exploration parties in the North, and examiner of mining claims in the Cobalt area. Dr. Burrows collaborated with the late Professor W. G. Miller, and proved conclusively that the latter's theory such as apt appeal that the latter made him his chief Assistant. When Dr. Miller died Dr. Burrows was appointed to succeed him.

Untiring worker, Dr. Burrows helped in the solution of numerous problems in Northern Ontario, regarding the age and relationships of Pre-Cambrian rocks which occur in the mineral wealth of gold, silver, nickel, copper, iron, etc. He was highly commended and guided the Porcupine gold field, Kirkland Lake, and other areas. In recognition of his valuable services his alma mater, Queen's University conferred upon him the degree of LL.D. (honoris causa) in 1931.

Deceased is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Ethel Armstrong of Kingston; a sister, Mrs. Charles Gardiner, Lois Island, B.C.; and two brothers, George Burrows of Brantford and Arthur Burrows of Cloverdale, B.C.

Hon. Charles Mc Crea, Minister of Mines, expressed sorrow at the passing of Dr. Burrows, which has occurred at the height of his powers and usefulness. He was one of the most notable members of his staff.

"His wide grasp of the technical features of the professional work was remarkable and his personal qualities won such as to win for him a high place among his many friends, both inside and outside the department. He was unobtrusive in manner, but of a genial nature, and painstaking and accurate in his difficult work, displayed good judgment in sizing up the possibilities of a mineral field and was one of the most highly regarded members of his department, said Mr. McCrea.

OBITUARY

JAMES DONALDSON

A most respected resident of this district passed away Sunday night at his late residence, North Park Street, in the person of James Donaldson. Mr. Donaldson had been ill for sometime and his death was not unexpected. He was born in Richmond, Que., on February 15, 1855, the son of the late John and Agnes Donaldson, and came to this community as an infant. For many years he was a successful general farmer on the 2nd concession of Thurlow and retired to take up his residence here, some years ago. Mr. Donaldson was a member of the John St. United Church and had a host of friends in this city and throughout the countryside, whose sympathy goes to those bereaved in his passing.

Immediately surviving are the widow, one son, John, of Thurlow, one daughter, Mrs. William Wright of this city, a brother, William, of Donald; three sisters, Misses Jane, Jennie, residing on Ping Street.

HIS OWN CAR HITS HIM

Owen Sound, Sept. 5.—E. E. Shortt, owner of the Southampton Beacon, a weekly newspaper, is in hospital with a broken collar bone and concussion of the brain as a result of being struck by his own automobile. Shortt was crushing the car, and had left it in gear. It started and he failed to jump clear.

AT THE CAPITOL

As a change from the overflow of stories concerned with city life, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer brings to the Capitol screen starting tomorrow "The Barbarian," starring Ramon Novarro and described as a romantic comedy laid in the colorful, mysterious background of the Nile River and Egyptian desert.

Novarro is cast as a resourceful rogue ostensibly occupied in the legitimate business of guiding tourists through the picturesque if somewhat sight-seeing country, but more subtly engaged in the more romantic activity of impressing wealthy widows with his charms. It is a new kind of "racket" and one said to be as diverting as it is ingenious. Into the story enters Myrna, fiery and young English girl who has come to Cairo to marry the somewhat aloof-minded explorer she has never seen, ostensible in interology at Queen's.

For more than three decades he had been a prominent figure in the Ontario public service. In 1902 he was appointed provincial assayist at Belleville. His first practical field experience in geology and mineralogy was gained as a member of one of ten parties despatched in 1903 to explore Northern Ontario, then largely a vast wilderness. He was subsequently leader of other exploration parties in the North, and examiner of mining claims in the Cobalt area. Dr. Burrows collaborated with the late Professor W. G. Miller, and proved conclusively that the latter's theory such an apt appeal that the latter made him his chief Assistant. When Dr. Miller died Dr. Burrows was appointed to succeed him.

Untiring worker, Dr. Burrows helped in the solution of numerous problems in Northern Ontario, regarding the age and relationships of Pre-Cambrian rocks which occur in the mineral wealth of gold, silver, nickel, copper, iron, etc. He was highly commended and guided the Porcupine gold field, Kirkland Lake, and other areas. THE BARBARIAN

Ramon Novarro, Myrna Loy, Louise Closser Hale, Edward Arnold, Blanche Frederici, Marcelle Corday, Hedda Hopper and Leni Stengel.

"The Barbarian" is based on an original story by Rupert Hughes, adapted to the screen by Anita Loos and Elmer Harris and directed by Sam Wood. The last directed Novarro in "Huddle" and who has directed many successful screen successes. The picture gives Novarro a number of opportunities to use his singing voice, a musical score having been arranged by Herbert Stothart.

"The Barbarian" and a full length comedy program opens tomorrow (Wednesday) at the Capitol Theatre and will be shown daily at 2.45, 7.15 and at 9 o'clock.

Tonight

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. and Loretta Young appear in "The Life of Jimmy Dolan" with John Wayne in "Haunted Gold" for the last times tonight at 7.15 and 8.40. Tonight is also Dinnerware Gift for ladies.

AT THE BELLE

Spiced with clever dialogue, loaded with scenes of highly effective dramatic and humorous situations and boasting a top-notch cast of players, "Her Bodyguard" is the feature attraction at the Belle today and Wednesday, Matinee daily.

Edmund Lowe and Wynne Gibson carry the principal roles, supported by Roscoe Karns, Jimmy Hines, Marjorie White, Alan Dinehart and Fuzzy Knight.

"Her Bodyguard" starts out on the double-quick, and from fade-in to finis the fast and furious tempo slows down. It is a spicy, speedy, thrill and laugh jammed story of a rough and ready bodyguard whose only job is to play guardian angel to a beautiful Broadway actress. The action takes place on the north Broadway street in the world's New York's Broadway, and all its glamour and glitter and excitement are brilliantly woven into the plot.

Wynne Gibson is Broadway star, is playing producer Alan Dinehart, against Hollywood Director Arnold, and Edmund Lowe is Dinehart's bodyguard. Lowe to keep Wynne from being married to Dinehart. Lowe, however turns the tables on both admirers by getting himself engaged to Wynne, who detested him in the beginning. Wynne gives Lowe the slip to go off with Dinehart, is robbed of her jewelry, and Lowe is held responsible. The holdup is merely a frame-up on him. He recaptures Wynne's jewels, returns them to Wynne hurls a few unpleasant remarks at Dinehart, walks out on Wynne, thoroughly in love with him, is heartbroken then and decides to make her bid for her man. What follows is better in the seeing than in the telling. The only thing to be said is that you'll be agreeably surprised at the way it ends.

Don't Bet On Love

An unpredictable, colorful background, an appealing love theme, and an excellent cast headed by Lew Ayres and Jeanette Rogers make "Don't Bet on Love," the second feature attraction on the same program a most stimulating screen-play.

Laid largely in the exciting atmosphere of the horse racing centres, "Don't Bet on Love," tells the human story of a young gambling "phoney" who knows more about horses than he does women. Ayers, cast as Jim Lee, is seen with the top as a betting sensation, but loses out in his romance with the more serious minded Ginger. After a hectic career in which he determines to outwit the crooked methods, the biggest gambler at the track, Ayres finds his entire fortune on the "big race" and the suspense that built up for that thrilling sequence is admirable.

Sam Hardy's comic and sympathetic than ever, has a role tailor-made for him. Frank Albertson has appeal that borders on genuine dramatic genius.

Wynne Gibson's fourth special star comedy, "Daddy Knows Best," features Walter Catlett and a host of famed funmakers, and the popular Canadian Novel round out a program of super hi-way entertainment that should not be missed.

9-YEAR OLD SWIMS RIVER

Jean Jeffrey Conquers Niagara River At Buffalo

Buffalo, Sept. 5— Jean Jeffrey, nine-year-old swimming prodigy, who five years ago was amazing folk who attended the Buffalo Athletic club swim meets with her aquatic ability, ceased being a tadpole and became an honest-to-goodness champion swimmer by negotiating the width of the treacherous and mighty Niagara River.

Only a dozen of the swimmers who made the other side have taken the difficult route chosen by young Jean—from the foot of Ferry Street to a point on the Canadian shore just above the International Bridge.

When little Jean a tiny slender lass with great dark eyes, goes into the river from the Ferry Street dock, she plunges into a seething tearing current's breath-taking in its speed and amounting almost to an irresistible force.

The current has been the nemesis of many a swimmer who attempted to span the river, since it sweeps the unwary plum of Kruchen Falls in your morning cup of tea or coffee! They create internal cleanliness, and keep the blood-stream pure. A few minutes daily in the sun course to every fibre of your being. Rheumatism, headaches, indigestion and backache all pass you by.

WATER MILL A MUSEUM

Water Mill, N.Y., Sept. 5 (CP)—Long Island's oldest wind mill is to become a museum. The Daughters of Brooklyn have presented the mill to the village improvement association. It was built in 1800, with not a bit of metal in its construction. In 1887, it ground corn and wheat for the village.

CANON DAW IS 50 YEARS WED

Celebrates Golden Anniversary At Hamilton On Monday

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 5—Congratulations were received from clergy and laity throughout Canada by the Rev. Canon and Mrs. Samuel Daw who celebrate the 50th. anniversary of their marriage Monday.

Canon Daw was born in Newfoundland in 1850. He was the son of the late Samuel and Fanny Daw and was educated at Bishop Field College, Newfoundland; St. Boniface, Warminster, England; St. Augustine's, Canterbury, England, and was later graduated from Oxford and Cambridge Universities.

Early this spring he observed the 50th. anniversary of his ordination as a priest of the Church of England in Canada. During the last half century of service in the church and to the people of Hamilton he has held many charges. For six years he was rural dean of the diocese of Niagara and for many years rector of the church of St. John the Evangelist, Hamilton. At all times he played a prominent part in philanthropic and public-spirited enterprises. During the Great War he was chaplain to the 13th City of Hamilton Battalion. In 1923 he married Agnes, daughter of Orlando Yates. They had a family of seven sons, four of whom survive. These are Alexander Daw, K.C., of Ottawa, Ont.; Philip Ford Daw, of Hamilton; Charles Edmund, in Saskatchewan, and William Henry Daw, of Hamilton. Two sons, Herbert and Frederick, were killed in action during the Great War. Another son, Walter Gordon, died in infancy.

During his church career, Canon Daw has ministered to congregations at Dutchboro, North Grower, Belleville and finally Hamilton. He has conducted services during August each Sunday for years at the Mountain Sanatorium, of which he is dean.

Canon Daw was for some time rector of Christ Church, Belleville, Ont.

BRITAIN OVER WORST SAYS HON. L. MACAULAY

British Isles are Now Making Way Towards Recovery

Toronto, Sept. 5.—Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, reached home from an extensive visit to Great Britain and Europe, confirms the opinions expressed by others who have returned from overseas that the United Kingdom is definitely on "the way back" from the depression.

"The general impression is that Great Britain has seen the worst of the depression, and is now on the way back. I was quite surprised at the number of large construction jobs which are under way, particularly in the building of houses," said Mr. Macaulay.

While there was some construction in connection with public works undertakings, there was also much building being carried on by private capital, the Minister said. Of course, Great Britain was badly off with respect to housing. A Housing Committee reported while I was there that there were 1,000,000 families, each living in one room.

Mr. Macaulay said that not only was there a firm belief that Britain had passed the worst of the depression days of the depression period, but that there was confidence that that progress would be a continuous one to greater prosperity.

"Another thing which struck me is that London is again definitely the leading and financial centre of the world," Mr. Macaulay remarked.

STORM CUTS WIDE SWATH

Florida Escapes Loss of Life But Property Loss Is Heavy

Fort Pierce, Fla., Sept. 5—A tropical hurricane, with a trail of destruction across Florida north of West Palm Beam and Tampa Morgay bar, blew out toward the Gulf of Mexico with diminished intensity and without renewed loss of life.

Damage, while widespread, was reported torrential largely to citrus crops, power and communication lines, trees, and roofs at points where communication facilities are available.

A large part of the affected area, however, particularly in the low-lying sections of the lower peninsula, was virtually unreported. A large portion of the population around the Lake Shabbord area was evacuated in fear that the destruction of 1926 when 372 persons died in its low banks, would be repeated.

Jupiter, a small town of 700 inhabitants, reporting severe damage from a wind that reached 90 miles an hour before it blew the wind gauge away.

The freighter Elizabeth was driven aground near Jupiter and the coastguard flying boat was trying today to establish contact with her.

Leaving the coast the storm blew across the central part of the state where it attacked the rich citrus groves. Growers could not estimate the damage but said that it would be heavy.

DRIVES HIMSELF TO WORK AT 82

And Still Plays a Little Golf

How many of us, when we are 82, will be equal in health and activity to the example of Scottish engineer? In a letter he says—

"I arrived here from Scotland on the 7th April, 1870. I am over 82 years old. I drive my Ford car 45 miles over hills and dales to my factory, and can still play a little golf. I have taken a dose each day of Kruschen Salts in my cup of coffee every morning for some years, and I believe it is keeping me in good health and enabling me to keep on working at the factory, as an engineer."

Whether you are still in your teens or past your prime, it is neither too early nor too late to start on the "little daily dose." Just a tiny, tasteless pinch of Kruschen Salts in your morning cup of tea or coffee! They create internal cleanliness, and keep the blood-stream pure. A few minutes daily in the sun course to every fibre of your being. Rheumatism, headaches, indigestion and backache all pass you by.

U. S. FLEET CONCENTRATES NEAR CUBA

U. S. Marine Expedition Concentrates at Quantico Fifth Warship to Cuba

Unofficial Versions Say Orders Cuba-ward Are Out For Marines

READY TO MOVE

Cruiser Maryland May Be Ordered To Cuba

Washington, Sept. 6 (AP) —President Roosevelt today directed his Secretary of the Navy, Claude Swanson, to proceed directly to Havana, Cuba, aboard the cruiser Indianapolis.

Swanson will sail from Annapolis at 6 o'clock today and will arrive in Havana Friday morning.

Leaving a White House Conference on the Cuban situation, Swanson said he would go directly to Havana.

He added he had no specific orders.

At the same time, Admiral H. Standley, chief of Naval Operations flashed orders for a concentration of most of the vessels of the Atlantic waters around Cuba.

It was emphasized at the White House the President is withholding on intervention as the last step to be taken to restore order.

A spread of the disorders throughout the island to the faraway points of Guantanamo and Santiago is causing the precautionary measures.

Washington, Sept. 6 (AP)—The battleship Mississippi was ordered suddenly today to proceed at once into Cuban waters.

This will bring to five the American warships hovering in the vicinity of the disturbed Cuban situation, ready for action if foreign life and property are endangered. The other four were directed there yesterday.

In addition, President Roosevelt ordered immediately the entire expeditionary force of more than 1,000 at Quantico, Va., to be ready to move to the scene in case of emergency. Unofficial versions were that orders to head Cuba-ward already were out.

The huge Mississippi, which recently underwent modernization, carries about 900 blue-jackets, a company of marines, and approximately 80 officers.

The cruiser Indianapolis, now at Annapolis, Md., was to be ordered to proceed to Cuba also.

HOTELMAN IS CRASH VICTIM

Brockville, Ont., Sept. 6 (CP)—Thomas J. Allen, 53-year-old Brockville hotel proprietor, was killed instantly and C. W. Irwin, a Cornwall commercial traveller, was critically injured when their car left the highway near Prescott.

Allen, Irwin and a Toronto man whose name was not immediately available, left Brockville late last night to fish on Irwin's new car. When nearing Prescott the machine skidded on the road, plunged into the ditch and became wedged between two posts supporting a transformer. Allen was later pronounced dead in the wreckage.

Irwin, unconscious, was rushed to hospital here where little hope is held for his recovery.

An inquest will be held in Prescott today.

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS

Chicago, Sept. 6 (CP) — Mrs. Alice McBride died after eating a sandwich she prepared and in which she accidentally put big or glass from a broken jar.

Beloit, Wis., Sept. 6 (CP)—Gus Anderson, 36, of Rockton, told the court it was almost time he went home to drive his car that way—he accidentally swallowed his spuff while drinking beer. The combination made him dizzy, he testified.

"Ninety days," said the judge.

Keokanesel, Hungary, Sept. 6.—Twenty-four hours after his apparent death, when funeral arrangements had been completed, Istvan Krisan, 53 year old peasant, came to life. He died three days later.

TRAGIC DEATH

While attempting a non-stop flight from New York to Bagdad, Gen. Francesco de Pinedo was burned to death when his plane burched off the run-way and crashed into a steel fence while going 70 miles an hour. Horrified watchers saw him try to climb from the cockpit, his arms pressed over his face to escape the flames. After two or three attempts, he fell, half climbed from the aeroplane and fell beneath its nose as a wave of flames swept over him, blotting him from sight.

FOUR CONFESS TO ROBBERY

Frankford Crime Committed Instead of One At Stirling

Charged with breaking, entering and robbing Michael Saries' general store at Frankford of merchandise valued at over $400, Merle Prest, Ralph Campbell 18, Williams Rosa, 20, and John Rosa, 17, all giving Oshawa as their home, pleaded guilty to the charges and were sentenced on Wednesday morning's police court by Magistrate Mikel.

Prest, the oldest member of the quartette and the step-father of the two Rosa boys, was sentenced to serve from one to two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory; while the Rosa boys were given six months determinate with an indeterminate sentence of two years less one day in the same place; while Rosa and Ralph Campbell, were dealt with rather leniently by the court after their record and youthful ages were taken into consideration. They were sentenced to serve one month in the common jail. Prest informed the court that these youths were more victims of circumstance than criminals, with the result that the boys received the full extent of the law.

They were arrested Tuesday morning by County Constable P. Atkinson of Brighton, following information of the Frankford theft. The automobile in which they were riding when caught contained a large quantity of wearing apparel which they were placed under arrest and turned over to the Provincial Police who prosecuted. The stolen goods included suits of clothes, shoes, sweaters, leather coats, club bags, shirts, ladies' dresses and other articles, amounting in all to fully $400. All the stolen goods were recovered.

During the trial it was learned that the men had motored from Oshawa in an old car with the express purpose of staging a robbery at Stirling. After looking the situation over in that village they decided that Frankford would be the better place to stage the theft.

DICTATORSHIP REJECTED AS FOE FREEDOM

Liberal Conference At Port Hope Hears Montrealer

EFFICIENCY

Francis Hankin Says All Not Well With Public Ownership

Port Hope, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP) — Efficiency, equity and social welfare are the indispensable standards to which good society must conform, Francis Hankin of Montreal, told the members of the Liberal Summer Conference here today. To achieve these ideals various methods might be employed according to the nature of the society in which they are being developed.

The method of dictatorship was to be rejected because of its threat against individual liberty; the socialist method, and the more accepted one, said Mr. Hankin, was to make use of all the organs that a free liberty society has created.

The world of business in Canada was divided into two parts, the first provided the nation with public services and utilities, and in it the government was either owner or controller of a predominant proportion. The second embraced private enterprise in a variety of forms. The problem was to ensure that all were administered efficiently and equitably.

Mr. Hanking discussed the various agencies employed by the government to subsidize those undertakings in which its own role was that of controller. He cited the Dangers of political interference and patronage.

The experience of investigating commissions had shown that all was not well with the management of publicly owned enterprise, the speaker's operation of which depended upon their complete separation from political considerations.

To bring this about Mr. Hankin suggested that the management of these utilities be entrusted to autonomous bodies with adequate powers, and the right of appointment should not rest with the government.

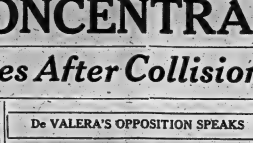
With regard to private enterprise, Mr. Hankin said that it must become more efficient and more equitable. This would be achieved if we must organize and plan and submit to control.

ARMS PARLEY PLANS VAGUE

Norman H. Davis Discusses European Views On Peace Methods

London, Sept. 6 (AP)—Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador-at-Large, said on reaching London today that the United States today that details of his program preliminary to the resumption of the disarmament conference in Geneva are still indefinite but will soon be worked out in some degree.

When Davis landed at Plymouth he said he would not predict success for the forthcoming conference, but hopes the nations "will have the wisdom and courage to reach an agreement" on arms reductions if they "weigh up the consequences of failure to arrive at some agreement."



He added that his government was willing to entertain a European non-aggression pact and said: "Continental Europe has been thinking about a treaty of mutual assistance, and that is almost exactly opposite to a treaty of non-aggression. We support the idea or disarmament and the British plan for disarmament in principle, but the details must be threshed out.

"We have advocated setting up a (prmers) body at Geneva to control armaments and we have not seen the plan in detail. We believe it necessary to have supervision and it is necessary to set up a permanent body to exercise that supervision."

Hurricane Turns, Swirls and Backtracks S. Texas

(By the Associated Press)

A sig-zag line pointing in all directions marked the course of the tropical hurricane which turned, swirled and backtracked over more than 400 miles of South Texas.

Sweeping in from the eastern Gulf of Mexico, the storm struck the mainland at Freeport, some fifty miles south of Houston, then curved in a due southwest direction and headed for the lower coast of the state.

It swooped over innumerable small towns and finally delivered a severe blow at Rockport, 170 miles south of Freeport. Without abatement the terrific winds next lashed Corpus Christi, 30 miles southwest of Freeport, whipping up huge tides and sending water into the first four streets inland from Corpus Christi Bay.

Bending still further and completing the arc begun at Freeport, the hurricane rushed due south 70 miles over sparsely settled coastline and laid siege to Harlingen and San Benito. Then it moved southeast.

After a terrific clap at Brownsville, one of the two most southern cities in the United States, it turned about and headed northwest again attacking Harlingen.

Due west the storm then headed, doing lesser damage at Edinburg and Mathis, 60 miles west of Brownsville, and finally, apparently disappearing into the air between Rio Grande city and Roma. Roma is 100 miles west of Brownsville and Harlingen.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—(CP)—A Chicago artist of Spartan birth resigned a Rockefeller blue necktie with a request that he change an unsolicited, oil portrait of John D. Rockefeller, Sr., and he is still hoping for a Rockefeller dime.

Michael Matsakas, Greek immigrant, erstwhile dishwasher and railroad gang laborer, studied at the Art Institute of Chicago. Last year he hit upon the idea of painting Rockefeller's portrait. Matsakas paid $3 for a photograph of his subject. He painted his portrait from that, sent it down to Cresmail Beach as a Christmas gift last December. It was accepted with reservations. He received the following letter:

"Dear Mr. Matsakas:

"Mr. Rockefeller is deeply appreciative of your kind thought in the gift of the portrait of himself which has just been received.

"Mr. Rockefeller and his friends think it would be an improvement if the necktie could be brought to a different shade of blue, and we are taking the Liberty of sending you the portrait, express prepaid, and one of Mr. Rockefeller's ties which represents the shade of blue which he has been in the habit of wearing, and if it is your pleasure to make the improvement to your already general contribution to you will then return the portrait, expressage collect, we will send you our thoughts respecting the picture as a whole . . .

Matsakas made the corrections suggested and sent the oil back to Mr. Rockefeller.

Vermont Goes "Wet" by Two to One Majority in Light Voting

Montpelier, Vt., Sept. 6.—(AP)—Vermont today stood within the wet fold by a 2 to 1 majority.

A light vote was tabulated quickly and before midnight last night the Green Mountain State, long a stronghold of United States prohibition forces, was recorded as the 25th successive state to vote repeal of the 18th amendment.

The complete vote of the 243 towns and cities was:

For repeal, 41,272; against 20,572.

A ticket of 11 delegates, representing each of the 14 counties, will meet at Montpelier to ratify the 21st amendment by which the 18th would be repealed.

WILLIAM ROSE STRIKES SIDE OF MOTORCAR

Catapulted 20 Feet After Striking Car Driven By John Wesley

INQUEST OPENS

Pillion Rider Escapes Though Thrown In Contact

Thrown from his motorcycle when it collided with an automobile at a cross road some four miles south of Picton on the Cherry Valley road William Rose of Cherry Valley suffered fatal injuries early Wednesday morning and died some two hours later in the Picton General Hospital. William Broker, who was riding on the rear of the motorcycle at the time of the collision, suffered internal injuries but was later discharged from the hospital, following receiving medical attention. The driver of the motor car, which is alleged by the police to have failed to stop at a crossroad, was John Wesley, a hired man in the employee of Mr. Werden, Hallowell.

Rose, who was driving the motor cycle, was proceeding southward at the time of the accident and apparently failed to observe the Wesley car approaching from the west and crashed into the side into the side of the car. Rose was catapulted through the air and his body landed on the south bound fect south of the impact. Broker, who was sitting on the rear of the machine was also thrown sideways and sustained injuries from which no slight injuries. Rose suffering badly from internal injuries.

Provincial Constable Dunford, of Picton investigated and later completed the Picton coroner to take the fatally injured man to the hospital. While there he held questioning and a coroner's inquest will be held on Friday night next.

The accident which occurred in Athol Township, happened about 7.00 a.m. Wednesday morning.

FINDS FIRE SMOULDERING

Miss L. White, Corbyville, Makes Fortunate Discovery

An attempt was made early Tuesday night to set fire to the residence of Miss Lillian White, postmistress at Corbyville. Miss White and her mother Mrs. Richard White lived in the house which is adjoining the small building which houses the Corbyville Post Office and the small White store, near the railway crossing at the south end of the village. Mrs. White has lived in the same residence for the past 45 years.

Tuesday evening between 9.15 and 9.30 when Miss White left the Post Office duties require early closing the latter is usually the last night when she smelled smoke coming from the building from a small stone-lined cellar at the back of the house. Opening the door she immediately found the cellar filled with a black oily smelling smoke. Several loose wooden covers had caught fire and were charred and after extinguishing these Miss White carried out a search.

Screening in the cellar window had been broken through, an old wooden box had been piled on end and a number of matches were found scattered on the floor just near the window. Later rook marks were discovered near a rear fence and flowers had been broken down where evidently the thief had made entrance to the grounds.

Although the cellar is of solid stone there are several built in racks in the cellar, which reach to the door into the kitchen and a disastrous fire might have ensued had not accidently act been committed at a later hour. Though neighbors were working in their garages on both sides of the White homestead, no prowler was noted about the premises.

Provincial police are investigating the occurrence today.

George Hicks, M.P., Says World Too Small For Capitalism

HYSTERIA DANGER

General Conference of Unions Called To Consider World Affairs

(By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Brighton, England, Sept. 6 (C.P. Cable)—The General Council of the Trades Union Congress is to call a special conference of unions to consider "the imminent position of affairs in the world."

Resumption of Congress discussions today resulted in a debate on steps to prevent war. George Gibson, Trades Union Secretary, drew attention to a resolution adopted at the International Trades Union Congress in Brussels advocating a general strike as the ultimate weapon of the working class against war.

A general strike was to be called, he said, at the moment when any country began a dispute refused to agree to arbitration by the League of Nations.

George Hicks, member of the House of Commons for Woolwich East, declared the world had become to small for capitalism. "A frightful and catastrophic war is threatening civilization," Hicks said. "The greatest danger is from Hitlerism and fascism."

"In the mental atmosphere of today it is easier to work up a psychological war hysteria than in 1914," declared W. Beacham of the Painters' and Decorators' Union.

The Congress agreed to remit the Brighton resolution to the General Council for consideration and action. A. G. Walkden, the chairman, then announced the General Council was prepared to summon a special conference before the end of the year.

Flimsy Skiff Dares Rolling Seas to Bring Safety Tidings

Weary Fishermen Drive Craft To Report Molly S. Safe

Lion's Head, Ont., Sept. 6 (CP)—A flimsy rowboat that braved lowering seas and strong winds as two weary fishermen drove for several hours through the night, brought word of the safety of the missing Molly S. 30-foot steam cabin cruiser, to Lion's Head today.

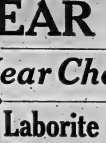
Feared lost on stormy-swept Georgian Bay, the Molly S. is safe at her fishing grounds 25 miles northeast of Cabot's Head at two o'clock this morning. They were exhausted from hours of fighting the turbulent bay.

Unreported since she set out Monday morning for a day's fishing until Ferris and Malcolm crawled out of their little boat nearly 48 hours later and were found in the vicinity of the disabled Molly S. It was not known whether it will be possible to repair the engine vessel or whether she will be towed to port by the Marwick.

The Marwick crew hoped to be able to get food aboard the Molly S., which carried provisions for only one day when she left here Monday. Menary Brothers, owners of the Molly S., expected to send another tug to the rescue later today.

Fishermen ashore had almost given up hope when Ferris and Malcolm brought word of the tug's safety. They thought the engine of little steam tug had been lost in the heavy seas.

THE WEATHER



Toronto, Sept. 6.—(CP)—Thundershowers have occurred in Georgian Bay and Lake Superior regions but elsewhere in Eastern Canada the weather has been fair. High pressure and cooler weather covers the Canadian West and light showers have been recorded in some districts of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan—North and northeast winds; partly cloudy and considerably cooler; probably a few scattered showers.

Alberta—Partly cloudy and quite cool with a few scattered showers, or snowflurries.

CARRIER PIGEON FIREMEN'S GUEST

Down at No. 1 Fire Station a young carrier pigeon is an honored guest. The visitor arrived at the fire station Labor Day, in a state of exhaustion, and very hungry. He walked into the station and was warmly welcomed by the firemen, besides who attended to its wants, gave it food and water, and housed it in one of the large squirrel houses untenanted since "Nigger" the black squirrel died. Much curiosity, gave up city housekeeping. The pigeon wears a red band bearing the inscription HB09, also a silver band with the inscription CHUCK, 1932. Fire Chief Lynch will hold the bird for a few days pending the arrival of possible word from the owners.

PROGRESS IS MADE BY LARGE DREDGE

Considerable progress has been made during the past week or so on the river channel clearing and dredging the boat channel to Schuster's dock. This week the large shovel on the dredge has started clean in to the old wharf, steadily forging ahead, clearing the silt and gravel from the bottom of the harbor. A large quantity of submerged wood, some the timbers of old derelict boats which lie near the wharf is also being dug up by the shovel and salvaged by unemployed for fire wood.

GENTLE RAINFALL IS WELL RECEIVED

A soft, gentle shower which drenched the district early in the morning on Wednesday is being well received by farmers in the district who look upon the rain as money-maker and aid to the late garden vegetables which had begun to dry up. The nature of the rain which has descended slowly over a lengthy period throughout the day is very beneficial to the land which has for some weeks been dry. Many wells in the district which had also been to dry up have also be favored by the downpour.

Four Children Ready for Fair

Preparations are going ahead for the free trip to Toronto and the Exhibition given the four children of Belleville by Mr. Wm. Wrigley Co. of Canada who are conducting this children's guest tour.

On Wednesday a letter was received by Mayor Tice from the company advising him that a letter was being sent out to one of the four children with full particulars regarding the trip. The letters in the children contain:

Official badge which each child is to wear from the time they leave until they return.

Return railway ticket, which the children are cautioned to care for and not lose.

Sleeping car accommodations—if necessary.

Dining car accommodations.

It is expected that the four lucky children will be given their respective envelopes today, while further particulars will be given them on the return of Mayor Tice on Thursday.

A Cold in the Head

This is a misnomer. It should be called, "heat in the head," an inflammation of the mucus lining of the nose and throat. If a person who is subject to "colds" should take warning of the fact that this is an expression of nature, that the heat is not functioning normal. A well person does not "take" cold easily. The old proverb, "a stitch in time saves nine," should be applied. It is natural to be healthy. If you are not there is a reason.

SECOND BATT. VETS GATHER

Permanent Association Is Formed At Reunion

Peterboro Sept. 6— Second Infantry Battalion veterans were found for home last night, after holding a reunion and forming a central organization of all the unit's branches, to be known as the 2nd Canadian Infantry Battalion Association. Here on Monday, Sir Arthur W. Currie, Commander of the Canadian Corps during the war, was named Honorary President of the association, and Lieut-Colonel L. T. McLaughlin of Bowmanville, President.

Captain W. J. Murray of Ottawa, who played a large part in the formation of the organization, was elected Secretary. During the reunion, the battalion, headed by the Peterboro Rangers Band, paraded through the city, and a piece of silver plate was presented to Colonel McLaughlin by Colonel G. O. Winterbottom, on behalf of the battalion, as a mark of esteem from his old comrades on the occasion of his recent marriage. A brief memorial service was conducted at the cenotaph.

Other officers elected by the 200 members at the reunion banquet were: Honorary Vice-Presidents, Lieut.-Gen. Sir A. C. Macdonald, Major-Gen. Garnet E. Hughes, Major-Gen. W. G. Gribbell, Brig.-Gen. A. E. Ifft; Vice-Presidents, Colonel Thomas Vandervoort, Peterboro; Colonel G. O. Winterbottom, Peterboro; Colonel G. O. Chrysler, Ottawa.

FAIR BALANCE IS EXPECTED

Belleville Exhibition Board Pleased With Four Days' Results

Although it will be some time before the officers and directors of the Belleville Fair can draft a final financial statement or the monetary outcome of their splendid 1933 exhibition, yet all are optimistically expectant that when all returns have been made, there will be some balance on the right side. Cash donations for the prize list in a number of cases have not yet been received, and there are several other sources of income that have as yet, not been settled.

This morning Mr. H. B. Stock, first Vice-President of the Fair, expressed himself and spoke for his fellow directors as well pleased at the four days' attendance. On all sides during the time he was present on the grounds, people hailed stopped him to speak of the wonderful show put on at the grand stand and were loud in their praise of the exhibition throughout. Mr. Stock anticipating that the Fair this year would prove financially successful.

Mr. Harry L. Ketcheson, director in charge of Speeding Events, said in the horse winners were more than pleased with the courtesy accorded them, the accommodation and arrangements for their equines and equipment, the grand track and the events scheduled. The Saturday previous to the opening of the Fair, some 38 horses entered on the grounds and 48 trotters and pacers took part in the races. Horse owners are glad to come to the Belleville Fair and all expressed themselves as pleased and looked forward to returning next year. The speeding events were the best of any Belleville Fair yet held.

Mr. Ambrose C. Defoe, treasurer of the Fair Board, interviewed, gave a few figures connected with the 1933 exhibition. There were approximately 11,000 and 12,000 people in attendance the four days of the fair; cash was entered the grounds in that time and 1038 children paid a 10-cent admission. The grandstand and the midway attracted children and 3409 adults paying admission to it. Mr. Defoe pointed out that Mr. H. E. Fairfield had estimated the revenue from the grandstand would amount to $1000 and he had come within $50 of the actual takings there which has amounted to $950.

The treasurer of the Fair did not wish to commit himself, but he hopefully thought that when cash donations had been received and some rentals paid in that the 1933 Fair would realize some profit. Mr. Defoe thought the finest exhibition yet put on in Belleville, and spoke of it as auguring well for a still finer one next year.

Mr. R. H. Ketcheson, who arose from a three weeks' illness in bed to be present in his office on the grounds was unable to see ought of the fair save his own property. From a couch in his office he directed the final details of his large secretarial duties. Visitors to his sanctum sanctorum on the grounds had given him encouragement in their continued praise of what officers and directors had provided and exhibitors were as voluminous in their praise as had been the slightest. Mr. W. D. Gray, of Ottawa, who judged the horses spoke of the wonderful improvement in the various classes, both in number and quality. Those who called on Mr. Ketcheson, he said, were loud in their praise of the grandstand shows and gave every assurance of the pleasure all exhibits had afforded. The secretary of the Fair also anticipated the outcome of the 1933 exhibition would prove financially successful.

While nearly everybody in town Labor Day afternoon was patronizing one of the splendid athletic programs affair sponsored by the South End Athletic Club or Victoria Park, civic employees were making use of the time to overtake the growth of weeds about the city hall and give it was for the numerous boys who were at other up from the grass by handfuls to surprise one another through the playing of various side activations.

Thanks are due to the promoters of Monday's local picnic affair. A crowd enhances the enthusiasm of the picnic and the feeling for a hearty enjoyment of delightful programme. All of the

The vision and foresight of those who pioneered for the establishment of Victoria Park as a beautiful idle and ideal demands recognition now. Many communities would give a good deal to have such a spot.

Monday morning when many men were in a position to observe the fine labor of the early part of the summer period of office and shop it was quite apparent that several found relaxation in home chores and garden garnering.

Wire Fences Replace Hedges in Some Parts of Old England

Mr. E. H. Tickell Who Is Back From Old Land Tells of Travel

LITTLE POVERTY

Slowly but perceptibly many aspects of the British Isles, such as visitors to the country had known it not so many years ago, have undergone a marked change within recent years, Dominion now journeying through the country have been struck with the many recent improvements which have threatened to destroy the flavor and atmosphere so typical of the Old Land.

All this was observed by Mr. Edward H. Tickell of this city who has just returned to Belleville after a seven weeks' tour through England, in company with his sister, Miss A. Tickell and his niece, Miss J. Tickell.

Although the greater part of the visit was spent in London and suburbs, a trip was also made by the party through the colliery districts in the north of England. Here was the only place in England that poverty of distress was noted among the inhabitants, declared Mr. Tickell. But in larger centres not so much unemployment or destitution as of the laboring classes was observed such as has been common in this country during late years. In the colliery districts, however, many single unemployed men are found waiting for work at the only trade they know—mining. The majority of the coal mines have been closed down and workers have been forced out of their jobs. Here, however, the government has stepped in and in a considerable measure has attempted to alleviate conditions. In many centres housing conditions have been considerably improved by the erection of modern small dwellings for the workless. Together with the dole which is still in operation, the non-working families are able to get along comfortably.

Wire Fences New

One particular feature of the trip was noted by Mr. Tickell, that visitors who have journeyed through England are well acquainted with the beautifully kept hedges and stone fences which run for miles through the country along the railway lines. This has been a typical feature of the British landscape. However, in past years, particularly along the London, Midland and Scottish railway, miles of modern wire fence being erected has replaced the old time stone fences and pretty shrub hedges. This has resulted in a better scenic view of the country for the passenger in the day coaches but has destroyed some of the old world charm.

The Belleville party left Montreal on the Cunard steamer, Alsatia, on July 14, and enjoyed a very smooth passage across the Atlantic, in the Cabin Class, which they entered and made port at the Surrey docks right in the heart of London. Here they were enabled to visit all of the better known points of interest.

A Small World

"The world is a small one, after all," stated Mr. Tickell on his return. "We were going through the House of Commons in London one day when who should we meet but Mrs. (Dr.) Farley of Belleville, who had also been visiting it with a friend. And that is not the first time we met acquaintances or Belleville in such a time or another place. At one time or another we visited Mackalyne's Egyptian Hall in London we met Mr. Hoskes and his wife of Toronto. He knew Belleville quite well, having been a patient at one time in the local hospital."

"The general tone of the country is excellent," stated Mr. Tickell. "Everybody seems to have a job and everybody is hustling around making a living. One doesn't need half as much money under conditions there as you would hear in this country. The cost of living in centres seem to be enjoying a fair measure of prosperity."

While a considerable concentration of soldiers in army camps and exercises was noted by Mr. Tickell and party, little military talk was heard. The months of July of the year was the general training season for all troops in the British Isles, which made the concentration of soldiers in the camps more noticeable. As far as unrest among the troops or civilians was noticed, it was not noticeable to the casual visitor, or observer. Militarism which is so much decrying Europe seemed to have little effect on the minds of the British Isles. Little comment was heard regarding it.

London Living Cheap

Living in London was believed by Mr. Tickell to be cheaper than in Toronto. The usual charge for the party for bed and breakfast at the better grade of hotels was eight shillings and six pence, but this would be charged in many cities in Canada for what could get as good meal for two shillings at almost any place in England, while other commodities and necessities were correspondingly low in price" he stated.

"Immigration which was once a chief topic of conversation among residents of the Old Land has fallen off to a mere murmur. Steamship companies, declared Mr. Tickell have ceased to advertise extensively their rates for immigration to Canada and the colonies. There is less interest displayed by young men in the scheme of colonization, just at present.

"Although the party had been gone from Canada for nearly seven weeks before they left home, they stated that even this period was all too short to see as much of the country as he would have liked. Every day spent here was enjoyable, but there was so much to see throughout the country that a visit to the places they had intended to visit had to be reconsidered. One would need a year or more to thoroughly enjoy the trip and become acquainted with the country.

On their return passage the party sailed from Southampton on the steamer Aurania of the Cunard line. Although they enjoyed a smooth passage over, on their return voyage heavy seas made the going rough. Many of the passengers on board were confined to their cabins with severe mal de mar which made their return passage anything but enjoyable. None in Mr. Tickell's party, however were ill from effects of the seas.

"England was very pretty," Mr. Tickell summed up in a short interview. "The trip was wonderful, and we enjoyed every moment of it. However one of the biggest thrills I got from the trip was the first view of Canada from the boat after out several week's absence. It certainly looked pretty good to all of us."

THEFTS FROM CARS PARKED ON STREETS

Four Boys Rounded Up By Police Last Night

Complaints relating to thefts from parked automobiles in the vicinity of Upper Front Street, especially in the neighbourhood of the Belle Theatre, are being received by the police repeatedly of late. Stories of tobaccos, small parcels and other articles of small value having been stolen from automobiles were so prevalent that the local police were somewhat baffled at first until Monday evening when four small boys were found prowling about the cars near the theatre. The four youths, who are under the age of 15 years, were rounded up by local police and taken to the police station for questioning. Later all four confessed to having taken part in various other petty thefts in and about the city. The youths were allowed to return home late Tuesday night but will return to the police station at a later date when a further investigation will follow.

The police department feel that they have at last ended the petty thieving from motor cars parked on the streets of Belleville.

WILLIAM RAYFIELD

Following a short illness a widely known and popular resident of this city passed away early this (Wednesday) morning in the Bellevill General Hospital in the person of William Rayfield, 777 Albert Street. Mr. Rayfield was born in London, England, 71 years ago, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Rayfield, and came to Belleville as a boy, where he has resided the past 62 years. He was a chef by occupation and was employed in the Hotel Quinte, the Crystal Hotel and several other local hotels during those years. Mr. Rayfield was a man of genial, kindly nature and will be missed by a host of friends and acquaintances in this city and district, whose sympathy goes to those left in mourning his loss.

Surviving are two sons, Gerald, of Toronto, and Frank, of Belleville and one daughter, Mrs. W. G. Norwood, with whom the father made his home.

The remains will rest at the Bellevill Funeral Home, Funeral Home, 37 Campbell St., till the time of the funeral. Friday afternoon.

LATE JAMES DONALDSON

Many friends and neighbors from the city and countryside were Tuesday afternoon in attendance at the funeral service for James Donaldson, which was held from his late residence, North Park St. The Rev. Robert Hall, pastor of John St. United Church, conducted the service at the home and at the graveside in the Belleville cemetery.

Acting as bearers were, Messrs. Thomas Wilson, Thomas Bennett, William Moorman, R. M. Mitchell and Wesley Gray.

Here's a Program that's All a Program Should Be—Every Subject an Attraction and a Treat!!

Good from Start to Finish!!

John B. Ryan, Prop. New Queen's Hotel:

"Hotel men have been among the first to notice returning prosperity. During the past few months gentle increase in business has been observed. The reason is easily explained: Manufacturing companies and firms are returning their agents and travellers back to their jobs. Many of them have been laid off for indefinite periods, but now they are back at work again, covering their old routes. This has resulted in more business for us and a greater feeling of security among even smaller buyers. We have been particularly busy during the last two or three months."

H. G. Mills, Tinsmith—

"Make your money before you are forty, after that you have little chance. Most of the employers now want youth to work for them; the old, experienced men are passing up in favor of the younger. Not an opening for them anywhere. They just don't fit in anymore. There are many an older man who could take a job and show up the younger youngsters in both quality of work and speed in doing it."

Thomas Holdener, Transport Driver:

"If some of those birds who roar along in fast cars up and down the highways at night would just have a little sympathy with the man who is in a slower vehicle, there would be less accidents and fewer nervous breakdowns among truck drivers. I'm not looking! The responsibility of shoving one of those big expensive trucks and trailers over the road gets me soon or later. Then they have to quit before the crack up. Those boys (or birds rather) in the fast cars who dodge up from behind and dart in front of you, seem to have no notion that we can't manoeuvre our load like they can a light car. I'd like to see them actually try to push us off the road. It's a tough racket!",

Jeff Kelly, Midway Attendant, Exhibition Shows—

"Belleville is a great location. We have noticed more order and better behaviour among the crowds here than we have met in lots of other places, larger cities not excepted. People here seem to have better manners. We appreciate that. Judging by the looks of the crowd everyone was enjoying themselves and there seemed to be little enough rowdyism. I don't believe the smaller cities have been as hard hit as the larger ones."

THIRTY-EIGHT KILLED DURING HURRICANE

Lower Rio Grande Valley In Texas Is Laid Waste

12 MILLION LOSS

Warnings Save Many Lives As Residents Prepare

HOUSTON, TEXAS, Sept. 6.—(AP)—Thirty-eight persons were killed by the great tropical hurricane which devastated the beautiful and prosperous lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas and Mexico Monday night and Tuesday.

Crashing in from the Gulf of Mexico at midnight, the mighty storm spread ruin and desolation over one of the richest agricultural areas in the United States, and only to the fact warnings had been broadcast a week in advance prevented much larger loss.

Despite the warnings, however, the hurricane caught many people unable to withstand its tremendous force and fears were expressed the death list would grow as crippled communications made it possible to gather the complete story of the catastrophe. There were 20 known dead in Brownsville and vicinity, 16 in Hartigan and two in Rockdale. Six of the dead in the Brownsville area were accounted for in Matamoros, Tamaulipas, Mexico, just across the Rio Grande from Brownsville.

Maybe More Deaths

Whether the storm snatched additional victims from the small towns and villages and agricultural sections as it raked a path of terror from the mouth of the great river toward the west, moving into Mexico, was not known immediately.

Calls for relief and even for institution of martial law went out from some of the stricken communities, and Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson, as well as Texas' two senators, moved swiftly to bring them succor.

At least five relief trains hastily were equipped to battle disease and allay thirst and hunger, threatened by the temporary destruction of power plants and transportation that were rushed into the storm country.

One train moved from Kingsville, the nearest available point, two from San Antonio, one from Corpus Christi, which also experienced the destructive power of the hurricane, and one from Laredo, far to the northwest. One train from San Antonio bore army medical officers and a detachment of troops from Kelly Field.

While the stricken thousands in the valley bore up bravely, despite the fact all the possessions of many including their homes, had been swept away, a new threat appeared in the form of a possible flood as a result of torrential rains which accompanied the hurricane.

All lands were affected most seriously, engineers said, from 75 to 100 miles square. Thousands of farmers saw crops valued at millions of dollars destroyed. The citrus growers probably were the heaviest losers. P. A. Hoidale, in charge of the United States Department of Agriculture Citrus Inspection Service of the valley, estimated 90 per cent. of the fruit was blown from the trees. The valley citrus crop had been valued unofficially at $13,000,000.

24 MONKEYS TO ST. LOUIS

Will Be Used In Study of Sleeping Sickness

Washington, Sept. 6 (AP)—The United States Public Health Service has announced today that it has evidence indicates a possibility the "sleeping sickness" now epidemic in St. Louis may be spread like infantile paralysis, through secretions of the nose and throat.

Twenty-four monkeys have been sent to St. Louis and others are ready for shipment when needed for experiments.

Public Health Service workers lean somewhat to the theory that "sleeping sickness carriers," similar to diphtheria carriers who spread the disease without having it themselves, may be causing the present epidemic. This ill bolstered somewhat by an increase in reported disease cases in the more thickly populated sections of St. Louis. It partially discounts the theory that insects transmit the disease, developed early in the epidemic when most of the cases occurred in the suburbs.

NO DEAL WITH PROGRESSIVES

Rt. Hon. W. L. M. King Addresses Liberal School

PORT HOPE, Ont., Sept. 6.—(CP)—Proportional representation formed the subject of discussion at the Liberal summer conference here today, two proceedings being addressed over by Col. O. M. Biggar, K.C., former chief electoral officer. The feeling in the round table group was that "P. R." was less necessary in rural districts than in the cities where all shades of opinion were entitled to representation.

Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, former Prime Minister, told the Conference he did not think badly of the idea of additional parties in the House of Commons. During his years when he had a majority of only one, said Mr. King, government measures had received greater support than before.

The former Premier commented that he had never made any deal with the Progressives in the hour.

RAINBOW IS CAUSED BY MOON REPORTED

Calgary, Sept. 6.—A rainbow caused by the moon was reported Tuesday by Orville Huck and Moore Pearson of Crossfield, near Calgary. Following a thunder shower, they said, the moon appeared from behind a dense cloud and in almost perfectly-shaped rainbow could be seen in the northern sky for about six minutes.

SPENCER IS NAMED

OTTAWA, Sept. 6.—(CP)—Lyna B. Spencer of Welland has been appointed by Hon. Wesley Gordon, Minister of Labor, as chairman of the Board of Investigation and Conciliation in the dispute between the Canadian Pacific Railway and its clerks, freight handlers, etc., and subsidiary groups.

BROKERAGE OFFICES INSPECTION SOUGHT

Port Hope, Sept. 6.—Despite the experience of 1929, no adequate steps had been taken to protect the public again repetition of stock manipulation, J. C. McRuer, Toronto, told one of the round-table groups at the Liberal Summer conference here.

Certain brokers, Mr. McRuer said had been sent to prison, but due to lack of supervision and inspection of brokers' offices, there was no way of knowing of others who, perhaps, ought to have been prosecuted.

Mr. McRuer strongly advocated examination of inspection of the books of licensed brokers by the Government.

The criminal law, he said, had enough teeth in it to deal with such conditions, if the Attorney-General had courage enough to enforce it.

PICTURE ON CRASHED PLANE TELLS ROMANCE

De Pinedo's Love for Italian Princess Proven by Two Signed Portraits

Brooklyn, N.Y., Sept. 6—Two pictures of a beautiful, dark-eyed girl, one signed "Giovanna" and the other "Ruba," were found in the wreckage of the several times trans-Atlantic Pinedo's plane at Floyd Bennett Field.

The noted Italian flier crashed and burned to death while attempting to take off on a flight to Bagbad last Saturday morning.

Published reports at the time of the flier's death said one theory of his loss of official prestige in his native land was that he had dared to pay court to Princess Giovanna, daughter of King Victor Emmanuel and now Queen of Bulgaria. The flier had the title of marquis.

The report said it was believed in official circles the desire or the king to put a stop to the romance led to the "exile" of de Pinedo.

LOOSER CREDIT BANKS URGED

President Roosevelt Expects Flow of Credit

Chicago, Sept. 6.—(AP)—President Roosevelt told United States bankers Tuesday he expects them to unleash the flow of credit and enable industry and commerce to take the biggest advantage of the National Recovery Act.

"I am confident you will work with me to meet the credit needs of industry and trade," he said in a speech read before the annual convention of the American Bankers Association, attended by 3,000 bankers from over the country.

Mr. Roosevelt addressed the association's spokesmen. Governor Eugene R. Black of the Federal Reserve Board and Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, expressed in even stronger tones a demand that banks loosen their credit.

Black declared the government had made provision for the bankers to make credit more elastic, saying: "Now, it's up to you to do it."

TREASURERS TO DISCUSS ISSUES

OTTAWA, Sept. 6. — (CP)—September 11 and 12 have been set for a Dominion-Provincial conference of Treasury officials. In an effort to bring about a system which would enable the Dominion Bureau of Statistics to present more comprehensive and comparable data on present-day finance and "to facilitate examination of the general financial situation with some degree of completeness," Hon. Charles Mc Neil, K.C., Minister of Trade and Commerce, has invited provincial Treasury Officials to meet in Ottawa next week.

FIVE MEN TO RULE IN CUBA FOR PRESENT

Revolutionary Government Will Be Set Up Shortly

RETURN OF ORDER

"Vindications" Outlined In Plan For Economic Reconstruction

By John F. McKnight

Havana, Sept. 6 AP)—A junta of five men took charge today of the second revolutionary government Cuba has had in less than a month.

This "executive commission for provisional government," named after the rank and file of Cuban defense, forces had driven out President de Cespedes and his cabinet, will rule until an actual revolutionary regime is established.

Its members decided to meet this morning to outline their policies, to seek the return of order, and to demand recognition by other nations of the new administration.

An earlier manifesto announced the revolutionary junta, composed of enlisted soldiers and sailors and civilians, of various factions, led by the student organization, "the spirit of the revolution vindications" upon "pure principles of national sovereignty."

These "vindications" were outlined in the proclamation as economic reconstruction, labor reforms, frequents" of the former government, recognition of national debts, formation of adequate courts, reorganization of national services for an early return to normality, and measures for creating a new Cuba, "founded on the firm bases of liberty and the most modern concept of democracy."

In Havana harbor was the United States destroyer McFarland, sent hurriedly from Key West, and the strayeg Sturtevant was at Santiago, where a mob killed four men reputedly members of the strong armed squad of Gerardo Machado, whose government fell on August 12 and gave way to the short-live administration of Dr. de Cespedes.

Two other warships, the cruiser Richmond and the destroyer Balaibridge, were due today or tomorrow from Jamaica, bringing with an announced intention also of protecting American interests.

LATE MRS. WM. J. HALL

The funeral of the late Mrs. Amelia J. Hall was held Saturday afternoon from her late residence, 276 George Street. A large number of friends were in attendance to pay their last tribute of respect to the memory of one who was loved by them and held the affectionate regard of a host of acquaintances. The wealth of floral tributes furnished ample evidence the high place Mrs. Hall held in the hearts of many and the sympathy felt for those left to mourn her loss. Rev. Robert Hall, pastor of the John St. Unitarian Church conducted the service at the home and at the graveside in Pinnacle cemetery. Before the service at her late residence, the Rev. Mr. Everson of Plainfield, also assisted.

The bearers were all colleagues of Mr. Hall in the manufacturing business of this city, Messrs. S. J. Fisher, Howard Frost, J. W. Dafoe, Geo. Frost, H. C. Earle and Jamieson Bone.

LATE MORRIS H. VOLLICK

Madoc (Special)—In Madoc village on Tuesday, August 29th, 1933, Morris Harvey Vollick, passed away after a prolonged illness bravely borne. He was 66 years of age, and leaves besides his sorrowing widow, one daughter, Mrs. Thompson of Toronto, and two sons, Wesley of Madoc, and Russell of Point Anne. The funeral took place from his late residence, on Friday afternoon, Sept. 1st, Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne, rector of St. John's Anglican Church officiating. Beloved and familiar hymns were sung "Rock of Ages" and "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." Taking as his text, Psalm 37, 38 in the Prayer Book version) "Keep innocency, and take heed to the thing that is right, for that shall bring a man peace at the last." Rev. Mr. Swayne preached a most comforting and inspiring sermon.

The bearers were Messrs. P. Conon, T. Hanley, Henry, T. Blue, R. O'Riordan and Devolin. Interment was made at Lakeview cemetery.

THE LATE JOHN MASON

Springbrook (Special)—The funeral of the late John Mason was held on Thursday afternoon from his late residence in the village of Springbrook with many friends and neighbors in attendance. The Rev. W. H. Foley of the United Church, conducted the service at the house and at the graveside in Mount Nebo cemetery.

Serving as pall bearers were R. Fleming, R. Scarlett, C. Benson, A. Haslett, J. McComb and Wesley Haslett.

The deceased leaves to mourn his loss his wife, and one sister, Mrs. Annie Bonter of Crowe Lake; four brothers, George of Edwards, N. Y.; Mrs. Susie Haslett, Bulyea, Saskatchewan; Mrs. Ada Sine of Springbrook; Mr. Bateman and family, of Edmonton, Alberta.

The many floral tributes showing the esteem of the deceased were: Pillow family; Sheaf, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Haslett and family; Springbrook Softball Team; Springbrook Ladies' Aid; Mr. and Mrs. George Mason; Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Mason; Spray, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mason; Mrs. Lena Bateman and family.

HEPBURN'S CELERY CROP SUFFERS LOSS

St. Thomas, Sept. 6—Meteorological records taken in St. Thomas show that the total precipitation for the first eight months of this year was 18.84 inches, as compared with 25.01 inches in a corresponding period last year. Unless relief from the drought comes quickly, the acreage of fall wheat planted in Elgin county will be considerably under that of a year ago. Farmers are hauling water for stock, and heavy inroads are being made into fields of standing corn supposed to supplement the burnt pastures. M. F. Hepburn, Liberal leader, will suffer considerable financial loss through lack of moisture in his celery acreage grown on reclaimed black muck lands.

CHILD GUESSES LOG 159 YEARS OLD

TORONTO, Sept. 6.—There's a yellow birch log from Nova Scotia in the Province Building at the Canadian National Exhibition that had defied the attempts of old men of middle-aged women, and all kinds of youths to decipher its age. It took a youngster to guess that the log was 159 years old. She was Frances Poole of 251 Forest Hill Road.

And she had the wisdom of all the others and the log sawed and she measured the diameter of the burnt surface. She calculated that it was 159 years old. She knew, unconsciously, her child mind through lack of moisture in his celery acreage grown on reclaimed black muck lands.

Altogether 317 people guessed the age of the log. The highest guess was 6,900, the lowest six years. The young girl used her knowledge of mathematics or her intuition or both—There was more than a mere guess—and she won a prize, while 316 men, women and children lost out.

"NO FINER BASIN IN WORLD"

"There cannot be a finer basin in the world than the Bay of Quinte"—Major General Sir James Carmichael-Smyth, Baronet.

In another part of the paper will be seen a communication from W. C. Mikel, K.C., in which he refers to a report of a British expert, Major General Sir James Carmichael-Smith, Baronet, on the Bay of Quinte and also a report of the Board of Trade of Montreal and a statement of Col. MacDougall all agreeing that "there cannot be a finer basin in the world than the Bay of Quinte" for shipping. Expert information of this kind should encourage the business interests of the Bay of Quinte to use every effort to have the dredging and other work on the Bay done so as to permit ocean trade with the Belleville district.

The suggestion to have material dredged from the Bay deposited along the northerly shore at the Bay between the Government Dock and Point Anne, instead of simply being deposited in some other part of the Bay is one that should be adopted, in not only the dredging now going on, but in all future dredging of the Bay. In that way land will be made useful for industries and dockage.

MUNICIPAL ECONOMY

The Ontario Committee on Economy in Public Finance, Ontario municipal representative of every city of the province and every town of nine thousand population and over, has just tabulated replies to questionnaires submitted to members and local Boards of Trades and Chambers in thirty cities and towns.

These municipalities' records indicated that in 1931, nineteen of these municipalities had surpluses aggregating $362,806, and eleven had deficits totalling $1,440,978, net deficit for the thirty cities and towns of $1,087,167. In 1932 only fourteen had surpluses aggregating $297,693 and fifteen had deficits amounting to $2,228,770, or a net deficit for twenty-nine centres of $1,931,076. One city did not reports its surplus or deficit for 1932. The net deficit was therefore increased in 1932 over 1931 by $852,909, presumably due largely to increased unemployment relief expenditures. Of the twenty-nine municipalities submitting complete returns for both 1931 and 1932, eight increased their surpluses, eight decreased their deficits, six decreased surpluses, three had increased deficits, and four turned surpluses into deficits.

The returns for 1933 show that in sixteen of the municipalities the tax rate for this year was decreased, in six no change was made, in two the rate for the current year has not yet been struck, while in only six were the rates increased. The decreases ranged from 5 mills to 8 mills, and the increases from 1 mill to 2.95 mills.

The tax levy for 1933 of twenty-nine of the thirty municipalities reporting (one not yet having been determined) is $69,557,560. In twenty-three centres the total decrease in the levy from 1932 is $3,866,093. In the remaining six centres, the levies were increased by $513,938. The net decrease in 1933 from 1932 was therefore $3,352,155 representing a considerable saving to the taxpayers of these municipalities. While the returns were somewhat inconclusive insofar as budgetting for 1933 is concerned, it is clear that the majority of municipalities have budgetted for balanced budgets this year. Several have budgetted for surpluses. It is also evident that substantial reductions have been made in current expenditures in conformity with the necessity of the times, and that a real effort is being made to live within current income.

The Ontario Committee on Economy in Public Finance fully anticipates that committees of Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce or general citizens' committees will shortly be operating in a larger number of Ontario municipalities to assist their municipal councils in effecting further economies.

GRAVE and GAY

AGE SHOWS THE PATTERNS

Age takes away such vivid things:
This sense of wonder and of wings,
This glad response to morn's gay call,
This poignant ache when shadows fall,
This stab of rapture or despair,
Age takes, and leaves its calmness there.

Such lessened life scarce seems to live;
But age has other boons to give:
The gift of quiet, where unrest
So long has ruled the troubled breast;
From many yearnings, a release,
And after care and conflict, peace.

Age shows men patterns which they made
In those young years when, unafraid
Of any challenge, any threat
They knew no menace, no regret.
Age points the meaning of the maze
They wandered through in" carefree days.

FROM THE OUTSIDE LOOKING IN

Belleville Fair, model 1933, really Bigger and Better Than Ever, the slogan of the Fair Association since the New Deal introduced by that genial, energetic, enthusiastic and forceful showman, the late Tom Power, Father of the new Belleville Fair, and his men whose inspiration and vision resulted in the splendid new Fair Grounds, the finest in Ontario, outside of Toronto C.N.E.

But here's what we started out to say—Visitors at Belleville Fair included Editor Dobbie, of the Stirling Argus, a live wire in the newspaper fraternity, and this is what he wrote about it—something to think home about and getting the sights and sounds and smells of a modern Fair purty out of his system:

"The editor of this paper might have known he couldn't take it. On Tuesday he went to Belleville Fair with Thos. Montgomery, Sr., and James Donnan, both old-timers, and long after the former gent (yclept, the editor) was all in and ready to call it a day, the latter, "young gaffers" were still rarin' to go. According to reports the latter two were quite "up" in the air "with the female aerial acrobats."

THE FREAKIEST SHOT

Dr. Frank J. Dawson, of New York, is probably the first golfer ever to execute a full brassie stroke and catch the ball in his hand without moving so much as one step.

When he performed this wholly unintended miracle, he was playing at the Ocean City Golf and Country Club in Ocean City, New Jersey, and feeling a bit "cold" for his first round of the season.

"There had been some good shots that produced a real kick," he writes in the American Golfer, "and some others that back-fired, but I was full of early-season hope and optimism. I would conquer the darned game yet."

In playing the fourteenth hole, Dr. Dawson had a second brassie shot to play. He wound up for a mighty heave, as golfers do when playing a second brassie shot, and swung with his one hundred and eighty pounds of heft and energy. With this result:

"To my amazement, I tapped the ball in such a manner that it actually popped straight up in the air, and to my further amazement, I found myself removing my right hand from the club, reaching out, and catching the ball in mid-air."

"GOD'S CHILDREN" IN INDIA

While Southern India carries on its perennial controversy over the "untouchables," Northern India goes its way unworried because, as the Calcutta Statesman points out, there are no "untouchables" in the north, at least in "the large Madrasi sense."

It is true, this journal concedes, that in the north the upper classes do not care to mingle with the gipsy or aboriginal tribes, but there is no question of the latter being forced off the road when one of high caste goes by. All classes travel together, and there is seldom any trouble over temple entry, since the lower classes have their own shrines.

In the south, The Statesman adds, the position of the Harijan (Untouchables, called "God's children" by Gandhi) is intolerable, particularly if they be men of education and self-respect.

GADGETS ALL AT SEA

The mechanization of sailing yachts, which began with Enterprise, is now making severe inroads in the Wee Scot class. Everett B. Morris tells us in the New York Herald Tribune of one Larchmont owner-skipper of a "floating pumpkin seed," who has a new suit of sails adorned with fancy numbers to match the hull, a hollow boom, and of all things, a winch for the main sheet and another for the jib sheet.

MERE SCRATCH MAY BE CAUSE BLOOD POISON

Entrance of Germans Into System To Origin of Poisoning

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Fellows Authority on Health and Psychology

Blood poisoning may and often does occur for the most trival of reasons. A hang-nail may cause it, or a blister on the foot or a superficial scratch.

For it is not really the nature of the wound or its location that produces the poisoning of the blood; it is the fact that even a slight abrasion of the skin surface allows for the entrance of germs into the system. The further reason why slight wounds so often lead to such serious consequences is simply that, because they are slight, most of us tend to disregard them.

Few persons, for instance, use an antiseptic solution for a hangnail, nor do they bandage a blister, even if they have started right by opening it first with a needle that has been sterilized by holding it in a flame. Yet—and particularly does this apply to the feet and covered areas of the body generally—stockings or other articles of clothing, which never can really be absolutely free from germs, actually rub the germs into the wound and, before one knows it, Cupid has entered the blood stream and have multiplied there.

Since the advent of Lister every operation was fraught with similar blood poisoning dangers, and to a greater extent. For up to that time antiseptic surgery, as such, was unknown.

In all cutting operations nowadays, no matter how simple they may seem, surgeons, no longer use carbolic acid, as did Lister, but they kill all the germs that may be present on their instruments and wash them before using them, or by subjecting them to high steam pressure for a specified length of time, the same procedure being followed for sponges, sheets, dressings, etc., employed. Furthermore the surgeon's own hands are protected by sterilized rubber gloves, while the skin area of the patient, where the cutting is to be done, is thoroughly cleansed with antiseptic soap and alcohol or with some other germ-killing solution.

If individuals in treating their own wounds would be as careful as the doctors are before they operate, blood poisoning would surely become a rarity. It is estimated that how many cases appear each year and how often they prove fatal.

In this connection, mention should be made of one cardinal principle in medical science, which states that, wherever pus exists, there dangerous streptococci and, in other words, all abscesses must be opened so that they may drain off their poisonous contents and that the tissue may heal, otherwise the tissue will be destroyed in the body and are likely to do damage, even in places remote from the seat of the original trouble.

Always, therefore, think of the possibilities of blood poisoning whenever the skin is broken in the part; keep it surgically clean; protect it with a sterilized bandage.

And should signs of increased inflammation appear, such as increased pain, swelling or tenderness in parts near the wound, lose no time but see your doctor forthwith.

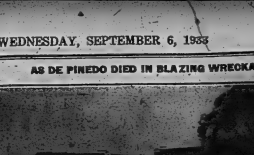
RUBY LOST FOR DAY AT FAIR RECOVERED



Toronto, Sept. 6—The age of miracles is not past, believes W. J. Spence of 158 Gilliard street, Toronto business man. Mr. Spence is shaking hands with himself today and this is the reason. On Monday night he visited the Exhibition and being a lover of good music sat near the bandstand to hear the Royal Scots Guards. Returning home some hours later, Mr. Spence found to his consternation that a valuable ruby, in a ring he was wearing was missing from its socket.

Mr. Spence went on the theory that it fell out while he was listening to the band concert. So next morning he visited the Exhibition and made a beeline to the place where he had been sitting the night before. And sure enough, almost in the exact spot where he had listened to the music, was the missing ruby, glistening in the morning sun.

Letters to the Editor

BAY OF QUINTE SHIPPING POSSIBILITIES

"There cannot be a finer basin in the world than the Bay of Quinte."

Belleville, Sept. 2, 1933.

The Editor,
"Ontario Intelligencer",
Dear Sir:

It is gratifying to know that the possibilities of the Bay of Quinte are being emphasized both for sport and also for business, and that Belleville as a port for ocean vessels is being urged for the purpose of trade with Great Britain.

In a report of a select committee of the House of Commons, of which the late J. L. Biggar, M. P. for Northumberland, was chairman, made the 26th of July, 1856, we find the following information:

"That on reference to the Journals of the Legislative Assembly of 1843 your Committee have deemed it expedient to quote fully from this report for the information of Your Honourable House.

The Committee examined a work, composed by Major General Sir James Carmichael-Smyth, Baronet, published in 1840 by Sir James Carmichael, Baronet, in 1862 which contains the following extract:

"There cannot be a finer basin in the world than the Bay of Quinte."

A report of the Board of Trade of the City of Montreal of 1855 contains the following:

From the above it will be seen that in the opinion of experts there is no finer basin in the world than the Bay of Quinte and it is free from the hazards and dangers of shipping incident to Lake Ontario.

On May 3, 1928, the steamship "Hiten" arrived from Glasgow, Scotland with a cargo of coal at the Belleville docks and has since taken loads of liquor from Belleville to the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon. There is therefore, no reason why fruit, cheese, meats and any commodities could not be shipped from Belleville to Great Britain and the ships bring back coal and other British goods.

The various dredges have been at work in the Bay lifting material from one part only to deposit it in another part of the Bay. A more reasonable and useful policy might well be adopted, e.g. a splendid beach and dock site might be made running east of the Government cement dock by the dredges from the Bay. The land thus formed would be useful for warehouses and industries and with the Bay dredged out for vessels of large tonnage shipping facilities thus formed would justify the statement of Major General Sir James Carmichael-Smyth, Baronet that "There cannot be a finer basin in the world than the Bay of Quinte."

Next year will complete the century of Belleville. Let us start a new policy for the development of trade with Europe. It is understood that Governments intend to spend money, and by way of debt for labour. Why not spend it on the Bay of Quinte? This matter might be taken up with the members of Parliament and members of Provincial Parliament for the City, District, meetings held and definite action obtained. Make a Bigger, Better Belleville.

Yours truly,
W. C. MIKEL.

Ma was getting ready to take me downtown this afternoon, and she started to put her hat on in front of the mirror, saying, What a site, I look a thousand years old.

Oh, ma, no you don't, you look grate, I said, and ma said, I look what?

I said, I look perfectly appawling, she said.

Oh, no, you look swell, I said, and ma said, I know how I look, I said I observed as that easily.

Well we started out and ma met some lady in the trolley car, saying, Why hello Bertha, I haven't seen you for ages and the lady saying, No, you're a site for sore eyes, I thought in a minute I wouldn't be because you're certeny not looking well, have you been ill?

Why no, a site cold but I didn't think it was bad enough as all that, my goodness, ma said, and the lady said, Yes indeed, I noticed immediately that you were, I said you have a very tired look, and I'm glad to of seen you, I'm getting off here, she said.

With she off being a thin lady with a pointy nose, and ma said, Well of all things the nerve of that woman, I had a good mind to slap her face, such malicious staggerers. I never heard in my life.

Well G, ma, what's a matter, you said the same thing about yourself only worse, and when I tried to tell you different you wouldn't beleve me, so how is she exaggerating? I said to ma said, and ask so many questions about things you dont understand.

Proving ladies are funny.

Tables, So Laden with Food at Reunion, Start to Give Way

Farmers' Wives See Results of Precious Labor Likely To Be Wasted But Men Rush To Rescue of Food.

On September 4th, about seventy-five descendants of the Miller-Herrington family met at an introductory reunion on the fine old Herrington homestead situated on the beautiful shore of Consecon Lake, which is now in the hands being in possession of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Millet. The reunion was initial in bringing about this happy gathering. A family tree which was traced by Mr. Milton Herrington, and a copy of Loyalists into Canada showed a lineage of 1000 persons.

The most pleasing feature of the dinner hour was the fact that the food was prepared principally by farmers' wives who, as all know, usually excel in the art of cooking. The most exciting feature was the fact that when all were seated these same wives beheld their labors and their dishes gently sliding earthward as the table supports gradually gave way. Only the quick action of the hungry crowd saved the situation.

The Rev. L. M. Sharpe, being the son of Mrs. Marcus Sharpe, whose maiden name was Verona A. Miller was eligible as chairman of the reunion committee. After a few lilting remarks were made by the chairman, the following officers were elected:

Hon. President, Mr. W. S. Herrington, barrister, Napanee; Vice-president, Mr. James Herrington, Brighton; Secretary Treasurer, Mr. Milton Miller, Consecon; Advisory Committee, Miss Lenora Herrington, Picton; Mr. W. H. Herrington, Picton; Mr. George Herrington, Georgetown; Rev. L. M. Sharpe, Belleville; Mrs. Ambrose Smith, Belleville; Rev. S. A. Kemp, Havelock; Miss Ella Herrington, Miss Belleville; Mr. W. C. Mikel, barrister, Belleville; Rev. Harry Herrington, Thomasburg; Mr. Nathaniel Herrington, Brighton.

An event not usually thought of on an occasion of this kind but requested by Mr. and Mrs. Clenoe Brickman was the christening of their younger children, by the Rev. Mr. Sharpe.

After deciding upon 12 o'Clock Point as the place and the third Wednesday in August, 1934, as the date for the next reunion a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Millet for the success of the affair. "God be With You" was sung and the families departed.

FIRE LOSS IN MANY AREAS

Dozen Ontario Communities Visited By Disastrous Blazes

Fires ran riot in a dozen Ontario districts on Wednesday and yesterday menacing several towns and village, consuming thousands of acres of farmland and causing property one death.

Billed last night the town of Haliburton was believed to be temporarily safe from the onrush of flames from surrounding woods, after a two-day fight by volunteers. A change in direction of the wind might mean destruction of the town however.

Sudbury went to sleep last night under a blanket of smoke from a 2,000 acre forest fire less than ten miles away.

At Clemsford a boy dropped dead from heart trouble brought on by the excitement of seeing a neighbor's house burning.

In Algoma, two bush fires are defying the efforts of 250 men and North Bay Village is in serious danger of being wiped out, as the flames are advancing steadily.

Hundreds are still homeless Ontario town to suffer loss, the damage in a business district fire being about $5,000.

DAIRY POOL FOR BRITISH

(By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 6 (C. P. Cable) — British farmers have voted overwhelmingly in favor of a national dairy pool, the result of the poll of producers' opinion taken recently was announced today and showed 90 per cent. in favor of the scheme and 2.50 per cent. opposed. A two-thirds majority was necessary for the adoption of the plan.

With its national and regional pools the scheme will be one of the most ambitious in the United Kingdom. Farmers will sell their milk through the pools. The board divided the profits among participants according to the amount of milk they delivered.

The National Board which will be in charge will be responsible not only for marketing and supply contracts but will also have the task of utilizing surplus milk for cheese making and the manufacture of dry milk on a large scale. The board assumes control October 1 for a trial period until the new year when the scheme itself becomes operative.

RESTRICTION MAY RE DUCE GREAT WHEAT SURPLUS

Restriction of wheat production by 25 countries as agreed at the London international wheat conference, is expected to bring about the disappearance of the huge Canadian and American surplus and has been called a real step toward world recovery. According to government figures and excluding the supplies of Russia and China the world had approximately one billion bushels of wheat in the bins on Aug. 1, of which the United States held 40 per cent. Map shows the general distribution of the world supply with (LEFT), Frederick E. Murphy, of Minneapolis, American delegate at the London conference. Only since 1929 have crop carry-overs entered the world wheat problems.

HALTED FLYER HIT BY TRAIN ON ERIE LINE

23 Persons Killed, Two Coaches Telescoped By Engine

AID IS RUSHED

City of Binghampton, N. Y., Shocked By Rail Tragedy

Binghamton, N.Y., Sept. 6.—(UP) —Twenty-three persons were reported killed and 40 injured when the crack passenger train No. 8 of the Erie Railroad was struck by a milk train on the eastern city limits of Binghamton, last night.

The passenger train, known as "The Pilot", stopped for a red signal light three miles out of the Binghamton station. The milk train, which was following the flier, smashed into it.

The crash occurred at about 8 p.m. and was followed by scenes of indescribable confusion.

Every available ambulance, physician and nurse in the city was called out. Soon after midnight the dead were taken to city hospital.

The passenger train was stopped on signal when a new was switching freight cars ahead. The flagman of the flyer hung a red signal light on the rear of his train and ran back along the tracks, setting torpedoes.

The next thing that was known was the crash, which telescoped two of the rear cars of the passenger train.

During the confusion thrown into confusion as word of the casualties spread. All members of the Binghamton police force who were off duty were called out, and state troopers in this area gathered at the scene.

LIBERALS IN CONFERENCE

Meeting Enlivened By Criticism of Speakers By Prof. Gregory

Port Hope, Sept. 6 (CP)—A Liberal summer conference, opened here yesterday by Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, M.P., leader of the House of Commons, and Hon. Vincent Massey, Dominion Liberal organizer, today proceeded with discussions on international economics, transportation, constitutional law and other problems.

The conference yesterday listened to an address on the United States National Recovery Act by W. A. Mairtman, Chairman of the Steel Committee and provoked a heated rejoiner from Professor T. E. Gregory. Sir H. S. Johnson, head of the N.R.A. had used "army language" in dealing with some of the committees that called on him.

Professor T. E. Gregory of McGill University, Montreal, delivered a forthright criticism of Canada's representatives to the League of Nations, some of whom, he said, had left a "trail of the impress of ignorance and stupidity."

Father Kills Dog Which Bites Bride-Elect

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 6 —Miss Bessie Scott, 20, who was to have been married Saturday night, was severely bitten by a police dog yesterday afternoon and is at her home. Shortly after the dog attacked Miss Third Avenue when a dog owned by James Hait broke loose and attacked her. She was bitten on legs, back and hands, and her clothing was torn. The fact that she was wearing a heavy flannel skirt protected her from more serious injury. The dog was beaten off by neighbors with clubs, and the father of the victim killed the animal with a shotgun. She is suffering consid-

IN SZECHWAN

100 Persons Said To Be Killed In Worst Quake In Century

Shanghai, Sept. 6—Chinese despatches belatedly describe the caving in of an area of 170 square miles in an earthquake in Szechwan Province, Western China.

The shock was reported strongest in the Min River area in Northwest Szechwan, where five entire districts are reported laid waste, with enormous loss or life and property.

Reports said part of the mountains along the river crumbled and slid into the stream, changing its course and isolating the area.

Earlier despatches from Chengtu, capital of the province, said 100 persons were killed. Later information said the quake was the worst suffered in 100 years although the stricken area is mountainous and subject to severe quakes at frequent intervals.

STINK BOMBS HALT MEETING

Jewish Session At Geneva Gives Way Before Missiles

Geneva, Sept. 6.—The session of the Jewish Anti-Nazi conference was interrupted last night when someone loosed a stink-bomb through a window. The delegates assembling for the evening session hastily left the hall until the police had time to air the building.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, at the afternoon session, issued a stirring appeal to the Jews of the world to end their internal quarreling and unite.

"There is no unity, coherence of common action," Dr. Wise complained bitterly.

He urged the formation of a world Jewish parliament where all Jewish problems could be presented for the world's consideration.

"Hitler is appallingly powerful," Dr. Wise said. "We face the most monstrous force which Jewry has ever had to face, and Jewry is not united. We cannot even unite to form relief service, but we do not consider it hopeless to try to unite the Jews through the means of a world parliament."

TURKEYS STOLEN AND RETURNED

Peterboro, Sept. 6—A number of poultry thefts have been reported in this county recently, but the strangest one occurred, according to Provincial Police. Nineteen young turkeys were taken from a flock belonging to Joseph O'Connor, Douro Township, Monday night. The next night, under cover of darkness, the thieves replaced the birds on the same roost from which they had been taken. It is thought that the search by Provincial Police and farmers over Sunday frightened the thieves into returning their loot.

DAIRY RECEIPTS ARE LAGGING IN REAR

Montreal, Sept. 5—Dairy receipts at Montreal are lagging behind the same period last year. From May 1 to date arrivals of eggs, butter and cheese are below totals for the corresponding period a year ago, it was shown in figures posted at the Board of Trade at the week-end. The receipts, with comparisons follow:

	Eggs Cases	Butter Boxes	Cheese Boxes
1933 . . .	214,184	1,160	489,090
1932 . . .	232,616	348,536	424,907

Receipts last week, with comparisons, were announced as follows:

	Eggs	Butter	Cheese
Last week	7,161	14,149	31,425
Week ago	8,238	16,048	22,096

Exports of cheese last week from Montreal totalling 26,095 boxes, compared with 14,452 boxes in the corresponding week last year. Exports for the season up to August 26, 1933, totalled 254,818 boxes, compared with 338,509 boxes a year ago on the same date.

Exports of butter last week totalled 1,907 boxes, while they were all a year ago. Up to August 26 this year butter exports totalled 4,125 boxes, against 333,811 boxes on the same date last year. A total of 1,800 boxes went to the United Kingdom of last week's shipments, this being the second lot of butter to go overseas this year.

Exports of eggs also resumed last week, 1,350 cases going overseas. Some good fall shipments are expected.

Market Rally Seen In Last Hour At Toronto And New York—Volume Improves In Last Hour of Trading, Nickel And Wet Stocks Advancing Quite Sharply—Cros s Currents \At New York, But Golds Firm Up

TORONTO BOARD

Toronto, Sept. 6 (CP)—The doubling Thomases dominated the trade story' some of the last in the Toronto Stock Exchange but were pushed aside in the last hour as prices rallied sharply with a New York upturn. Distillery, oil and metal shares as well as Bank of Canada recovered early losses and in many cases, added good gains. Volume also showed improvement in the last hour.

In the interlisted group, Nickel recovered from $20.90 to close at $21.35 for a net gain of 35 cents; Hollinger, 71, C.P.R. closed at 17¼, Ford 'of Canada got back a half point and Brazilian closed unchanged.

Walker's consumer closed at 46½ up ¾, Distillers Seagram up ¼ at 27¼ and Industrial Alcohol gained a fraction to 17¾.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 6 (CP)—Scarlet influences were routed in the last hour of the Standard Exchange session and the market picked up speed to close with gains in a big majority. Senior gold shares were firm to strong all day, led by Macfayden, but the general tone was moderately weak until New York overcame a dismal opening and advanced shortly before the close.

McIntyre was outstanding with an advance of $2.50 to $38. Dome gained 50 to $35.50, and gains of 25 to 35 cents were made in Wasp, Hughes and Wright Hargreaves.

Noranda and International Nickel recovered all early weakness and closed 25 to 50 cents higher.

GRAIN MARKET

Winnipeg, Sept. 6.—(CP)—Hedging pressure was fairly liberal at the opening of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today and although support was fair at times it was insufficient to take care of offerings and prices at mid-session reached levels 1½ cents to 2 cents the previous close.

Opening prices at 70 1-4 and December at 72, were unchanged while May delivery at 74 1-4 was 1-8 lower. Soon after a little flurry in the first few minutes, trading was quiet and a steady one-cent quite small.

Some export business was reported but by mid-session no figure had been placed on overnight or afternoon sales. Cash wheat was unchanged while premiums on the class of the English market losses of 3-4d to 7-8d.

EXCHANGE RATES

Exchange rates at 3 p.m. E.D.T. today were: Pound sterling (in Montreal) 4.79; U. S. dollar in Montreal 1.04 15-16; Pound sterling in New York 4.55; Canadian dollar in New York 93 5-16.

BAR SILVER

New York, Sept. 6.—(AP)—Bar silver easier, 1-4 lower at 36 3-4.

TRIANGULAR TUSSLE SEEN IN PLAY-OFF

Johnny Wilson Gives Iron-Man Pitching Exhibition

BISONS TAKE TWO

Montreal Leafs Split With Rochester In Double-header

(By Herbert Barker Associated Press Sports Writer)

An iron man pitching performance by Johnny Wilson, Buffalo right hander, had made the International League play-off position tighter than ever today.

Wilson pitched the Bisons to a pair of victories over Toronto Maple Leafs yesterday while Montreal Royals were splitting a double header with Rochester, the net result being to leave Toronto only a game and a half ahead of Montreal in the race for the second northern qualifying post and Buffalo only a half game more behind.

The standing of the three rivals today were:

Club	Won	Lost
Toronto	80	51
Montreal	77	54
Buffalo	79	54

Wilson allowed Toronto 11 hits in the first game but he was extremely effective in the pinches after the Leafs had solved him for a pair of runs in the first inning and Buffalo earned an easy 7-3 decision. Willis Wilson on the second again for the second game, the Leafs scored two runs in the opening frame on a hit and an error to gain a 2-1 lead, Johnny then veiled the Leaf batsmen through the next five innings and Buffalo won the game in the 7th and last stanza when a double by Buck Crouse started a 3-run rally and Cadillac Williams pitched the last inning.

Bill Dietrich's six-hit pitching enabled Montreal to whip Rochester 5-2 in the first game, a 7th twilight night bill, but Mike and Selkirk contributed a pair of home runs apiece to give the Red Wings the night duel 7-3.

The champion Newark Bears still two games with Jersey City, winning the first 8-4 with a 16-hit attack; but dropping the second 3-1 as Joe Cascarella outpitched Johnny Rosar.

Albany got good pitching from Fred Fussell and Whyttie Campbell and twice whipped Baltimore, 2-1 and 7-5. Fussell collected nine Oriole hits in the opener and Campbell granted nine in the nightcap, Phelps, Albany catcher, clouted a home run clearing the right centrefield wall.

Spying on Sports

BY William Ritt
Central Press Canadian

IT'S A PICTURE that probably has been seen by more people than any other. It is no dead thing built of canvas and oil and one man's imagination, this picture of which we speak—this picture which soon none shall ever see again.

The scene is a ball park with sloping rings of human beings girdling a sun-drenched green field. During the play the field was small patches of white and gray and blue—the team in the field, the base runners and the umpires.

A hundred thousand eyes are held by one of those patches of color, a tiny figure viewed from the immensity of the stands, a tiny figure waving a yellow wooden needle.

When figure spins, there is a faint hollow click and a speck of white rises against the bleachers, becomes a black dot against the glaring blue sky and vanishes.

A roar engulfs the world, a chaos of sound shakes the air as the massed thousands pay tribute to the King—for Babe Ruth has hit another home run.

x x x

HOWEVER, soon Ruth won't hit any more home runs. Soon the thrilling picture, baseball's greatest drama, will be but a memory, living only in the recollection of aging men and women who saw it.

Everyone has known from the beginning that this moment must come some time come. But, nevertheless, now that it is here, now that from Babe Ruth's own lips comes the word that he is through—it is a shock.

Somehow we can each Ruthian homer will be a tragic and not a thrilling thing. For in a few days now every spectator and in the heart of Ruth, himself, will be the question: Is this the last one? Is this the final, mighty clout in the long succession of Ruthian homers which number nearly 700, the first of which dates back to nearly 20 years ago?

x x x

AS THE BASEBALL story of Babe Ruth approaches the last chapter, it is well to recall the early passing of the Bambino with mixed feelings.

No one can honestly feel sorry for Babe as a man. By current standards he is a rich man, though comparatively young. He is in excellent health and, unless reports be so dednree, give up baseball. Opportunities to remain connected with the only game he knows are many.

It is the passing into a legend of a human symbol of heroic effort, the Babe Ruth of Swatsonville, Georgia Herman Ruth—that brings whatever sorrow we may have in discovering that the Babe is through.

That is—we are really being sorry for ourselves. The passing of Ruth we lose a thrill that just, somehow, cannot be replaced.

But the western is becoming his own private affair, right in his alley, so to speak.

Mac Smith has competed in the western four times and has won his third victory. Back in 1912 "Mac" won the western title with a 298 total over the Idlewild course, Chicago. Thirteen years later he triumphed at Youngstown with 281. The next year he went to Indianapolis to defend his title but withdrew before the tourney was over because the field was so large.

Mac Smith Makes Western Open Own Private Affair

BY HAROLD K. GEORGE
Central Press Sports Writer

Chicago, Sept. 6.—There are a number of approved methods of winning golf tournaments. One is to stay on the fairways. Another is to play out of traps. Still another is to "beat 4s". The simplest, of course, is to undercore the other fellow.

Well the western open was a thoroughly won tournament when McDonald Smith, the 43-year-old Nashville professional, finished the 72-hole play at Olympia Fields near Chicago. Smith completed not any one of the approved methods, but all of them!

During the four rounds Smith scored 283 to beat 4s by six strokes. Of those 283 shots, only two went off the fairway and only two others fell into traps. And as to undershooting everything the other fellows managed to bang up, the old boy from Carnoustie, Scotland, did just that in every round.

SMITH'S opening round was 68, giving him a one-stroke lead. A 71 put him two shots ahead of the field in the second round. Another 71 in the third round stretched it to four strokes. And a clinching 72 in the fourth and last chapter made his final margin six strokes.

In addition to a $500 cash prize, Smith won a world of satisfaction in his western. As steady a golfer as he is and often as brilliant, "Mac" doesn't win major tournaments. But the western is becoming his own private affair, right in his alley, so to speak.

GOLF FACTS

NOT THEORIES

By ALEX. J. MORRISON

Injuries far more serious than one might imagine can result from being hit with a golf ball.

Yet many players endanger themselves and those around them by standing ahead of the ball as it is being hit.

Recently, I was standing only a few inches ahead of the ball when my partner was playing and instead of traveling straight ahead the ball being struck off the toe of the club, went away at a right angle to that it struck me in the leg.

My leg still bears the scar.

Always stand well behind anyone playing a shot, and be sure to it that your caddy does likewise.

At least make sure that he is safely to one side.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6 — (CP) — Eight years in a hospital for incurable Diseases was too much for Mary Callandria, 18. She escaped from the hospital on Randall's Island yesterday and tried to swim to the Bronx shore against a strong tide.

When a police launch approached her, she called:

"Don't come any nearer or I'll let myself sink."

Two policemen jumped in, overcame her after a struggle and pulled her out.

WESTERN TOUR OPENS, BUCS WIN BY 6 TO 1

Hubbell Yields Five Hits And Peel Tosses Costly Error

PIRATES' TENTH

Pair of Doubleheaders Limit Play In American League

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr. Associated Sports Writer)

In 1921 the Pirates came marching into the Polo Grounds late in August with a 7 1-2 game lead over the Giants. They dragged out a few days later after five straight defeats and the Giants went on to win the pennant and beat the Yankees in the world series. The situation was just the same, with a reverse twist, yesterday when the Giants opened their final western tour at Forbes Field with a margin of 7 1-2 games over the Pittsburgh club. The Bucks continued the parallel by shellacking Carl Hubbell, the Giants' great southpaw, and winning the first of their five games 6-1. Southpaw Larry French was invincible in the pinches and the Buccos gave him an adequate working margin by scoring three runs in the third inning.

In that one frame Hubbell yielded five hits and Homer Peel tossed in a costly error for good measure. From then on all French had to do was hang on. He gave up an unearned run in the sixth and bore down hard enough to keep out of serious trouble the rest of the way.

The Pirates victory, their 10th in the last 11 starts, gave them another half game margin over the third place Chicago Cubs, but all the other first division clubs had open spots in the schedule.

The American League program was limited for similar reasons to a pair of doubleheaders with the Washington Senators further increasing their lead over the second place New York Yankees, making it 9 1-2 games.

Washington took two games from Boston Red Sox, winning the opener 5-3 in 10 innings and Lefty Werber's fumble gave them the winning run and the second 5-4 by bunching their hits in the late innings to better Boston's 18-hit attack.

The Yanks split a pair with Philadelphia Athletics as home runs figured prominently. Jimmie Foxx walloped his 40th homer in the first game and Roy Mahaffey allowed three-hit ball to give the A's a 6-3 triumph. Lou Gehrig's 23rd boundary belt started the Yanks on the way in the game and they battered out a 9-6 triumph as Charlie Berry and Crowder relief Roger Cramer also hit for the circuit.

FAIL TO HIT LEGION LOSE

Deseronto Advised To Default Game To Firemen

Trenton, Sept. 6 (Special) — Their inability to hit in the pinches cost the Foreign Legion softballers the league title with the College Hill Cubs at Coleman Plats last night. Final score: Firemen 5, Legion 3.

"Curly" Hurley twirled for the Cubs—striking out six Legion batmen but his wildness gave seven free passes in the first six.

Gray, Cub right fielder collected a single and a double to lead his team mates with two safe singles and Johnson's triple were best for the Legion.

It was decided to advise the Deseronto Legion by default their remaining game to the Firemen as the score can never be called in regular fashion. A win in four starts and have showed up late usually with a representative Monday against the LaBrash Imperials.

Tonight the Legion meet Crilis A.C. and a loss for the garagemen will put them out of the running.

Knocks and Boosts

In a recent issue of the King-ston Whig the sports scribe on that publication came forcibly to the point regarding certain suggestions of Kingston not being allowed to participate in the O.R.F.U. next season. He soundly flailed the executive of both the Peterboro and Belleville clubs for what they claimed that they are apparently scheming to get the O.R.F.U. of the Pewies in 1934.

To substantiate his statements he referred to certain articles relating to the subject taken from the Peterboro press. What we just can't understand is why he included the executive of the Nationals in the picture. We personally know that the local senior executive have fought tooth and nail for the Pewies' cause at many league meeting in the past, and it was only through their untiring efforts that Kingston still enjoys a C.O.R.U. berth. In other words That's gratitude for you.

Just while we are passing we'd like to remind our Kingston contemporary that it is no secret in this neck o' the woods that Belleville regarding the Pewies' executive being present at a pre-season meeting of the St. Lawrence League last spring. We have never made mention of this fact before as it was practically none of our business but when the Kingston sports scribe accuses the local senior executive of trying to give them the well-known run-around, well, we know differently.

As for the Nationals not being able "to take it", as was intimated by the Kingston scribe, we merely refer him to the unbeaten record established by the Belleville club in years past. There is one condition, however, that the National's executives are going to demand from the Pewies next season and that is a different staff of umpires will have to be appointed. Jack Linscombe City Ump was presented the past season. The fouls are not speaking over spilled milk but "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." "Once bitten, twice shy," they say. We are not taking a one-sided stand in this umpire question as we have been told the identical same story by ex-members of the Kingston club. It is not a case of "Belleville can't take it" but rather they merely desire a square deal on the field, something they did not receive during the past season when the Nationals were just going through a period of reconstruction.

We can think of no reason why the Kingston sports scribe should place the blame for the bad graces of the Kingston public between there happened to be a slight difference of opinion between Peterboro and Kingston over a few dollars in which the local club did not enter. As a matter of fact had it not been for the coolness of the local delegates at the recent meeting of the C.O.R.L. things might have been out of town Belleville clubs.

Just why the Belleville club was taken to task in far above the conception of its present executive who labored long and effective for the Kingston cause at Oshawa not so many weeks ago. "The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

Grant Ashley's Delaney Bearcats are scheduled to play at the Trenton Riverside Dairy team in the third and deciding game of the series at Trenton this evening. The Bearcats will have to play a most heady game when they did last week if they expect to continue in the running for O.A.S.A. honors. In order to terminate the schedule in the Central Park this week, over on Coleman Flats, a game will be played every evening this week and to finish the season as soon as possible. Then across to the Vic for Victoria A.C. of Mountain View are scheduled to start operations kicking with Redneerville in the first final play-off game. In the Trenton Industrial League, in this loop they have adopted the new code of softball rules with a fast base times and longer pitching box. The ball is also livelier.

After heavily fighting a mysterious malady Miss Jean Wilson one of Toronto's prominent skaters has returned ewan in the Queen City. Miss Wilson was one of the favorites at all the meets and her passing was most regretable.

Unless Daniel Howley's Maple Leafs get a hustle on they're going to find themselves out in the cold when the play-offs roll around. Both the Montreal Royals and the Buffalo Bisons are leading Leafs a little too decisively for all concerned up around the Maple Leaf Stadium.

Today's question—Batted ball hits pitcher on side of arm. It glances off and shortstop makes play. Batter claims that pitcher should be given an assist and the official scorer is asked to change play. It claims the shortstop would have to throw the batter out at first to complete the putout. Which is correct? "A" is correct. 9.

INJURED BY EXPLOSION

Montreal, Sept. 6.—(CP)—Three men were seriously injured in an explosion which wrecked most of the building occupied by the Loyal Oil and Gas Company. Cause of the explosion was not determined, but a preliminary investigation suggested an electric spark had touched off gasoline fumes.

He rose. "You're going to think it over," he urged, "and the need of your boys."

Bessie rose too, a little stiffly. It always "riled" it out of her knees to clean the refrigerator, a house-hold goal, before which she now kneeled.

"I never forgot the needs of my boys," she regretted. "But you see, Mr. Colvin—It's difficult to explain —it's this way. I feel that the boys biggest need will be answered by their knowing that we made our own way in the world, that even if we failed we didn't. I've seen too much of what taking can do to people—and it isn't a pretty thing to see. It makes lying and cheating and all the things that are so much worse than not having things. She was thinking of Lida Stafford, Barrett, looking on her, fascinated.

"You're a fine mother," he said. She brushed the tribute aside with an embarrassed, "Oh, no!" Because he saw that she had been deeply touched by his words as well as embarrassed by them he added quickly if there was any news about Benwell Stafford. How had he passed the night?

The night had been a bad one, Bessie told him. There could be no encouragement for a few days, if, indeed there could be then.

"If he goes," she ended, "we're going to ask Elinor to live with us."

Again he saw and felt, the room. Again his heart chilled. He could not imagine Elinor Stafford in this house, so shabbily, dark and depressing!

The poor child isn't fitting to do a thing except lunch music," Bessie went on. He hadn't known Elinor played. "She tries," he heard Bessie say, "so hard to be useful and the results are pathetic. She rubs and wipes my dishes and they weep on the shelves when she's done with them. Here here!"

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Elinor had a strong ally, he realized. She thought, "If you weren't so good yourself you'd know her better."

"Well," he said wearily, "I'll be on my way." The trip had been useless. "If there's anything I can do you'll let me know?"

"Oh, yes, Mr. Colvin. If there's a think we can ask of you I promise I'll let you know."

"I'd appreciate it, Mrs. Thrope. Sometimes you people never don't know how much you hold from others with your pride!"

"I know, Mr. Colvin," she admitted, "but the one thing the poor can cling to is self-respect. If that should go we'd have —nothing."

He went down the cement path covered for the winter with slats of wood. Bessie stood watching the door until Hutton had closed the motor door after Barrett. Barrett waved at her. "God bless!" he reflected. "You're right, but it makes things worse for them."

Hutton chose the bridge over which Barrett had once ridden with Elinor. Riding across its span again Barrett thought bitterly of his happiness that day.

The look of Bessie's parlor haunted him as he looked dismally on the gray stretch of water chilled by flocking patches of ice floes. The look of that room had told Barrett its need of Bessie Thrope's needs, her husband's needs, the boy's needs. It was a clear and depressing chart.

Suddenly as they reached the other side of the bridge, his eyes became alive. All the gray left them. The one way out! He had been leaning back in the seat. Now he was suddenly erect and tense. He lighted a cigaret with nervous fingers standing away from the window to gaze that took in nothing before him.

The thing had to be planned. He must think it through carefully, then go after it. There was only one way out!

Bessie Thrope evidently cared deeply for her niece. She was not the sort of woman who would climb to decorate herself by parading a family affection. She was right. And with enough loving, taking was possible. Pride could be surmounted.

He could reach them all through Elinor. He had her father's debt as an old lady's caprice and his uncle's desire for his Section's affectionate memory.

The car had halted before his door. Hutton turned in startled.

"Wait," he instructed the chauffeur. He went through the hall into the house, picked up the library telephone without removing his heavy coat.

He gave a number and heard the answering voice. He said, "This is Barrett Colvin speaking. I wish to talk to Miss Elinor Stafford. Please ask her to speak with me. Tell her that the matter is extremely urgent."

There was a pause that seemed years. Barrett smiled resolutely. Then Elinor's voice, a little unsteady, came over the wire.

CHAPTER 21

The last thing Elinor wished that morning was another strain of seeing Barrett Colvin. He had with a blind unreasonable strength she had not dreamed he possessed, overridden her every objection. She should wait for the interview until her father was better. As she said those last words her voice quailed.

"I must see you," Barrett repeated. "It is important for both of us."

"I don't see how it could be, Mr. Colvin."

"I'll explain that. I wouldn't bother you unless it was really necessary." He had not meant to let bitterness creep into that last sentence but it had, in spite of the diffidence of will that he had erected against it. Well, since she enjoyed paying with humiliation she might amuse her to laugh at their stiffened dreadings.

There was a silence. He broke slowly.

"Now are things at the office, Mr. Gerould?" she had asked. "Bad," he told her bluntly, though his eyes were spreadsheets. "You see," he stammered, "so many people were waiting with the expectation that Mr. Stafford would be remembered valiant generously in his salary. He had two little girls and a wife who was not well. He had big own bills. Elinor had dropped to a chair rather too suddenly, talking with him.

FORD EARNERS WAGE RAISED

Manufacturer Takes His Own Way To Better N. R. A.

Detroit, Sept. 6—An upward revision in wages in the plants of the Ford Motor Company, bringing the daily net pay scale of the lowest employee to $6.80 as against a previous $4 minimum became known, apparently Henry Ford's own move in "going one better" than the N. R. A., automobile code from which he is a seceder.

Rumors of the upward revision were confirmed at the Ford offices today, although officials said they were not ready to make an announcement pending the completion of the wage adjustment, which has been under way for several weeks.

It was indicated, however, that already approximately 10,000 of the 40,000 Ford employees have benefited by the increase in basic pay rates. While it was stated that the basic minimum still is $4 a day the increase for certain types of skilled labor, including workers on the assembly lines, to $6.80 and more, being the chief wage concern more within striking distance of the famous $7 minimum wage with which Ford started the industrial world years ago.

Some skilled workers at present are receiving as high as $10 a day.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—The United States government will take no action to bring Henry Ford into the fold of the N.R.A. unless he violates the rules of the Automobile Manufacturers' code, Gen. Hugh Johnson asserted today.

He put the Ford situation into three words:

"It's Ford's move."

As to the probability of the Detroit automobile manufacturer's violating the auto code, "I don't think he will," Johnson said.

Ford's minimum pay is high enough to top the minimum set by the general code, and the N.R.A. director indicated the only avenue which Ford might come into conflict with the recovery program would be his dealings with employees.

"If Ford employees should organize and send representatives to negotiate with him," Gen. Johnson stated, "and Ford refused to meet them, he would, of course, be violating the auto code."

"Probably he won't violate the auto code," he said. "If he does, I'll have to do something."

Burglars Overpower Sandwich Farmer

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 6—Provincial Police are searching for a burglar who entered the home of Warren Heikle, Sandwich South township, and stole a small amount of money. Heikle was overpowered when he attempted to prevent the intruders escaping, but he was not seriously hurt.

BALLOON PASSES OVER MANITOULIN

Gore Bay, Ont., Sept. 6.—(CP)—Reports reaching here from the south shore of Manitoulin Island today that a balloon, believed to be one of the two missing entries in the Gordon Bennett race, was sighted last night soaring over Upper Lake Huron. It was believed to be that of Ward T. Van Orman, United States Blackhawk, of Francisco Hynek and Lieut. Burgoyne, Britain.

As Manitoulin Island is only about 300 miles from Chicago, where the race started, the fact sighted in this area is considered to have little chance of winning the event.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE REGENT

"Those who would like about 15 minutes of good twinkish, speed, will find their wish more than gratified at the Bella Theatre, where the Paramount pictures, "Big Executive," begins its local engagement (tomorrow Thursday).

The film is fast throughout with a rapidly-paced development of character and plot.

The characterization of Ricardo Cortez in the role of the high tension, modern big executive, shows him to advantage in a part that differs radically from previous appearances.

A potential star is recognized in Elizabeth oung, a newcomer to the screen, who enacts the leading feminine role. She is not only a new type, but gives a splendid, refreshing performance placed for her in a class by herself.

As a 23 year old fogey, who is in the habit of ruling Wall Street with a mighty hand, Richard Bennett stretches head and shoulders above his past achievements.

The story, adapted to the screen by Lawrence Stallings from Alfred Duer Miller's popular novel, starts out in the executive offices of that great money lane, Wall Street. The action begins immediately, when a lot of worthless stock certificates become uttering around the bewildered heads of several hundred disgruntled financial barons, causing them to cancel their seats for the opera and dash to the nearest hamburger stand for a last supper.

Cortez and Bennett stand up when the others lie down, fighting it out for supremacy in the street, with the younger man having the edge.

Oddly, Cortez, the boy wizard of Wall Street, is helping when love enters his life through the potent persuasion of Miss Young, the great-granddaughter of Bennett.

It is one grand breath-taking race from start to finish with Eric Kenton, the director retaining every fragment of spice and vigor contained in the popular story. As a love-starved, attractive secretary, Sharon Lynne comes through with one of the finest performances of her career. Dorothy Peterson, as the sun-dialed wife, and Hardie Albright Lane, in the important role of the guide, portrays their roles in a manner worthy of merit.

Silver Treasure Gifts

By popular request the management of the Bella are presenting another Silver Treasure Night, Thursday at 9 p.m. The special prize for this week is a beautiful 26 piece Roger's Tea Service. Nine other exceptional silver gifts will also be presented free to patrons.

Excellent Shorts

Harry Langdon in a very funny comedy, "Marriage Humor," the popular Bella Cinema News, and Hollywood on Parade introducing movie snapshots of favorite screen stars precede the exhibition of the feature attraction.

Two Features Tonight

Edmund Lowe and Wynne Gibson are co-starring in "Her Bodyguard" a clever comedy romance at the Bella tonight for the last time, along with "Don't Bet on Love," a fast moving race track romance co-starring Lew Ayres and Ginger Rogers. They are worth seeing.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Barbarian," a romantic comedy concerned with the adventures of a philandering Arab who falls in love with an English woman, brings Ramon Novarro to the Capitol screen today in what is reported to be a role totally different from any the popular Latin star has yet portrayed in the talkies.

Myrna Loy is Novarro's leading woman, coming to this picture fresh from her personal triumphs in "The Animal Kingdom" and "Topaze." Reginald Denny, as her dull English fiance, is said to have a role even more amusing than that he played in "Private Lives" and added laughs are insured by the presence in the cast of Louise Closser Hale in another of her typical maid roles.

Based on Selwyn Play

The picture is based on a play by Edgar Selwyn, adapted to the screen by Anita Loos and Elmer Harris, and directed by Sam Wood. In it Novarro enacts the Arab suitor who plays up to the susceptibilities of elderly women starved for romance and pockets a pretty profit for his pains. When he falls in love with the alluring Miss Loy, he finds himself running into a more difficult proposition, and is called upon to use all his resources as a rogue and oriental schemer in order to consummate his desires.

The author has permeated his story with no end of adventurous incidents with the heroine narrowly escaping a forced native marriage and being involved in a romantic escape across the desert sands. Scenes of the Nile country with its celebrated pyramids give the tale a picturesque background in keeping with its colorful and adventurous plot.

"The Barbarian" affords Novarro an opportunity to sing a number of Arabian love songs, a special musical score having been arranged by Herbert Stothart. C. Aubrey Smith, Edward Arnold, Reginald Sheffield, Marcella Daly, Hedda Hopper and Ethel Sienda are seen in supporting roles.

The program today (Wednesday) and Thursday includes Comedy and Canadian Sound News at all performances.

CONSERVATIVE SCHOOL OPENS

Public Ownership And Unemployment Discussed By Henry

Newmarket, Ont., Sept. 6 (CP)—Discussion of public ownership will occupy today's session of the Liberal-Conservative summer school, with an Ontario Government Minister, a university professor and a municipal official leading the debate.

Among those who will speak today are Hon. J. D. Monteith, Ontario Minister of Public Works and Labour, Professor W. Jackman of Toronto University and Controller James Simpson of Toronto.

Yesterday the school head discussions of unemployment and politics as a career following opening ceremonies in which Premier George Henry of Ontario and Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Agriculture took part.

Professors Alexander Brady and H. M. Cassidy of the University of Toronto presented before the meeting a plan through which they believed it would be possible to deal effectively with major problems such as unemployment by federal action through amendments of the British North America Act, an Act which they said had become obsolete in some respects.

CITIES LIE UNDER RUINS

Texas Havoc From Hurricane Beyond Description

Edinburg, Texas, Sept. 6.—Laid waste by a terrific hurricane, the Rio Grande Valley cities of Brownsville and Harlingen lie prostrate with buildings blasted to the ground, streets under water and all communication in confusion in need of assistance.

The casualties could not be reckoned but it was considered improbable that the violent disturbance could have passed through those communities without taking heavy toll.

Indefinite and meager reports from town on the edge of the devastated area told, however, of bodies lying on the streets, buildings in ruins with buildings blasted to the ground, streets under water and all communication in confusion in need of assistance.

The casualties could not be reckoned but it was considered improbable that the violent disturbance could have passed through those communities without taking heavy toll.

The dead is almost impossible of description," he said. "Small houses have been smashed to kindling and in the three cities which apparently bore the brunt of the storm, Brownsville, Harlingen and San Benito, fronts of brick buildings have been battered to pieces. Debris is everywhere."

The estimate of injured was only tentative, he said, since crippled communications and the littered streets made its accurate check immediately impossible.

PROJECT WILL PAY IN YEAR

Hon. R. Cooke Prophesies At Conservative School

Newmarket, Sept. 6.—Addressing the Conservative School here on Tuesday the Hon. R. Cooke, chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission, outlined the Ontario Hydro's position on costs, stating that of the total, 70 per cent. went towards the cost of capital and the remainder for maintenance and all salaries. When the capital was paid off in 40 years, the cost of power would be cut by 70 per cent., to Ontario's lack of coal would never be felt.

Comparing rates, he said the average rate for domestic power in the United States was 5 1-2 cents a kilowatt hour, against 1.7 cents in Ontario. If the United States average prevailed here it would mean an annual addition of $29,000,000 in expense to the public, he maintained.

During question time, one young man asked for an explanation of the Ahuthi purchase. Mr. Cooke replied: "That purchase is on an entirely different basis, the province will own the property. It's the greatest advancement in New Ontario since Confederation.

"We paid 90 per cent. for their bonds. That is what you are being told, but it's only a half truth. The Provincial Commission exchanged $40,000,000 in bonds, bearing 5 1-2 per cent, payable in New York funds. The Hydro Commission bonds are payable in Canada, and bear 3 1-2 per cent. for five years, four per cent. for the next five years and five per cent. after that with an option clause running full time.

"In 20 years the bondholders will receive $2,000,000 less capital and $7,000,000 less in interest, and interest is as big a factor in our way of thinking as the price. Another point at the time of the deal, exchange was 14 per cent. so we gave $90 for $116. For a $100 bond it was not quite 57%. So we saved $16.

Another student rose. "Didn't those bonds sell for $21 on the market at about that time," he asked.

"They sold at one time for that, but I don't imagine many. Probably it was some fellow who had to take what he could get," Mr. Cooke replied.

"I don't think insurance and trust companies would let it go at that price, when it only needed $500,000 to put it into operation."

Mr. Cooke said he was confident the project would pay its own cost within a year.

ELECTRICITY TO FEED FISH

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 6.—Illinois is using electricity to feed its fish.

Here's how: High-voltage lamps over the feedings and breeding ponds at Manchon, Mercer county, which are killed by the heat. When they fall into the water the fish gobble them down.

It's cheaper than buying fish food.

MISSING BOAT IS DISABLED

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Sept. 6.—(CP)—Sought for since early Tuesday morning, the fishing tug Molly B., with her crew of five was found today disabled by a broken line shaft. Captain Wallace B. J. Menary reported the crew was safe and well.

The 73-foot vessel was the object of an all-day search yesterday after being unsighted since she left Cape Rich on the north east peak of Bruce Peninsula on Monday to fish 25 miles off shore in Georgian Bay. Government aeroplanes were requested when a fleet of tugs failed to locate the Molly B.

The crew carried only enough food for one meal when she left port and the five were hungry when the disabled tug was located today.

CHEESE MARKET

Cheese, which slipped under ten cents per pound at Montreal a few weeks ago, yesterday regained that level when prices were advanced 1-4 cents to 1-2 cents per lb. Ontario white cheese became 10c to 10 1-4c while Ontario colored was quoted in 10 1-4c and 10 1-2c per lb. Quebec were 1-2c under the Ontario levels. Improved demand from England has caused the late strength in cheese. Country boards all were higher over the week-end as the result of the better tone in the market, stimulated by the better overseas trade. Receipts, 344 boxes; week ago, 6,295; year ago, 1,302.

Ingersoll, Ont., September 5.—At Tuesday's meeting of the Ingersoll Cheese Board 383 boxes were boarded and all sold at 9 3-4 cents.

Rubber clothes are made possible by a new rubber-base plastic compound which is odorless, tasteless and heat resistant.

TWENTY-FIVE COMBAT VESSELS NEAR CUBA

Sixteen More Destroyers Ordered to Cuban Area to Protect U. S. Citizens

London Shows Anxiety Over Damage To Foreign Property

COAST GUARDS

Cubans Hope To Settle Turmoil Without Intervention

HAVANA, Sept. 7—(AP)—Soldiers set up machine guns in uptown parts this afternoon, as Havana was stirred by many conflicting rumors including an insistent report that the United States would ask the two day old radical government to surrender power.

A widely circulated rumor was that Washington would ask that Carlos Manuel De Cespedes, who was deposed from the Provisional Presidency by a radical coup d'etat, be placed at the head of the Government again with a new "cabinet of concentration". Such a cabinet would include representatives of all revolutionary groups.

Washington, Sept. 7.—(AP) — Concentration of naval power off the shores of disturbed Cuba continued today, with sixteen destroyers ordered there in event they "be needed to protect American lives."

Thus, 25 combat vessels are now or soon will be near Cuba, the latest unit being of eight navy and eight coast guard destroyers.

As to the regular navy ships, Admiral William H. Standley, chief of operations, headed them; which had been cruising with Naval Reservists, to disembark them immediately and take on their full complements of regular officers and men.

Simultaneously, the coast guard craft—former war vessels—were dispatched from around New London and New York under orders to report to the Senior Naval Commander in Cuba.

Meanwhile, more than 1,000 United States marines were mobilized at the Seventh Regiment at nearby Quantico, Virginia, ready on a moment's expective force, they were prepared for immediate movement. The navy transport Indianapolis, bearing Secretary of the Navy Swanson, is proceeding from the Atlantic Coast.

The Chesapeake destroyers are of the same dimensions as navy destroyers, and each carries four 4-inch guns and has a maximum speed of around 34 knots. The displacement of each is 1,090 tons, and they are about 315 feet in length.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—(AP)— The Cuban disturbances are causing considerable anxiety in Great Britain regarding the possibility of damage to foreign property, but the British foreign office has received no reports of damage to the property of British subjects.

Washington, Sept. 7.—President Roosevelt in an unprecedented move called diplomats of leading Latin American nations to his desk late yesterday to tell them of his fears and hopes for the entire situation to intervene.

He indicated that if a government capable of ruling Cuba can be constituted quickly before some new outrag trigger finger sets loose a conflagration, the vexing question of intervention will vanish of itself.

DETROIT BANKER SLAMS CRITICS

Believes Father Coughlin Should Stick To Church Work

Detroit, Sept. 7.—(AP)—In sharp, forceful language, James O. Murfin, former director of the closed First National Bank, Detroit, today attacked the Federal Government, for "flying false reports," and bitterly criticized Mr. Canadian-born Senator James, Cousens and the Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin, for their testimony before the one-man grand jury, investigating bank closings here.

SIR GILBERT VYLE PASSES AT AGE OF 63

Industrial Advisor To British Delegation At Ottawa

NOTED ENGINEER

Headed British Chamber of Commerce In 1926-27

Birmingham, England, Sept. 7 (C. P. Cable)—Sir Gilbert Christopher Vyle, prominent financier and engineer who acted as industrial advisor to the United Kingdom delegation at the Imperial Economic Conference held in Ottawa last year, died here today. He was 63 years of age.

Sir Gilbert acted in an advisory capacity to the government on numerous occasions and was government adviser at Geneva on imposing exports restrictions. He was also chairman of the British Committee on Empire trade.

Sir Gilbert, who was Knighted in 1928, was born in Hereford, the son of Samuel Vyle of Harseford West, organizer of the first public electric light station in England. As a young man Sir Gilbert trained as an electrical engineer and later was attached to the engineering branch of the post office. Later he entered the Colonial office and served abroad afterwards returning here practising as a consulting engineer in Manchester.

Eventually he engaged in industrial work in Birmingham and for years had taken a close interest in labor and commercial questions. Sir Gilbert organized the manufacture and design of aircraft for the admiralty, army and later the air ministry.

In addition to his work as a member of various government committees he was president of the Association of British Chambers of Commerce in 1926-27. He was also the author of many articles dealing with export trade, finance and industrial legislation.

Sir Gilbert is survived by his widow, Elizabeth Kaye Booth.

Sir Gilbert Vyle during the past year in correspondence with Mr. W. E. Schuster in regard to interchange of trade in the British and Ontario farm products, told Mr. Schuster that "I feel myself in complete accord with your views on British Canadian trade." Sir Gilbert will be recalled, the first to remark that Canadian housewives in his opinion were paying a high price for British coal.

Einstein, Undaunted by Price Put on Head by Nazis, Takes Early Strolls

Brussels, Belgium, Sept. 7.—(AP) — Great anxiety has prevailed at Villa La Savoyarde, Professor Albert Einstein's Thanksbergh residence, since a report was received saying a secret Nazi organization set a price of about $45 on the famous physicist's head.

Mrs. Einstein has been particularly alarmed, as her husband continues his habit of taking early morning and occasional strolls across the Downs.

Local police are keeping a vigilant watch in the immediate neighborhood of the Villa La Savoyarde, and guards precede and follow the professor and a companion on the walks.

All Germans spending holidays in the vicinity are carefully investigated.

Professor Einstein said he plans eventually to change his Belgian residence and to accept an offer of asylum given him by Britons of Americans.

Quarter-to-Dollar Grand Opera Proves Success at Hippodrome

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.— (CP) — Aida and Carmen, Faust and Pagliacci, Trovatore and Traviata—all 25 cents to a dollar.

With these programmes and prices, Alfredo Salmaggi answers the long-standing argument—can Grand Opera be produced profitably in America at popular prices?

With his Chicago Opera Company, Salmaggi—who fits well the role of Maestro with his flowing locks and his fiery Latin fury—and also his dark felt hat—returns tonight to the Hippodrome.

'Norman' Ancestry of Families Ridiculed by Scientists

Old English Family Trees Uprooted by Lord Raglan Norman Ancestry Faked?

Existence of Robin Hood Doubted By Noted Scientist

BRITISH MEET

Addresses Range From Origin of Life To Air Sickness

Leicester, England, Sept. 7 (C.P. Cable)—Meeting in eleven different halls the British Association for the advancement of Science settled down to work today. A number of interesting papers are expected to lead to lively discussions.

Lord Raglan, president of the Anthropology Section ruthlessly uprooted old English family trees. Their Norman ancestry, he said, was the "work of pedigree fakirs." The Wake family, Lord Raglan said, had no traceable connection with Hereward, famous for his resistance to William the Conqueror, or any other Saxon.

He suggested Hereward himself might be a mythical hero and cast doubt on the existence of Robin Hood.

Other addresses ranged from origin of life to air sickness.

Dr. James Grey of Cambridge University in the Zoology Section held that spontaneous origin of living inanimate matter was highly improbable. Olaf Bloch, London research chemist, informed the scientists the new "artificial-fra-red process" revealed man as he was under the skin.

DOPE CHARGES HEARD

WAGON WHEEL OVER HIS HEAD

Jas. Horrigan, Marlbank Boy, Injured Near Stoco

Tweed, Sept. 7 (Special)—James Horrigan, ten-year-old son of Mrs. Jas. Horrigan, of Marlbank, while visiting at the home of Mr. Wm. Rush of Stoco, was seriously injured on Monday evening about five-thirty when the wheel of a lumber wagon apparently passed over his head. He was assisting Mr. Rush in spreading some gravel on the land where the road was standing in the front of the wagon while Mr. Rush was on the ground at the rear. In some way horses became frightened and the little fellow was thrown under the wheels, one of which was thought to have passed over his head, causing a possible fracture of the skull, which could not be ascertained definitely at the time. He also sustained other injuries and Dr. M. G. Dales of Tweed was called and the patient is doing as well as can be expected.

WAR OFFICE BLAMED

Bangor, Wales, Sept. 7 (C. P. and A.P. Cables)—David Lloyd George, whose memoirs, published by coincidence on the eve of Viscount Grey's death, contained a sharp attack on the former Secretary for Foreign Affairs in connection with the outbreak of the war, was obviously distressed today when informed of the passing of his onetime colleague.

With a voice full of emotion the former Prime Minister and Secretary of War said:

"It is sad to be told of the death of an old colleague. We were members of the same government and sat at the same council table for more than eleven years.

"We had our disagreement in opinion and he and I gave free expression to them. That is inevitable in politics, especially in the course of a long life. But I have nothing now but grief at the death of one with whom I worked so many years in complete personal harmony."

Mr. Lloyd George made his remarks when he was about to leave by train for London. Viscount Grey of Fallodon, who gave Germany the war ultimatum, died this morning at Christon Bank, England, at the age of 71, after an illness of more than a week.

Lloyd George Memoirs

Lloyd George in the first volume of his war memoirs said millions of killed in the Great War need not have met death for the conflict should have ended in 1916 and the Allied strategy in France in the latter stages was a "sanguinary mistake."

He criticized the War Office repeatedly for "mental obtuseness" and a "pitiable lack of initiative."

And Ideal Foreign Secretary would be a cross between a recluse and a tramp, for instance between Sir Edward Grey (late Viscount Grey of Fallodon) and Ramsay MacDonald (present Prime Minister) Lloyd George wrote.

He said the War Office was a "perpetual source of obstruction" when he started organizing the munitions ministry in the early days of the war.

Tributes to Statesmanship

London, Sept. 7 (C.P. and A.P. Cables)—Tributes to the life and achievements of Viscount Grey of Fallodon from persons in today from all quarters—his former political colleagues, statesmen, and various other persons prominent in all walks of life—when news of the death of the former Secretary for Foreign Affairs spread.

One of the most striking came from the Marquis of Reading, who was Lord Chief Justice at the outbreak of the war. His message read:

"His memory will always be revered for his efforts to avoid a long-threatened European war and for the important part he played in reaching the vital decision in August, 1914, as well as for his consistent and successful efforts and endeavours to steer clear of entanglement with America before she entered the war."

Hope For Peace

Cleveland, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Newton D. Baker, the United States' war-time Secretary of War, said today when informed of the death of Viscount Grey that "if any human agency could have prevented the war, Sir Edward Grey would have prevented it.

"The tragic misfortune was that no machinery had been set up in advance, and when the test came it was too late to set it up."

Baker said, the Viscount "Belongs in that class of Englishmen educated from their earliest youth for the public service. He added to great talent great character, and has been one of the most conspicuous public servants of the British Empire in this generation."

He Defended Germany

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP)— James W. Gerard, former United States Ambassador to Germany, extolled Viscount Grey of England, who died early this morning, as "probably more responsible for the defeat of Germany during the war than any other man."

He never wavered in his attitude toward Belgium's right to neutrality," said Gerard today.

"And because he succeeded in bringing England into the war on behalf of the Belgians, I would not be sounded the knell of defeat for Germany.

"Personally he was very charming and retiring, with quiet, literary tastes. He was very much loved by everyone who came in contact with him."

HIGHER TAXES IN PROSPERITY LOGICAL AIM

Prof. Reilly of London Tells of Government Borrowing

AT TORY SCHOOL

Governments Becoming Socialist By Control of Income

Newmarket, Ont., Sept. 7 (CP) — Foreign borrowing policies of Canadian Governments in the past had played a major part in bringing on the acuteness of economic conditions in the Dominion today, Prof. E. E. Reilly, of the University of Western Ontario, told the Liberal-Conservative summer school here today.

The practice of borrowing in prosperous times, being unable to borrow in lean years, had almost accentuated the swing of the pendulum in both directions, he said. "How we handle this matter in the future will in great measure influence the soundness of our monetary system, the credit, the consequent cost of money and the stability of trade and industry, in fact the economic welfare of our people," he considered.

Prof. Reilly recommended the establishment of a federal relation with regulatory powers to supervise all forms of borrowing by provincial and municipal governments, the larger corporations, particularly public utilities. When it was realized every foreign loan had an inflationary or deflationary effect on our money, the urgency of rigid control was appreciated, he said.

Central Bank Not Needed

Canada did not need a Central Bank, Prof. Reilly contended, claiming the Dominion had sufficient protection of banks at present, three institutions doing 73 per cent. of the business. Should all they might slack was some governmental control, which could be effected by bringing them under his suggested national board of finance. Governmental activity had become our biggest industry, he declared, and amounting to close to $1,000,000,000 annually to close to $1,000,000,000 annually

"Practices he pointed out, were changing; governments were becoming socialists to the extent that 25 to 35 percent of the income of the people was handled by the various governments. Public finance was thus a subject of first magnitude.

"Interest rates and money and lending has been done on an unprecedented scale, and because of the economic effects, and particularly without regard to security, depending on price and exchange rates, normal trade revenues and the ability to meet them of the various countries to pay."

Prof. Reilly declared the world was to have high taxes in prosperous times, with a minimum of borrowing which could be effected in depressions to

I. W. C. SOLLOWAY WILL STAND TRIAL

Charged With Conversion of 100 Shares of Noranda

Ottawa, Sept. 7 (CP)—I. W. C. Solloway, Montreal, former stock broker, was committed to stand trial before a higher court today by Magistrate Glenn E. Hyde on a charge of theft and conversion to his own use of 100 shares of Noranda mining stock lodged with him as collateral. The preliminary hearing in police court was as a result of a charge lodged by D. B. Rochester, well known mining figure.

In the meantime Solloway is at liberty.

In police court, Solloway entered a plea of not guilty and elected for trial by jury. He may change his election to be tried by a county court judge or he may adhere to his election of trial by jury. In the latter eventuality the case would come up at the regular assizes opening in Ottawa on October 5.

S. SICKNESS AT SARNIA

Two Cases Reported And Close Watch Being Kept At London

Sarnia, Ont., Sept. 7.—(CP)—As the result of detection of one of the sleeping sickness victims was report, ed "not so good," health authorities maintained a close watch for other cases in view of reported new outbreaks of the disease in Detroit and other near-border points.

It has not been determined where the Sarnia patients contracted the disease.

Condition of Thomas W. Creelman was regarded as unencouraging by attending Charles Heath, second victim here, was described as somewhat improved.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 7.—(CP) — Precautionary measures are being taken by health officers in London today in an effort to prevent the spread of sleeping sickness which has claimed one life here and attacked two others in Sarnia district.

Funeral of the London victim, Ernest Pendell, 24, Oxford, will be strictly private in order to prevent the infection from spreading in any way.

Dr. G. W. Robinson of Arkona, who treated Snell, believes that the disease will not spread, as there are not yet any cases reported here in the district. Dr. Robinson has not been able to trace the source of infection which brought on the fatal disease.

Dr. Charles Boreham, London Medical Officer of Health, stated that precautions are being taken and one full precautions would be taken to prevent further outbreaks. As far back as he can remember no cases of the dread disease had been reported here, he said.

Mother, with Child in Arms, Jumps from Seven Storey Window to Death

Dallas, Texas, Sept. 7 (AP)—Mrs. J. D. Logan, and her daughter, Elaine, two, plunged to death early today from a seventh storey window on Cliff Towers, the apartment house where they lived.

The bodies crashed to a concrete driveway. The child was killed outright and Mrs. Logan died shortly afterward.

Mrs. Logan's husband, a travelling salesman, was reported to be in the hurricane stricken lower Rio Grande Valley. Authorities were making efforts to locate him. Police believed the child was in Mrs. Logan's arms when they fell.

Mrs. Roosevelt Sees Human Needs in Back Alleys, Founds Girls' Camp

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—(CP) — Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, with a habit of getting her facts about the many side at first hand, today was preparing to put her full influence behind continued support of Community Chests.

During six months in the White House, Mrs. Roosevelt has visited the over-populated alleys of the United States capital; she has gone unannounced into the West Virginia coal fields; she has visited rural communities and New York City flats; she has made a special study for jobless girls.

From this knowledge she will draw for a strong plea for the welfare necessities of the coming winter when the 1933 mobilization for human needs, of which Newton D. Baker is chairman, convenes at the White House tomorrow. Mrs. Roosevelt has consented to serve as it's woman's chairman, and will help organize women's meetings.

BOARD LOOKS OVER HARBOR

Mr. George F. Ostrom In Company With Engineer Visits Docks

A tentative survey of the lower harbor was made this morning by George F. Ostrom, chairman of the Board of Harbor Commissioners and Mr. J. Mellish, governmental engineer in charge of the harbor dredging project now being carried on.

In company with the engineer, Mr. Ostrom clearly outlined the tentative effort of the local board to develop the waterfront at the lower end of the city into a real recreational area. The proposed construction of a new dock, commencing at which stands an old dock to the road and store the varied freight from the incoming lake and scenic traffickers.

Proposed plans, Mr. Ostrom explained, call for construction of a new dock similar to the present one constructed by the government some time ago, and running from that present one east to the foot of Church Street, and extended or more yards south of the present shore line. The large area of vacant land behind the new dock, a large part of which is now covered with shallow water, would then be filled in with solid ballast, affording unlimited room for the construction of many more city-owned storage sheds. Extensive dredging in front of the new dock would give ample sufficient draught for the largest boats.

"It is a ambitious scheme," agreed Mr. Mellish when the proposed construction was outlined to him. "It is one that I think was quite possible of achievement.

Several thousand pounds of dock construction were outlined by him. One method which could be used, he said, was the adoption of a system of wooden piling and concrete fill.

Mr. Mellish and the provincial engineer agreed to make a simple plan of the proposed dock which could then be presented to the local city engineer and presented to the commission who will meet in the near future to consider ways and means of carrying the project thru.

Mr. Ostrom, enlarged with the probabilities of the new dock, sees the possibility of the building at the east end of the city with the completion of the work. Besides removing the present unsightly coal sheds and garage at the south end of the dock, the new construction would be of untold commercial value to the city.

"It's a big job, certainly," he said. "And it can't be done for ten cents but the Harbor Commissioners' Board has the support of every manufacturer in the city and also the citizens themselves, and if the work can be done, we're going to have a good try at it."

Really Honest Man is Found

Pays For Extra Pair of Overalls Given Him By Mistake

Mr. Joe Diamond, Front street merchant is today relating a story of the honesty of the people of Northern Hastings. Last spring a farmer from the Marmora district came into his store and purchased two pairs of overalls. On his next frequent visit to Belleville and this morning, he stopped in Mr. Diamond's store and laid some currency on the counter to pay for another pair of overalls. The merchant in error had passed three of the garments in the package previously, instead of two, and the resident of the Marmora section had no discovered the error. He acquired a repayment of three to valuable adjuncts to farm labor recently.

DRAUGHT OF TUG FACTOR

Wharf Site Too Shallow To Allow Use of Scows

"Even if the contract had specified that the material be dumped in that location, there would have been considerable trouble in doing so," declared Mr. J. Mellish, the government engineer in charge of the dredging project now being carried on in the harbor. The explanation given was in answer to a query from Mr. George F. Ostrom, chairman of the local Harbor Board as to why the material being being dredged from the bottom of the harbor could not be dumped on the site of the proposed new dock south of the city, east of the present government dock. This, it was believed by those interested would have helped to fill in the proposed site. "The tug now hired is not powerful a ten-foot draught, and the scows, in order to bring their loads ashore, take much deeper than that," explained the engineer. "It's the hinged bottoms."

The present depth of water on the location of the proposed new dock is very shallow even for small boats.

OBITUARY

MRS REUBEN YOUNG

After an illness of short duration the death of Elizabeth Hall, wife of Mr. Reuben Young, section foreman of C.P.R. at Grafton, Ont., took place at the family residence on their home near C.P.R. station, Monday. She was a lady who was born in Ireland, was in her fifty-ninth year and of bright, kind and sunshiny disposition.

Interment took place in Shannonville Tuesday, September 5, 1933, with Rev. R. Graham, Presbyterian Minister of Colborne, conducting services at the house. Pall bearers were O. M. Creighton, A. Barker, Wesley Brenton, Jos. Ard, F. Clouston and Cecil Chalmers.

LATE MRS. GEO. HUMPHRY

A number of former friends gathered at the Belleville Burial Co. Funeral Home, 27 Campbell Street, Wednesday afternoon to accord their last tribute of respect to the memory of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Humfrey, who passed away in Toronto, Sunday. Rev. Canon George Marshall, rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, conducted the service at the Home and also at the graveside in the Belleville cemetery.

Acting as bearers were Messrs. Thomas and Joseph Rainbird, Geo. Taylor, Patrick, George Barlow and John Frost.

MRS. EDMUND A. FOSTER

Deslor, Sept. 7 —The funeral of the late Mrs. Edmund A. Foster was held last Friday afternoon from the house to the church, Tweed, a large concourse of friends gathered. The church was nicely draped and beautified with flowers. The service at the house and grave was conducted by Rev. J. M. Fraser. His message was taken from II. Cor. 4; 17-18, "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." Moses esteemed the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt, for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward. The choir of the church rendered an appropriate selection. Our departed sister "What a friend we have in Jesus," "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me," and Nearer My God to Thee." Interment was made in the adjoining cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs Lorne Thompson, Sidney Smith, H. Crawford, P. Kingsea, E. Kingsea, F. Rupnow with Mr. F. A. Towle, funeral director.

Ordella Tice was born at Consecon, Prince Edward County, 27th of July, 1875. Her father was George Thomas Tice and her mother Sarah Ann Bonisteel. She was the youngest of a family of four children buried in Tyrone Union Cem. She was born, with Heber the eldest son, now of New Ontario. Two other children are buried in the Methodist Cemetery at L'Amable, but William of Consecon and Louise (Mrs. William G. Smith) were born in Dungannon. Ordella was first married to Harry Noble, and to this union were born children who lived years. Her marriage to Edmund A. Foster was celebrated at Bass Creek on the 24th of October, 1900, by Rev. T. H. P. Sparling. To this union was blessed with a family of seven. Leslie died at the age of three and a half years. The others are living at the home in Tyrone; Lelcia Gladys (Mrs. Gerald Harris), Deslor; Burrel Alexander, Nora Rebecca (Mrs. Harold Wheeler) Belleville; E. Ross and Roy Orval, at home.

Mrs. Foster had been an active worker of the Methodist Church, in Egan Creek and a member there in 1914 when by change of boundary that portion of the field was associated with Bancroft. Under the United Church she nevertheless has been known as Deslor. During the past two years Mrs. Foster's health had previously been fine, and in the active part she formerly rendered. Patiently and endured and bravely she hoped for added days, but rest for her Lord's will she answered the call. She was conscious until the morning of the 30th. day of August, 1933.

Her daughter was also her faithful nurse during these last trying months. Her brother, William, and sister, Louise, were present with the family for the funeral.

Mrs. Foster at the age of 58 years leaves a record of faithful service in every department of her life. As neighbor and friend, as wife and mother, as Christian and fellow worker she will be much missed. The surviving family have the sympathy of a large community in the loss that is both theirs and others.

LATE MRS. WM. P. BUCKLEY

Many friends and neighbours gave this (Thursday) morning, in attendance at the funeral of the late Mrs. Mary Ann Buckley, which took place from her late residence, 40 Lewis street, to St. Michael's Church, where was celebrated at 9 a.m. by the Rev. W. J. Buckley of Trenton, a nephew of the deceased and the Rt. Rev. J. P. McFalon, V.D., assisted by Father Buckley, performed the last ceremonies at the graveside in St. Michael Cemetery.

Acting as bearers were six nephews of the late Mrs. Messrs. Joseph, Frank and William Power, Frank and Joseph Buckley and Leonard Parrell.

BEAR ALMOST SPOILS PARTY

Battle For Sandwiches Ends In Animal's Retreat

Sault Ste. Marie, Sept. 7 (CP) — Percy Davis and a girl companion one bright and sunny afternoon packed a basket lunch and hiked to the banks of a near-by outing. After spreading the lunch temptingly on the grass in a quiet nook, Percy decided he would like a dip before eating.

While doffing his clothes in the car, a bear, tempted by the delicious spread, emerged from the bush and started eating the lunch.

The girl started to scream, but the bear continued to munch at the lunch. Percy was undressed in the car when the girl's screams reached him. Hastily donning garments he jumped from the car, armed himself with an axe and rocks and gave battle to the bear, which had disposed of visible food and was trying to open a tin box containing sandwiches.

The bear retreated under the barrage of rocks and stayed out of the box of sandwiches. Percy gave the bear the sandwiches were all that was left or they lunch. He induced the bear to drop the box and marched back to the picnic grounds for his interrupted swim and a lunch of sandwiches.

GREASED PIG WON'T MOVE

Competition Called Off When Animal Stands Stock-Still

Thessalon, Ont., Sept. 7 (CP) — When a sports programme was run off here the highlight of the meet—the greased pig chase was kept for the last feature. A fat pig was in readiness, several pounds of lard being generously rubbed in, and a jolly, or oil poured over it to make doubly sure it was slippery.

The time for the race came and the "porker" was released from his pen. But he refused to become excited or enter into the spirit of the contest. He stood there, stolidly grunted and wheezed like a dilapidated car.

The pig was given a persuasive "shot" but the animal only heaved itself a foot into the air, but not an inch forward.

Officials gave up in disgust and called off the contest.

Rev. Koffend Gives Address to Mission Band

Rawdon.—On Friday evening, Sept. 1st, the Sunbeam Mission Band of Mount Pleasant, Rawdon, held an open meeting in the church hall with a large attendance. A splendid programme was given by the children under the capable leadership of Miss Edna Thrasher who had spent many afternoons in training those taking part.

Miss Hughes opened the meeting with a neat address of welcome and thanked all who had in any way helped to make the meeting a success. Miss Andrews read the list of Annual Associate and Honorary Members and practically all were present. Miss MacMullen reported $17.18 which they had raised to date.

Mr. Clifford Holmes manipulated the curtain during the following programme:

Mission Band Chorus—"All One Family," and at the close Billy McAdam recited "A Prayer".

Dialogue—"The Personality of Stewardship," with Marguerite White, Eileen Phillips and Vera McAdam. A fitting climax to this Margarite sang a solo "I Gave My Life For Thee".

Recitation—Marion Rose. "A prayer that the Band work would bring comfort to the suffering."

Duet—Gladys Summers and Gladys Sharp, "I Shielded My Hands For Jesus".

Recitation—Percy White, "Jesus Understands."

Exercise—"The girls of the world are very much like us."—Winnie Phillips, Gladys Hay and Faye Andrews.

Recitation—Eileen McMullen—"The Little Folk of Other Lands."

Solo—Helen Spencer—"Faith and Prayer."

Recitation — Marion Phillips — "Topay Turvy".

Exercise—"If You Were Invited to a Japanese Home"—Anna Sharp and Edna Hubble.

Solo—Mildred Sharp—"Do Something For Others Today."

Recitation — Elva Andrews — "Here and There."

At this juncture Rev. J. A. Koffend of Stirling who spent several years in China as a missionary, was asked to address the gathering. He gave a splendid lecture with the help of lantern slides. The talk and slides were most interesting and the speaker closed with the history of Little Miss Nobody and how through her being a few days this week with Miss Alice McKechnie at the home of and Mrs. Edward Montgomery.

INSANE MAN STABS NEGRO BABE IN CRIB

New York, Sept. 6.—(AP)—A slayer believed to be insane, crept into an apartment today and stabbed 18-months-old negro baby, Dorothy Holder, to death in her crib.

The baby's parents awakened in time to hear the brute run down a flight of stairs to the street. On the crib they found a note saying: "This is just a warning."

The father, McAllister Holder, postal clerk, said he knew of no motive.

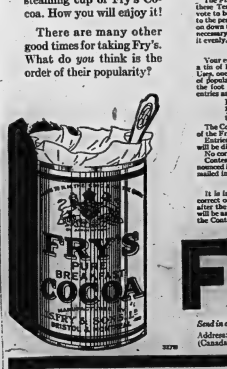
Drink more food when?



FRY'S OFFERS $2,500 FOR THE ANSWER

THERE are ten popular opportunities for benefitting from the "extra nourishment" that Fry's Cocoa gives.

The athlete, for example, after a strenuous game, finds Fry's most refreshing—quick to restore energy to tired muscles and "tone" to exhausted nerves. Fry's Cocoa is nearly ALL food of the best kind—which, of course, makes it very economical.

When you come home chilled or tired—from work or play—take a delicious, steaming cup of Fry's Cocoa. How you will enjoy it!

There are many other good times for taking Fry's. What do you think is the order of their popularity?

ENTER THIS FRY'S COCOA CONTEST

794 Cash Prizes are being offered for arranging, in what is found to be the order of popularity, the Ten Uses given below for Fry's Cocoa as a beverage.

HERE ARE THE PRIZES:

First Prize	$400
Second Prize	$300
Third Prize	$250
Fourth Prize	$150
Fifth Prize	$100
2 Prizes of $75 each	$150
3 Prizes of $50 each	$150
4 Prizes of $25 each	$100
20 Prizes of $10 each	$200
60 Prizes of $5 each	$300
200 Prizes of $2 each	$400

HERE ARE THE TEN USES:

For Breakfast	For a Bedtime Drink
For Lunch	For a Vacuum Bottle
For Supper	For Convalescents
For Athletes	For Children at all times
For Iced Drinks	For Evening Drinks

Disregarding the above order entirely write down these Ten Uses in what you think is the order of their popularity in the Layman Test.

A Total of 294 Prizes—Aggregating $2,500.00

The First Prize will go to the person whose arrangement of these Ten Uses comes nearest to the Test. Second Prize will go to the person whose arrangement comes next nearest, and so on down the list. In the case of ties the Company will pool the necessary amount of money involved and distribute it evenly.

How to Enter the Contest

Your entry must be made on the back of a label taken from a tin of Fry's Breakfast Cocoa. Simply write the Ten Uses, one below the other, in what you judge to be the order of popularity. Then print your name and address plainly at the foot and mail it to the address given below. Make as many entries as you wish on the following basis:

1-lb. tin label good for two entries
½-lb. tin label good for one entry
¼-lb. tin labels good for one entry

The Contest is open only to residents of Canada. Employees of the Fry Company are barred.

Entries not made in conformity with these requirements will be disqualified.

No correspondence can be entered into in this Contest.

Contest closes December 15th. Prize winners will be announced in this paper on or about December 15th, and cheques mailed immediately thereafter.

An Equal Opportunity for All

It is impossible for anyone to know in advance what the correct order of popularity will be. That will only be known after the votes are all counted. Your opportunity of winning will be as good as anyone's. Get a tin of Fry's Cocoa and enter the Contest today.

FRY'S

Send in as many entries as you wish, not later than Nov. 15th.

Address: Contest Department, J. S. FRY & SONS (Canada) Limited, 2020 Mazon St., Montreal, P.Q.

THE SCREEN WORLD

It is noted in the Hamilton Spectator that there is considerable joy in England besides concern in Hollywood at the attention which British films are drawing in the New World.

Canadians can realize what a benefit to this country it must be to have a good percentage of British films with British ideals occupying the foundation place in these pictures. Of course it must be realized that the Hollywood film has a fine technique, and that the plots are well worked out. Some British films we have seen have a more leisurely plotting which perhaps does not appeal so much to Canadians who have caught some of their neighbors' rush and desire for striking drama. But British technique in the plotting and in recording has shown great strides, proving that the British producers are very apt scholars.

There is one point about British films which deserves attention and that is the devotion which they pay to character study. This has a great appeal and never fails to please.

Both films have their fine characteristics and today the world can draw upon the finest pictures which have ever been shown and heard.

It is reported that Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., with his son, is to spend not less than six million dollars a year in Britain in the establishment of films and in the founding a great organization of film artists.

The world has plenty of good pictures coming with the enterprise of the two English-speaking races in film production. The screen is playing an ever-growing part in modern life.

LEVEL CROSSINGS

Periodically, the Dominion Railway Commission publishes a bulletin listing instances of dangerous practices at crossings. Therein is revealed that motorists perform as follows:

"Failed to stop at lowered gate."

"Ran into gates while down, claiming he did not see them."

"Disregarded stop signals; very deliberate."

"Drove through gate breaking off point; claimed brakes not working."

"States he did not see gates before striking same."

"Ran into side of stationary train."

And so on, and so forth. Safety devices mean nothing to such drivers, and money spent upon gates, watchmen and signals is wasted, as far as they are concerned. Yet crossing protection in a great majority of cases must be by such devices; the construction of subways is within the realm of the practical only in relation to a small number of crossings where traffic is heavy. And even where subways are provided, one reads now and then of a speeding or sleepy motorist who collides with a post or buttress and ends his career in one of these structures built to save him from being hit by a train.

Inevitably, the more dangerous crossings must be eliminated or guarded as soon as we can afford it. If that can be made part of the relief work program, all right. There are crossings at which drivers do not get a fair chance. Mostly conditions are otherwise; and motorists hold their safety in their own hands. Those who deliberately risk it are not very promising subjects for educational measures, but there is a useful field among young people. Safety films shown in the government building at Toronto Exhibition last week to thousands of visitors could not but accomplish a lot of good. It would seem worth while to bring about wider and more frequent distribution of such pictures. They deal with cutting in, hailing on movement, passing on hills and all that sort of thing, but also with dangerous practices at level crossings, and the consequences are pictured in a manner so vivid as to make a lasting impression.

If it is good business to spend millions trying—without prospect of complete success—to prevent people from driving in front of railway trains—it ought to be better business to spend a few hundreds or thousands of dollars in motor safety education of the generation which in a short time will be driving the cars of the nation; in warning them against practices which in Ontario cause nine times as many fatalities as crossing accidents.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Manners easily and rapidly mature into morals.—Mann.

Manners are the shadows of virtues, the momentary display of those qualities, which our fellow-creatures love and respect.—Sydney Smith.

Civility costs nothing and buys everything.—Lady M. W. Montague.

No man can either live piously, or die righteously, without a wife.—Richter.

How full or how empty our lives, depends, we say, on Providence. Suppose we say, more or less on improvidence.—Bovee.

SIDELIGHTS

SIREN SHIPS

I do not know how it can be
That ships have such a lure for me;
For me, who never sailed away
From any port on blight or bay;
But it is true, all ships that go
To lands of sun or lands of snow,
Broad ships whose motion is like song
Or battered hulks that limp along,
Alike with beckoning gestures glide
To magic realms of wind and tide.
I joy because the ancients gave
To Venus, rising from the wave,
Poseidon and the Nereids fair
Who twine red seaweed in their hair;
And like Ulysses, ill-content
On any isle or continent,
To clutch my heart in witching grip
I need no siren save a ship!

SOUTH END ATHLETIC CLUB put it over in a big way with its Labor Day picnic and sports program, reviving the old basket picnic of days gone by when the whole family enjoyed a day in the open, worked up monster appetites with games of all kinds and had lashings of grub and gallons of tea and coffee to satisfy them. The annual Grand Trunk Picnic was an exemplification of the genial social gathering which warmed the hearts of all attending. The South End Athletic Club is to be congratulated upon the success of the effort which afforded a happy day to many families, and also focussed the spotlight on the fact that Victoria Park affords ideal picnic grounds for many citizens, any and all attention paid to it in the way of improvements by the Parks Board is well worth while.

RACKETS, small and large, are increasing, due, no doubt, to the large number of unemployed and the army of men who have taken to the open road rather than burden the home folks, in many instances. Merchants report that the newest racket is for a young hobo to come in and ask for a towel stating that he wants to take a bath, another asks for a tie to make him look better, another may ask for a shirt or a hat, or even a pair of boots. The hoboes get a good collection of articles from the housewives with this genial racket, the rubbing alky and canned heat gets a run. Of course such requests are honestly made sometimes, but the fact remains that a racket has been made out of it by a certain class of young hoboes who would rather eat mulligan and drink alky than work.

REQUESTS FOR FREE MEALS are common enough in some parts of the city, varied by requests of various kinds. Very few offer to exchange work for food. One household on the East Hill had a visitor about eight in the evening who asked for a cup of tea, and food he refused it, saying that he had been walking the highway all day in the heat and his stomach was sending messages of distress. He was a man well past the meridian of life, his feet were sore and life seemed very sombre. A pot of tea, however, brightened him up and he went on his way with a smile. The same home was visited the same evening about ten o'clock by a young wanderer who asked for the loan of a cup or basin

There still was plenty of trouble in sight for New York Giants today but behind them was convincing proof that they have the ability to come back when they have to.

The Giants' lead, which dwindled at an alarming rate in the first two games of their important series at Pittsburgh, remained at 6½ games as they rallied brilliantly to win the second game of yesterday's doubleheader and the 3rd of the series 5-4 after the undaunted Buccaneers had pulled out a 6-5 10 inning decision in the opener.

The Pirates did some comeback work of their own in the first clash, rallying to drive Freddy Fitzsimmons to cover in the last innings after an exciting four-run rally in the sixth had given New York the lead. The Pirates knotted the count in the eighth when Pie Traynor and Arky Vaughan rapped Fitzsimmons for triples and Manny Therveton singled off Hy Bill's delivery. The winning run came in the 10th when Bill Swift, third Pirate pitcher, singled with two on base.

Ralph Birkofer, young southpaw who trimmed the Giants in New York recently, failed to get through an inning of the second game and Chagnon was not much more effective.

Cubs Creep Forward

Meanwhile, the third place Chicago Cubs crept a half-game closer to the leaders by knocking off Boston Braves by 6-3 behind Guy Bout Cleveland also pushed a threehit shutout up to the final innings. St. Louis Cardinals lost a pair to Brooklyn by the Phillies twice 3-1 and 6-7.

After taking the opener on Bill Hallahan's three hit shutout, Dazzy Vance had to stage a seven-run spurt in the last two innings of the nightcap, getting the last four off Phil Collins and Roy Hansen in the ninth.

Brooklyn and Cincinnati divided a meaningless doubleheader, the Dodgers taking the first 7-3 with the aid of four unearned runs and the Reds bounding out 21 hits to reach their high scoring mark in the season with an 18-4 victory in the second.

The American League situation remained unchanged with Washington 8 1-2 games behind the Yankees largely because of the efforts of Alex Carrasquel and Lou Gehrig. Alex, the 37-year-old Senator rookie, pitched four-hit ball in his first major league start and belted in two runs in a 3-1 victory over Chicago while Lou Gehrig did all the Yankee scoring in the Yanks 2-1 triumph over St. Louis Browns, hitting his 36th homer among other hows.

Jimmie Foxx was through with his 41st boundary belt and Lefty Grove hurled effectively in the pinches for his 20th victory of the season, as Philadelphia Athletics downed Cleveland 9-4. Detroit Tigers combined Elden Auker with a flock of subs off Boston pitchers and beat the Red Sox 11-3.

5 YEAR PLAN FOR BOXING

Mountain Grant, Jim Scott, Begins His Training

Charlotte, N.C., Sept. 7 (CP) — Jim Scott, the mountain giant the Guinea Conservation Corps has discovered, had started his seven feet 2 3-4 inches and 320 pounds out on a heavyweight boxing career today—by leading trucks.

Howard Garland of Charlotte boxing stable manager who heard about Scott when the Conservation Corps announced he was the biggest man enlisted by the United States Government brought the big boy here and launched out on a five-year plan to put him on the heavyweight throne.

While Scott, who is only 20 and still growing, TUESarish h- .... still growing, is learning something about the ring game, Garland expects to get a lot of help from him in his trucking business, and that's where he was today.

Pirpo Filipe, middleweight in Garland's stable, will get his turn at turning Scott into a fighter. He plans to start him out with gymnasium work, gradually going into the fundamentals of boxing as Scott's muscles harden.

If Scott ever gets into a ring with Primo Carnera, the physical advantages will be his. He outweighs the Italian by 17 pounds, is 3 1-4 inches taller and with arms 90 inches long, has 10 inches more reach.

It is estimated that 44,000 thunderstorms occur daily on the earth.

LEAFS CLING TO POSITION BY 2 GAMES

Fast - Slipping Royals Keep Toronto Alert

Rochester And Montreal Split Twin Program

(By Orlo Robertson)

The battle lines contracted around the second place play-off berth in the northern division of the International league were drawn a little closer today as the teams entered the final four days of the regular season.

Toronto Maple Leafs still clung to the position by only by the slim margin of one game over the fast travelling Montreal Royals and the equally high-stepping Buffalo Bisons.

	Won	Lost
Toronto	80	62
Montreal	78	62
Buffalo	80	64

The Bisons did much to bring the three teams closer together yesterday by taking their fourth straight game from the Leafs 3-2, while the Royals were splitting a doubleheader with Rochester Red Wings, already "in" as holders of the first place May-ot berth in the northern section.

Bill Geopfert gave the Leafs eight hits but he was effective in the pinches, leaving eight Toronto players stranded on the bases. He was aided also by fine defensive work, four double plays cutting short as many threatening Toronto rallies.

In the Rochester-Montreal twin bill the Red Wings came from behind to win the first game 7-6 with a three-run uprising in the ninth, but in the nightcap the Royals bunched their 11 blows to take an 8-7 decision.

Newark Bears continued to make history at the expense of Jersey City Skeeters, winning a doubleheader 2-1 and 5-3. Don Brennan tested young Stanley Hanlon in the opening contest while Jim Weaver had easy sailing in taking his fifth victory of the season in the second inning nightcap.

Baltimore's double-header at Albany was rained out.

FRANCE SEES NAVY'S VALUE

Premier In Oration At Funeral of Leygues Stresses Seapower

PARIS, Sept. 7.—(AP)—The importance of the French navy for prestige and defence was stressed today by Premier Edouard Daladier in a funeral oration for Georges Leygues, whom he described as the founder of the modern French navy.

Leygues, former Premier and Foreign Minister and Minister of Marine in the Daladier Government, died Saturday after six illness of several weeks at the age of 76. He had been a member of parliament since 1885 and was known as "the Grand Old Man" of the Governpment.

M. Daladier quoted Leygues' favorite saying that "All people who fail to recognize the power of the seas condemn themselves to live outside the great currents of universal life."

The premier added that France is eager for good and substantial reasons to give less attention to her armed forces, but is determined never to waive the duty of the war.

After the state funeral ceremony the invalided body was sent to Villaneuve for burial.

FINAL GRIND BEGINS

New York, Sept. 7 (CP) — In two widely separated Adirondack camps in New Jersey, Barney Ross, new lightweight champion, and Tony Canzoneri, former titleholder who becomes a challenger again in the Polo Grounds in New York next Tuesday night, settled down today to the final drive through their training schedule.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

Pirates once said—"We should worry in something to say, and by favour. He who does well will always have friends.

Such words should always be foremost in the minds of all competitors in the sport world. To the athlete who is away trying and forever giving his best, whether in victory or defeat, the sport world will eventually pay homage. Every sport follower loves a winner but, who was it once said "the loser makes the race"?

No athlete, who plays up and plays the game need drop his head in the face of defeat whatever his teammates do.

On the other hand the athlete during competition who assumes a nonchalant attitude not only mitigates his own efforts but casts reflections on not only the game he supports but also his team mates. Any sport that is worth participating in is surely worth fighting to the utmost for. It is no disgrace to be defeated on the field of sport but the disgrace comes when the athlete or team in defeat cannot assume the same spirit it does in victory.

Yesterday's Picton at Peterboro intermediate play-off game was postponed on account of rain. The Picts now meet the Western managed crew in the first game of the third round, intermediate playdowns, at Picton on Saturday. It is expected by followers of the team that Red Channel, their lanky right hander will start against the Lift Lock intermediates as Channel met with much better success against the Peter Hens; did his pitching mate, "Warpy" Phillips when the Prince Edward County crew played their second game in Peterboro earlier this season.

Manager Art Young of the local Crystalac juniors received word yesterday that his charges were scheduled to play at Willowdale Park, Toronto, on Saturday afternoon. Willowdale Park is situated at the corner of Chatsworth Ave. and St. W. and is the home of the Western City or Y's League which the St. Georges, St. Mary's and other well known Toronto amateur shin bind swap for as many years. Although nothing relative to the umpire question of the series has been approached it is expected that local officials will be used in the first two games. Yesterday's rain stopped a called practice of the local kids on the old side of the field this evening for their final workout before the big series, incidentally the Kingston Tweeds play their return game versus the new Trenton members of Goodyear field the same afternoon. With a week's rest Tommy Jamieson should be able to come back and duplicate his feat of last Saturday. Jamieson restricted the Weathertrop managed crew to four safe blows. Failure to hit in the pinches spelled defeat for the Paniers last Saturday.

Congratulations are the order of the day to "Buster" Whitten, of the Campbellford Maroons. Buster slipped up the ring ropers recently and said "I do" recently. May his married life be as successful as the one he has enjoyed in the hockey world.

Yesterday's rain halted all and sundry efforts of softball. Up in Trenton the Bearcats vs. Trenton Dairy fixture was postponed for 24 hours while the Redmerelle-Victoria Cup game at Marysville will be played next Saturday afternoon.

Don Carman with a score of 167 finished twelfth in the Provincial junior golf championships held at Bramalea Club, Toronto yesterday. The provincial title was won by Dave Henderson of Chatham with a score of 152. Billie Cook, Al. Faulkner, Ted Boyle and Jack Carman were the other youthful golfers from the Bay of Quinte County to participate.

Any lingering hope that the Pittsburg Pirates had of overtaking the New York Giants was squelched yesterday when the teams broke even at Forbes Field, the "Bucs" winning the curtain raiser by 6-5 in ten innings and the Terrymen the host by 5-4 in the finale. Strikeout ex-Leaf was driven from the mound in the first inning of the second game when the league leaders scored five runs.

TEA RESTRICTION

In April a restriction was placed on tea exports from Ceylon, India and Java, in order to raise prices to growers, who, for almost four years, had been suffering devastating losses. Higher prices have resulted, not only at the gardens, but also here on our own markets, and many package teas already cost more than they did six months ago. Some of the finer quality brands are as yet unchanged, however, and are, consequently, even better value than at last April.

Little Bernice Craig entertained at a birthday party on Friday the 25th. About fifteen guests were present to enjoy her ninth birthday. The table was prettily decorated in the sacrament of pink and white. In the centre was the usual birthday cake with candles.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Elliott and family celebrated their 14th wedding anniversary to dinner at her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Searls on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Kelly and Mr. and Mrs. S. Townsend and Mr. and Mrs. H. Townsend spent Sunday the 27th, with their aunt, Mrs. M. A. Tummon, Wallbridge, in honor of her 82nd birthday.

Mr. F. Foster, Moira and granddaughter, Miss Rotcheson, called on Mr. S. Bell on Thursday of last week. Mr. Foster will be ninety years old next month and is enjoying the best of health.

Mr. S. Elliott has been in very poor health during the past few days.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Evans and son are returning to their home in Belleville, after spending the summer on their farm (better known as the old Bushell place).

Mr. and Mrs. M. Robson entertained at a kitchen shower on Thursday night in honor of Mr. E. Hough's and Miss L. Sutherland's approaching marriage.

Mrs. F. Kelly had her two sisters, the Misses Sutherland of Centenary visiting her during the past two weeks.

Many attended Homerdale Camp meetings on Sunday last.

Miss N. Hagerman spent a few days last week with her cousin, Miss V. Hoe.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Wannemaker and family of Demorestville, visited his brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. F. Carter on Sunday.

Mr. W. Hannah spent the week end with his brother-in-law, Mr. F. Wannamaker.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Cadman visited friends at Stoco recently.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Carter were guests of the latter's sister, Mr. and Mrs. J. Evans on Sunday.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

NEW YORK TORONTO WINNIPEG

Senior Golds Stocks Preserve Strong Front In Face of Easier Tone of New York and Other Commodity and Share Markets — Nickel and Base Metal Shares Decline Slightly — New York Drifts Lazily Along, Trading Interest at Lowest

STANDARD EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 7 (CP). The Standard Market Index numbers along rather heavily today, reflecting weakness in New York stock and grain markets, and showing more weakness than appears in general. Some of the senior golds shares presented a firm front. Thirtyfive climbed to a new high and then receded to show a small loss of 25 cents at $36. Volume was only fair.

Intermediate base metal shares slipped moderately. Nickel weakening to 30.80 for a net loss of 45 cents but Mond did better, retaining a small advance at $36, cents, Bunkedoge.

Base Metals Corporation lost six cents, Hudvalleys 8, and Rhoden Bay held steady.

WINNIPEG WHEAT MARKET

Winnipeg, Sept. 7 (CP)—Apart from a little flurry in the opening minutes trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange during the holiday hour was dull and featureless. At mid-session, values were unchanged to one cent higher.

Export business was very disappointing and there was little in the way of hedging to hold prices at bottom levels. After opening unchanged to 1c higher, values worked back to the previous close and traded in a narrow range at a standstill.

October wheat held at the "pegged" price of 70¾, December at 71⅞ and May at 77⅛.

The pit was almost deserted. Only an occasional order developed. The cash wheat near the close was ⅝ to 1.3d higher.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept. 7. — (CP) — Narrow recessions all along the line developed today on the Toronto Stock Exchange, sending the slow to the early session and a little speedier in the afternoon but a little time dig the market show definite strength. Selling pressure at no time was absent and losses were limited. Interlisted stocks were firm throughout the session. Nickel closed off 45 to 30.80, Steelmers dropped 1 to 32, Hollinger 10 to 9.50, Noranda C.P.R. a full point to 16 1-2 and Ford of Canada 1-2 to 14 1-2.

Walker's Common held its loss down to a half point, closing at 46.

NEW YORK MARKET

New York, Sept. 7—Financial markets drifted lazily over placid trading today with trading interest at the lowest ebb in the past several months.

Stocks, while dull and usually alert, held to a fairly steady course most of the day. Commercial flurries broke the monotony of generally silent sidelines. There was little news which might have stimulated the trend. Bonds did little.

Aside from Dome Mines and Moffatt Creek, which were moderately higher, Canadian stocks did little.

International Nickel was a trifle lower and Canadian Pacific unchanged. Canadian Marconi was active, however, and closed with a decisive ¼ of a point. The Canadian dollar was unchanged at 86¼ cents.

BRADLEY SENT UP

Campbell's Bay, Que., Sept. 7 — (CP)—Michael Bradley, Allumette Island farmer, was formally committed today for trial at the Criminal Assizes of the Superior Court for the slaying of five members of the Joseph Bradley family. Commitment was made by Magistrate Roland Millar following preliminary hearing today.

RECOVERY IN BRITAIN SEEN

M. P. Tuteur, of Premier Vacuum Cleaner Co. Returns

Few men have travelled more extensively through Britain on business promotion within Canada and between Canada and England, than does M. P. Tutenr, Managing Director of the Premier Vacuum Cleaner Co., Limited. He has just returned from a trip which has taken him to all his Company offices from Coast to Coast, following immediately on his return from a visit to Britain, where he viewed the Canadian export situation of his Company.

He brings back to Canada with him a heartening picture, "Great Britain," said Mr. Tutenr, today, "is wonderfully solid. She is manifesting splendid courage in her industrial reconstruction and progress. The conditions that this side can never for a moment doubt her future, nor, for that matter, the future of the Commonwealth as a whole, patriotically integrated Empire.

Immediately on my return from the London deliberations, there is no question but that Great Britain and the Dominion were drawn closer together than before. This, coupled with the fact that the complementary diversity of materials and products insure for each member nation a growing prosperity, the foundations of which, I firmly believe, are already being encouragingly built on. Mr. Bennett pointed to this recently when he observed that World agreements would not in any way weaken or affect the foundations laid a year ago at Ottawa.

Mr. Tutenr finds this same spirit of optimism prevailing throughout Canada. He is convinced that the will to go forward in the face of hazards of living is indomitably strong and will overcome all barriers to a surging recovery.

"In particular as regards Ontario," Mr. Tutenr said, "I am convinced that brighter and more active business is not only here now, but that within a reasonable period we may expect, if not the boom days of 1929, at least a good deal of prosperity and we are backing the conviction up by immediate factory expansion."

Livestock

Toronto, Sept.—7.—(CP)— There were 1,200 cattle held over from Wednesday on the Toronto Junction Cattle Market. Early trading was dull at the opening with quotation of another large holdover. There were no calves received. Hogs opened unsettled, lambs were steady. There were no sheep offered.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were:—cattle 150, no calves, 1,200 hogs, sheep and lambs 501.

A few minimum to good weights steers sold at $2.00 to $4.00. Good western stockers brought $3.00 to $3.10.

Hogs opened unsettled with packers bidding $4.35 for the bacon $6.60 off truck and $6.85 off car. Sales, however, were made at $4.50 with culls and bucks at $4.50. Sheep were scarce.

FIRST NIGHT IN FILMLAND

"Barbarian" Unusual Type of Play With Ramon Novarro in Leading Role at Capitol

Ramon Novarro in a somewhat different role delighted audience at the Capitol last evening in "The Barbarian" a story of the English girl's adventures in the valley of the Nile. Novarro's beautiful tenor singing voice and his equally soft and appealing personality, always blended in perfectly with one's romantic mood during the singing of Arabian love songs makes one recall his early operations towards fame.

"The Barbarian" is the familiar story of a Arab's love for an English girl and his flight with her across the desert, treated in a novel and unusual way. Novarro a princely dragoman is a native of the Continent, fellow who makes English feminine visitors to Egypt feel sentimental and benevolent to the dragoman's material advantage.

Vivian Duncan is cast as the fiance of Reginald Denny, the dragoman makes a very grand job of fascinating the young English girl. Miss Loy plays this role with dignity while Reginald Denny is splendid as her conventional fiance. Edward Arnold Smith as Duncan's uncle and/the downright and uncompromising Louise Closser Hale as her companion add many delightful moments to the play.

With her fiance off to inspect an engineering work, Myrna takes a steamboat down the Nile, runs into trouble at the hands of a scheming Arab and only to find herself in the Dragoman's power. He takes her to his native home from which she also escapes and after all these adventures finally finds the Arab's true bearings and leaves Reginald Denny a jilted bridegroom.

The scenes are lovely and add much to the enjoyment of the play. A funny comedy with Leon Errol and a Newsreel are included in the program.

German War Flier in City, Member of Famous Circus Tells Scribe of War Days

Theodore Kreis, Unheralded, Drops In On Belleville

ATTACK METHOD

Tells How Canadian Sergeant Brought Him Down

Theodore Kreis, late of Cologne, Germany, flew and fought for nearly four years on the Western front in the Great War as a crack combat pilot with the famed Richthofen flying circus, downed 17 allied aviators in their machines, and was himself sent crashing in a flaming plane near Ballieul, France, in the fall of 1917 by a lucky incendiary bullet from the gun of a young French pilot of his first solo flight over the lines. Canadian artillerymen from a nearby battery who saw him crash hastily dug him out of the wreckage of the flaming plane, scorched and unconscious, and packed him off to a concentration prison camp near Le Havre, where his active war career was ended. Such were the fortunes of war.

Last evening, an unannounced visitor to the city at this hike from Toronto where he attended the Exhibition, this gallant veteran of many a hot dog-fight in the blue skies above France, brought back vivid recollections of those hectic war days when men were killed so easily far above the earth. He hovered from the drizzle of rain in the streets in a local fire station during his brief stop over on his trip east where he will commence another lap of his world journeyings on foot, Kreis told his story:

A Boy in 1914

He was but a boy when that great call on Germany's manhood came, but recruiting officers winked an eye and passed him when he flung his school books down and applied at the reserve barracks in Cologne for enlistment. Followed intensive training at the various arts of war. Then a finishing school at Frankfurt where embryo officers were received. A short term of training in gunnery and he was graduated from the school a qualified Herr Lieutenant of a field battery. In the first battles of Mons his battery did yeoman service. He himself was mentioned in despatches, while his fellow officers were awarded for higher honors.

"But, I didn't like gunnery," he explains. "I didn't like the mud and dirt and the everlasting trenches and dead bodies. I liked the pilots of the planes which flew above us—so I became one."

In the air service his viewpoint on war underwent a change.

"Before, with the field troops, we were taught to hate and kill—no matter how—just kill. But here it was different. Here we learned that those who flew were fellow gentlemen. We fought, yes, but cleanly. We asked for no quarter in the air—but often we got it."

Tragedies in Air

He related tales of jammed machine guns on planes far above the earth, and of conked motors, while pilots sat helpless in useless machines, spotted for an easy kill by swooping enemy aviators. But not often did they indulge in the sport of shooting at a sitting bird; generally the victorious airman would recognize the helpless plight of the fellow aviator and after waving cheerily down at him, would scoot toward their own lines, leaving the

PRINCESS GUARDED

PRINCESS CARAVITA

A special police guard has been brought to guard Princess Don Francisco Caravita, the former Janet Bowden, New York oil heiress, following the receipt of kidnap threats against her. The threats were disclosed at South Poland, Me., where the princess has been living with her mother, Mrs. Walter S. Bowden, since her separation from her royal husband after five days of married life.

cripped plane to limp home as best it could. Such compliments were generally returned on both sides. Kreis' took pains to explain.

Three times, he said, he could have shot down helpless enemy aviators whose controls had either stuck, or whose guns had jammed and on all three occasions he had flown off without a parting shot. Once his own life was spared by the pilot of a Canadian machine which, his oil line burst in a dog fight and forced him to glide to his own lines for a landing. This was in the earlier days of the war.

War of Hate

Then came a new order of things. Chivalry to the air died in the war of hate and competition of pilots to secure a string of victories. Young and green pilots, rushed through air schools and sent aloft with new planes, developed itchy trigger fingers. It became every man for himself. Often helpless airmen were ridden with bullets before a burst of machine gun fire when they had no chance. The pleasant custom of decorating the vanquished airman's grave with flower wreaths dropped from the victorious enemy plane even died out of fashion.

For nearly a year Kreis was attached to the flaming-hued "flying circus" of Baron Richthofen.

"As a flier he was an excellent one, but as a fighter he was somewhat overrated," stated Kreis.

By sheer force of numbers during the earlier days of the war the circus was able to sweep opposing planes from the sky, and by well rehearsed cunning tactics, Richthofen himself was able to pile up an imposing string of victories.

"But, it was not often that Richthofen himself met any airman in battle on equal footing," added Kreis. "Generally the odds against the allied plane was very great. Richthofen always played safe."

Lurked Above Cloud Banks

His favorite method of attack, it was explained was to lurk high above the cloud banks and suddenly pounce on the unsuspecting and unprepared patrols far below. Generally he was accompanied and flanked by several of his own planes when he dove to attack and then a few bursts from the blazing twin-mounted Spandaus on Richthofen's machine, and two or three more easy victories would be chalked up. Straight hand-to-hand combats in the air were generally avoided by the leader of the "circus."

During the latter part of his war service Kreis carried the marks and scars of a half dozen separate wounds from stray "Archie" shell splinters and machine gun bullets. One of the closest calls he ever had was when a burning observation balloon he had ignited on the Vimy front with a few rounds of phosphorous bullets, almost fouled his plane as it gushed past him in a roaring flame. The second time was when a string of "flaming onions" fired from an anti-aircraft gun scorched the "dope" off one wing of the plane when they passed too close to the machine—and the third narrow escape was when the grizzled Canadian gunnery sergeant dug him from his crashed plane in an unconscious condition at Ballieul. As the only stimulant handy to bring him around, a large bite of strong chewing tobacco was forced into his mouth by the same sergeant to revive him. It was the first chewing tobacco he had ever tasted!

After the War

Following the signing of the armistice Kreis, still but a youth, was sent back to the homeland where he took up the threads of peace time existence in the dreary monotony of factory work as an apprentice machinist in a large plant in Cologne. But peace time quietness palled quickly. The drone of lathes and the slap or belting could not be likened to the thrilling drone of an airplane engine or the scream of wind through the rigging of a combat plane. So he promptly doffed overalls for a pair of hiking breeches and stout boots and set out to see the world. Twelve years ago he left Cologne. Since then he has travelled through every principal country. A linguist extraordinary, a typical soldier of fortune, nearly six foot of strapping, fair-haired youth, he presents the perfect picture of a fighting adventurer. Not often he confesses is he stumped for a meal or lodging. He makes friends wherever he goes. "Boredom," he says, "is dangerous. Keep on the move is my motto."

From Belleville he is on the way east to some eastern port where he will book a boat for Germany and Cologne to visit distant relatives for a short time before commencing another trip that will take him to Australia, perhaps, or South America.

"Archi" he stated with the only German mannerisms that survive, "That flying of planes and shooting each other down was a game. There was no meanness whatsoever. the pilots are all fine fellows. Your Canadian men were the best."

During the brief interview, the strong nervous hands of Kreis strayed to an inner coat pocket from which a small pad of paper and a pencil was brought forth. Then with short rapid strokes of the pencil while he talked he drew several pictures and personable caricatures of his listeners. From a large haversack he also produced a display of many larger charcoal portraits of a number of mayors and public officials in leading Canadian and United States cities. An autograph album also diverted Canada to be filled with the signatures of celebrities and personages throughout the continent. Through high hi's Kreis have long ago been unused to the joyride of a plane, their cleverness now carries him where he will simply by trading portraits for food and clothing.

58 POUND LUNGE CAUGHT AT TWEED

A report has just reached the office of the Ontario Intelligencer regarding a tremendous lunge caught near Tweed last Saturday afternoon.

Two American tourists arrived at the village and decided to rent a cottage. They finally made arrangements to take one but as it was not to be vacated until around seven p.m. they rented a boat and started to fish in that part of the Moira River where it is crossed by the C.P.R. bridge.

They only started to troll a few minutes when they hooked the fish. In the excitement the boat was capsized and the line caught around one of the men's legs. He was dragged about a hundred feet into shallow water. Here he obtained his footing and after a great struggle dragged the lunge to the bank where it was despatched.

It was immediately weighed and tipped the scales at 58 pounds.

The gentlemen immediately packed the fish into a box of ice and left that night for their home. What a story to tell to their friends!

The beautiful African antelopes know as bongos have vertical white stripes on their sides, and strangely enough these stripes are unequal in number on opposite sides.

Deer Coaxed from His Rocky Ledge

Watkins Glen, N.Y., Sept. 6 (AP)—Watkins Glen lost its latest attraction Wednesday with the departure of its celebrated deer from the rocky ledge it had occupied for the past ten days.

Scorning the temporary and camouflaged bridge that had been erected for its exit, the deer, under the gentle urging of two park employees made its way cautiously down the precipitous bank into the stream that flows through the glen, crossed to the opposite side, jumped to lly enough these stripes are unequal in number on opposite sides. side of the ravine, and headed for the nearby woods, where it was soon lost to sight.

WILL RENOVATE CEMETERY AT CARRYING PLACE

Ratepayers of District Hold Meeting in School

CARRYING PLACE — Mr. and Mrs. Frank Quackenbush, accompanied by Miss Allison Hazlburn, Mr. Jim Quackenbush and Mr. Sam Germain, motored to Toronto, during the earlier part of the week to return Mr. German to his home there, and to see the Canadian National Exhibition. After a very pleasant visit and trip, they returned on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Bingley and party of Cornwall, are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Le Tiec at the Le Tiec home here. Asked by the correspondent of the effects of the disastrous fire and windstorm which recently visited Cornwall, Mr. Bingley stated that the damage was undoubtedly very great; but added that in his opinion it was the best thing that ever happened to the town, since many unsightly old buildings were fast falling into decay and ruin were destroyed by the fire and are now being replaced with modern architecture. It was an ill wind, and an ill fire in this case, but already its good effects are noticeable.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hambleton entertained friends from Rochester, over the week-end. Miss Gertrude Hambleton of Toronto is also holidaying at her home here along with Miss Grace Hambleton.

Meeting in the school on Thursday evening was quite a large number of interested ratepayers listened to the remarks of Mr. Holler of Wellington anent the renovation of the cemetery here. Already a considerable number of people have formed a committee for the purpose of putting the burial property into a more attractive shape, and several cash donations have been received. At the meeting, on Thursday none disagreement arose over the question of how this work might be employed; and as a line of writing definite arrangement has been made. The cemetery here is an old one and is filled with remains of some of the first settlers of eastern Ontario.

Miss Marjorie and Mr. George Innes spent Sunday with their parents Mr. and Mrs. Nate Innes.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Campbell and Douglas called on Mr. and Mrs. Norrington on Thursday evening.

Miss Ethel Hodge was hostess at a delightful corn roast bag on the canal bank near the lock office on Friday evening. A large number of local young people attended and a jolly time was had. This is the second roast held in the community this month, and as many people from current comments, many are hoping that it will not be the last.

Miss Helen Miller and Mr. Don Chase of Trenton, were guests for the week of Mr. and Mrs. Will Le Tour. Mr. Chase, who plays in the field for the Trenton Dairy team of Trenton, journeys to Trenton on Friday evening, where the Trenton Dairy-Delaney Bearcat fracas, and has been promised to be a real old time winning team. Many from this neighbourhood have been following up this series, and are expected to turn out in full force for the next and decisive game.

Speaking to Mr. Bill Weese of Detroit, who is visiting at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Maude Simmerman, here, regarding the race for the Harmsworth Trophy between Gar Wood of Detroit, the American "Gray Ghost" and Sir Henry Segrave ten years holder of the trophy, and Mr. Hubert Scott-Paine, the British challenger, Mr. Weese says that at least one Detroiter is giving Scott-Paine the edge to win. This is a significant fact in view of the radically different construction of the two boats. Wood's craft weighing five tons, towers over the small British entry of less than two tons; yet the cabby-shaped Miss Britain which is designed to skim over the top of the water was favoured by many to outdistance the heavier Miss America which by virtue of its weight must plow through and not over the waves. By the time this appears in print, the challenge will be met, be settled.

Mr. and Mrs. George Brown and Harry motored nearly to Niagara Falls last Wednesday through the fruit district and returned with a small quantity of the fruit. Mr. Brown reports that prices are high as yet and that the peach crop is only fairly good.

Local anglers are beginning to sit up and take notice. Last Monday an American fisherman trolling in Consecon Bay landed a 30-pound muskie, while numerous others are reporting good catches of pike and bass. Mr. Harold Herrington hooked a nice six-pound lunge in the same waters a few days ago, and it has been the successful lake. It begins to seem that the fish season is on.

Misses Lela and Zelda Black with their father, Mr. Will Black returned on Monday last from the World's Fair at Chicago. Making the trip by train, they report a very enjoyable visit, and state that the variety and diversity of interesting sights to be seen there is truly wonderful. Zelda Black, nurse-in-training at Kingston General Hospital, is returning to be with them there.

Master Jimmie Quackenbush has been visiting friends in Trenton for several days.

A large number from this community attended the Redneyville, Consecon game at Consecon on Thursday evening.

Mr. Oliver Greig has his car in running order once more after rebuilding the top structure following his accident a few weeks ago.

GREATEST CARSMAN SINCE HANLON WINS WORLD TITLE

Never since the days of the immortal Ned Hanlon has the world produced such a magnificent sculler as Bobby Pearce, Australian, Canadian. In the match race for the world's professional sculling title, held at Toronto before 100,000 people, Pearce overwhelmed the defending champion, Ted Phelps, of England, by over a quarter of a mile in a 3-mile race.

CELEBRATE 35TH ANNIVERSARY OF WEDDING

On Thursday, August 31st, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Frost of Frankford, observed the 35th anniversary of their marriage, at the home of their daughter, Mrs. A. J. Jaques, 5th Concession of Sidney.

Mrs. Frost was born in Frankford and is the youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Beatty. Mr. Frost was born in Rawdon Township and was the youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Frost. They were married in Frankford, by the late Rev. J. W. Johnston. Following their marriage they farmed in Murray Township for 30 years, then moved to Frankford.

Many congratulations were beautifully decorated with flowers and in the dining-room the color scheme was white. A bountiful dinner was served by their family to the guests.

Another daughter, Mrs. Maurice Herrington and one son, Leslie Frost also assisted in looking after the guests. They were grandchildren also with them on their day of celebration.

Barrett laughed delightedly. "Thanks," he said.

"The signs are right!... Streeter assured him, bowing from the doorway.

When Barrett left a half hour later it was with the consciousness that he was to be married to Elinor Stafford at noon the following day. He had shrieks to tell, a honeymoon to see and a ring to buy,—no two rings to buy. Her room must be arranged in his house. Her room —the one that servants would not inspect how things were.

It was a bit upsetting to realize that within 24 hours he was to be married to a girl with whom he must masquerade every sign of affection, a girl whom he could not respect as he should, a girl who did not love him and whom he did not love.

As soon as he had reached home he said sharply, "Hagstar, get Mrs. Radnor on the telephone for me, please."

Mercia, he knew, could direct him to someone who would make Elinor's room as attracting as it should be. He was determined that everything should be made pleasant for the girl during the few days which together they must make the world believe their lie.

Marcia was amazed. She repeated again and again that she was "so happy" for Barrett. He heard her chattering, excited comment and, after he had put down the telephone again, paused thoughtfully. All this was not going to be entirely easy.

Then, hurrying to the hall, he picked up his hat and set out once more. He had to see Arthur Palmer who was both a personal friend and the clergyman of the church she Olivias had attended for years.

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

Twenty minutes later Palmer, a pleasantly athletic type of man with keen, kind eyes, rose from behind, a littered desk. "What's up?" he asked. "Another trip to Gotham?"

"Better than that!" Barrett answered, dropping his hat and gloves to the one clearest space on the desk. "Will you marry me to-morrow at noon?"

"Will I? Great hat! Of course I will. Who's the girl?"

Barrett sat down and told him. "Know her?" he asked.

His old friend pondered slowly. "I know of her," he said. "I've always looked you, Barry, as one of the finest men I know but I'm darned if you aren't lucky. I've never understood how Mary Stafford could be the sort of girl she is. She hasn't had much to help her but she's beautiful inside as well as out. I'm glad for you, Barrett,—"

"Thanks awfully."

"Did it happen suddenly?"

"Rather."

"And for her, too, I suppose?"

"She seems to think I'm all right." Barrett answered, thinking, "I also did I might play the credulous fool again but—she doesn't."

Arthur Palmer wondered whether Elinor Stafford knew of the existence of his friend's ward and the truth of that matter. He hoped so. Otherwise the facts could so easily be misunderstood and lead to difficulties. He had seen Gerald at Barrett's funeral. He had helped Barrett find a new home for the youngster and had been struck by the fact that she bore no resemblance to Barrett so closely.

Arthur Palmer considered speaking of all this but dismissed the thought. He would mention it later, he decided.

"Soon, you said?" he asked, flipping the leaves of an engagement book.

"Yes, if that suits you."

"Great hat, you know you can have the wedding when you want it! I'd do anything to make other members sigh. Want to be married in the church?"

"I would," Barrett said slowly, "if that's what she wants."

"Why not telephone her?" Palmer suggested, pushing the instrument forward.

Barrett called the number.

CHAPTER 23

Elinor's voice came over the wire a trifle unsteadily. "Yes, Barrett?" she said.

"Dearest, Art Palmer—I mean Doctor Palmer—" he corrected himself immediately, "wants to know whether you want to be spliced—I think is the way he put it."

Her voice trembled even more. It was the way he had said "Dearest."

"I'd like it very much if you would."

"I'd like it very much anywhere," he assured her. He added, "If everything going along as it should!" He could not deny the tenderness he felt for her. After all, the situation she was facing would be difficult for any girl.

"Oh, yes" she assured him. "Quite certain!"

"Quite."

"May I drive in this evening? There are a few things I want to talk about."

"Please do."

"Then —until this evening, dearest," he said with a note which he heard her half-whispered, "Goodbye."

Arthur Palmer was studying a paper knife which he twisted in his hands. He had known Barrett Colvin for many years and now he was worried. Barrett's home life sounded artificial and forced. Arthur Palmer wanted the marriage to be a success. They both deserved that it should be. But a marriage hadn't much chance, he knew, he had learned from bearing the troubles of the married as her did almost every day.

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

It snowed during the night as Elinor lay wakeful. Just before dawn she slept, to open her eyes at nine on a day that was clear, cold and bright. Celeste was standing at her bedside, smiling tenderly. For a moment Elinor wondered at Celeste's presence and at her smile. Then it came back. The truth which was not a dream. And with the truth came full consciousness of the ordeal before her.

"It is a beautiful day, this day of your marriage!" Celeste waltzed. Celeste was happy about the wedding. Only the French can blend emotion and calculation without unpleasing of either!

Elinor sat up, hugging her knees and staring at a window which framed a square of the glittering world. She would go to the church at 12 to meet Barrett Colvin. They would be married. Then she would go with him to his house and this servant girl the presence that must endure for a year. Hey father would have everything he needed, her cousin, Philip, his rightful share; her aunt and uncle, an almost-forgotten pair, and their sons the chance they so deserved. The Thames world accept a share of the money from her, Elinor was certain.

Celeste was humming her bath. An almost overpoweringly sweet scent floated to Elinor from the room that was filling with steam. Celeste had evidently borrowed boldly from one of the many Venetian glass bottles standing on the opposite wall shelves of her mother's dressing room.

"Something old" and something new, something borrowed and something blue," chanted Celeste, returning.

Elinor laughed. "But I haven't anything that isn't old, Celeste!" she admitted.

Celeste had considered that, she confessed, nodding. She had slipped out to buy a handkerchief and if Mademoiselle would deign to carry that it would be new.

Celeste then reached into a pocket of her pert, small apron. Elinor took the offering, a pretty bit of cob-web linen, bead-trimmed and embroidered with a bold "E. S."

"It was sweet of you, Celeste!" exclaimed Elinor. Her mother had had no thought of her. She had been thinking of how much Barrett would do to make up for his treachery since the will.

"Last night I added the letters," old Celeste. "Ah, and while I was thought of you—thinking of your sweetheart!"

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

Elinor flushed. "True, she had thought of the one Celeste called "her sweetheart" most of the night but not as Celeste had guessed.

"I shall keep the handkerchief always Celeste" she said.

"I am so grateful to you and I'm going to show it to Mr. Colvin."

"Ah, Mademoiselle, you are so sweet! I dream that some day I may be in your service!"

"I would like nothing better, Celeste. I'll remember that," Elinor promised.

Even Lida felt an unwonted thawing when Elinor appeared at half past 11 from her father's room. She had been sitting silently by his bed, her hand on his weak hand. Her eyes red while Elinor said at her.

Leaving him, stooping above him she has heard him murmur, "My blessings—dearest!"

Lida saw Elinor's wet eyes but what struck her more acutely was Elinor's pallor and her evident fatigue.

"You should have something to eat," she broke out sharply, "that old coat and dress—"

"They do."

"I presume they'll have to. The car is waiting."

"Yes. I'm ready—if you are."

"Quite."

Elinor was lovely in spite of her shabbiness, Lida saw, and for the first time she felt the girl's beauty without envy. Elinor had a strange, gentle since that terrible night. Lida, hating Elinor, would slowly knew how to tell her that she wish.. by things had been different.

"Your flowers are exquisite," said Elinor as she paused before the message, an artful blending of spring blossoms which Jag been chosen, after great thought, by Barrett. "But those roses—" she ended, brows knitted questioningly.

"Father gave them to me when Barrett were gone," Lida said. Every inch of the ride she saw the chauffeur stowing her bags in the rear of the coupe. Perhaps because that action had made it clear that she was not coming home again, that she was going to live in Gotham Colvin's house as a "guest" of course. But it was definite step, none the less; an extraordinary step for Lida. What else could she have done? She could not deny those claims —all of whom she loved—the advantages that would come to them through her marriage.

As she had done perhaps a thousand times before she told herself that she was doing the right thing. She must not, she repeated, let this hurt Barrett in any way. He had been very fine about it. Per contrast she would have felt about the will as he felt.

She saw the spire of the church ahead of them, outlined through a gap in towering buildings.

"We're almost there," Lida said.

Elinor felt her cheeks sting. She slipped a glove from her left hand. The left hand. As he had brought her a ring that had made Lida's eyes glitter with envy. It held a large, flawless diamond set simply, beautifully. Elinor had not once thought of an engagement ring. The need of it was obvious, however, she realized, and a part of the pretense. A moment, a few moments more, and that same finger would bear another ring. She drew a deep breath, hoping that it would steady her.

Then she saw Bessie and Jim and the boys, waiting for them. Bessie was beaming and al the same time worrying.

"Darling child!" said Bessie unsteadily as she moved toward Elinor.

"Well, well!" murmured Jim. He was pumping her hand up and down.

"I presume we may as well go to—" Lida suggested with a wary, ironic smile. Bessie's display of emotion was simply too frightful.

It was, of course, the sort of display to be expected from a creature whose house was habitually scrubbed with cabbage and other odors from what Bessie called "plain, nourishing foods." In all thoroughly revolting to Lida.

She saw that Elinor was clinging to her aunt's warm, pudgy, unglovedhand. Lida hated clinging to something that had once been a heart. Her hatred dully with,out knowing why.

The verger opened the door and the group made their way into the church vestibule.

CHAPTER 24

In the vestibule Barrett waited with Reed Hadnor. Dick was nervous, having felt Marcia in tears. She wept so easily these days, wept when nothing at all had happened to make her unhappy.

Barrett looked as if he would gladly have given $1000 for a deep sniff of a cigaret. He had never been, he realized, more shaken or uncertain of himself. But when he saw Elinor he forgot himself. She had lost color and her smile was pained, she was lovely, as always. Truly and beautifully lovely. He moved toward her quickly to draw her away from the group to a small, dimly lit alcove at the side but was prevented by Lida's sharp, ironic words.

"He be not the only one who hath remarked your manner toward her," insisted Sir Richard. Blake laughed. "Why, you're crazy. The Princess is a mighty sweet kid, but she can't see me for distance." "Enough of thy outlandish speech I gather," retorted Richard, "to understand thy meaning, James, but I am unconvinced. The eyes of the Princess seldom leave thee when thou art upon thy horse."

"Run along and sell your papers," admonished Blake. "For this, Sir Malud would put thee out of the way," continued Sir Richard. "Because I know one, if given for I have learned to like thee well, my friend." Blake arose and came around the end of the table. "You're a good old scout, Richard," my boy" he said placing his hand affectionately upon the other's shoulder, but forget the worrying. I am not dead—yet."

"Does Prince Gobred favor Malud's suit?" asked Blake after a pause. "Why not?" asked Richard, "for he is a powerful knight. He has a great castle and fully a hundred men-at-arms." "Are there no other knights so powerful in all the great valley?" Norse save Bohun," said Richard, lowering his voice, "but we seldom speak of him, though he still harbors a king. Perhaps I should tell thee why." "Go ahead," said Blake, "dish up the dirt."

BIG PUSH IN BETTER-TIMES DRIVE NEARS

President Roosevelt Is Gathering Forces For Action

COAL SQUABBLE

Public Opinion To Be Directed Against Reneggers

(By Sam Robertson)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—President Roosevelt appeared today to be gathering forces for the big push in his better-times drive.

Refreshed after a brief vacation on sea and on land, the vigorous United States President generally surveyed accomplishments and failures of the National Recovery Act as a lengthy night conference with Colonel Hugh Johnston, his chief Recovery Administrator. As Johnston left the White House at an early hour this morning authoritative reports went around that Roosevelt had decided more action, more pressure was needed to set Recovery under full sail.

Coal operators and Union leaders, bickering over details of a bigger wage and shorter working-hours code for the bituminous branch of the industry, were to feel the first lash of the Roosevelian whip.

Johnston announced a code written by him would be handed the coal-squabblers today. They would have until six p.m. Friday to fyle objections.

Direct Public Opinion

It also became known the NRA administration was laying plans for directing public opinion against employers to compel re-employment under the blue eagle, symbol of the Recovery drive. Those directing the drive have shown impatience the past week at the slowness of accomplishments.

Reports have reached official Washington that the number of employers displaying the blue eagle is far out of proportion with the number of new jobs believed to have been created. Steps towards liberation of conditions for bargaining under formulation today. With money flowing more freely, thus removing a complaint from business that finances are inadequate to permit joining in the drive, the administration would be in better position to insist that Recovery pledges be carried out to the utmost.

POLAR BEARS DROWN THREE BLACK BEARS

Mixed Bathing in Milwaukee Zoo Proves Fatal

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Edmund Seifert, zoo director when resignation is demanded because polar bears in his zoo drowned three black bears, defends his "mixed swimming party" by declaring that in the Milwaukee zoo there is a lion which loves a bear.

If it isn't love, it's at least good natured tolerance. Bear and lion get along famously in the same cage.

Those grumbles and snarls are just amiable banter, the director insists.

The mixed animal experiment was brought to public attention when the powerful polars on three occasions grabbed little black bears and held their heads under water.

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS

Cincinnati, Sept. 7 (CP)—Mrs. Rose Dailiba watched her daughter being married before the altar of St. Mary's Church. After the ceremony the bride turned to her mother to give her a kiss but just as she did so Mrs. Dailiba dropped dead of a heart attack. Physicians said excitement killed her.

Bend, Ore., Sept. 7 (CP)—Exchange of a large bell calf became his clothes for children and tendons for potatoes was announced by the Crook County Commission.

The elk chased children and tore down farm fences to steal potatoes a report said.

New York, Sept. 7 (CP)—A wave of economy has hit municipal court and it looks as though the justices will have dirty hands. The budget director has ruled that they can have only one clean towel every two weeks, instead of one a week.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 7 (CP)—Wife and Socks put up a brisk battle in the second bout of the benefit amateur boxing show — but the only one injured was the Fincham, second. Between rounds Joe ventured to prove that it hard is quicker than the eye by removing a piece of iron from one of the boxer's gloves without being seen. The theory worked. So quickly did the hand—and the iron move that the iron struck Joe in the eye.

NEGRO IS HELD

Montgomery, Ala, Sept. 7.—(AP)—A hunt for two negroes accused of attacking a society girl after beating and robbing her escort spread over Central Alabama today as word of the arrest of a negro in another attack came from Prattville, 18 miles from Montgomery.

HURRICANE AND FLOOD DAMAGE IN HAVANA

Two scenes in Havana after the hurricane that swept Cuba, causing the loss of nearly 100 lives and doing property damage estimated in the millions. Bloody Solution Alone to End Impasse in Cuba, Bitter Factions at Work

Conservative Groups See U. S. Intervention As Solution

ARMY PROBLEM

Tendency To Backtrack Seen In Army Circles

(By J. P. McKnight, Copyright 1933 by the Associated Press)

Havana, Sept. 7.—Cuba's turbulent situation had reached an impasse today for which "no one saw any but a bloody solution.

The Leftist administration continued on the surface to be optimistic their coup d'etat of Tuesday would be successful and declared order would be maintained and there would be no American intervention.

But all sections of more conservative opposition groups saw intervention as an accomplished fact unless an abrupt change came in the tense situation.

Among these latter factions were members of the A.B.C. secret society, the followers of former President Mario G. Menocal, and a considerable part of another important revolutionary body, the O.G.R.R., among whom fears of a counter revolution were expressed.

In the face of this acute crisis the administration—a five man junta set up after soldiers, sailors and national police ousted commissioned officers and obtained the resignation of President de Cespedes' month-old provisional government—courageously called head-on its most dangerous problems.

It secretly resolved to disarm all civilians and began to try to restore to their former positions officers ousted Monday night and Tuesday morning.

During the present crisis, it is generally believed these men will not give up their weapons unless forced to do so.

The army problem was even more difficult. It was learned last night that a considable difference of opinion obtains in the rank and file of the army regarding the wisdom of their coup, and a disposition of several detachments to backtrack, to recall the deposed officers, and to ask the restoration of the de Cespedes government was expressed.

Military units at Camp Columbia, origin of the movement for a "purely revolutionary government," at San Ambrosio barracks, and at Camagney were reported divided on the course of events.

It was considered significant that Colonel Fulgencio Batista, leader in the anti-Cespedes revolt, and others of the executive committee now in power refused to give out the total number of officers subject to re-instatement or any of their names.

EACH GOV'T TO BEAR THIRD LABOR COST

Abandonment of Direct Relief Indicated by Agreement

TORONTO, Sept. 7.—With the Ontario Cabinet giving its approval yesterday to entering into the new Dominion-Provincial relief works program, under which each Government undertakes to contribute one-third of the total spent by municipalities in wages on such works, the way is paved for the abandonment—to a degree, at least —of the direct relief system, and the embarkation on Province-wide plans of unemployment relief construction.

"The Dominion and the Province have agreed that they will each pay a percentage not to exceed 33 1-3 per centum of the direct labor cost of the construction of municipal works and undertakings carried out to provide work for the unemployed. The remainder of said direct labor cost, and all costs of administration, materials, supplies, tools or equipment, is to be assumed and paid by the municipality.

TRANSIENT FOUND ON TRACK PARALYZED

Brockville, Sept. 7.—This morning Sergeant L. G. Walton of the C.N.R. police and R.C.M.P. Constable Taylor found a man lying in a field on the north side of the Canadian National Railway property opposite the end of Centre street, and reported the matter to the police, who had him conveyed to a hospital.

The stranger was found totally paralyzed, with exception of his right arm. He was also uniformed, officers that his name is Nick Andruch, and stated he had been at construction camp Perkins No. 2, Barrifield, where he is known as No. 883.

THROWN UNDER WAGON

Guelph, Sept. 7.—Thrown under the wheels of a heavy farm wagon when a team of horses bolted on his farm in Marlboro Township, Ralph Close, well-known local farmer of this district, died in the Guelph General Hospital from severe internal injuries. Mr. Close was on a wagon driven by his son, when the team took fright, and he was tossed from the vehicle, the wheels passing over his body. No inquest will be held.

SECOND VICTIM DIES

Brockville, Sept. 7 —Second victim of a highway crash four miles west of Prescott, on Highway No. 2 (G. M. Trail), a commercial traveller, living in Cornwall, died in St. Vincent de Paul Hospital without having recovered consciousness.

His companion, Thomas J. Allen, Brockville Hotel proprietor, was found dead in the wreckage of Train's car, wedged between two poles alongside the highway. Train was employed as a salesman for the Swift Canadian Co., Toronto. He was unmarried.

Americans in 1932 spent more money for automobiles than homes —automobiles costing $1,407,000,000, per capita, against $811,000,000.

LLOYD GEORGE HITS AT WAR COMMAND

Says Millions Died Unnecessarily Because War Ended in 1918

London, Sept. 7.—Millions who were killed in the war need not have met death — declares David Lloyd George in his first volume of his war memoirs just published.

The war, he insists, should have ended in 1918, and it might have been decided in 1917. He characterized the allied strategy in France in the earlier stages of the war as "sanguinary mistake" which nearly lost the allies the conflict.

One feature of the volume is an outspoken attack on Viscount Cruy, then Secretary for Foreign Affairs, for the part he played in that office.

By coincidence the book was published as the noted Liberal statesman was lying at death's door.

In the course of his narrative, Mr. Lloyd George lashes the war office again and again for "mental obtuseness" and a "pitiable lack of initiative."

NO FLOWER NAMED NIRA

Englewood, N.J., Sept. 7.— You can't call a dahlia Nira which is the name of the National Industrial Recovery Act. General Hugh Johnson, administrator of the act, told Joseph P. Dully he could not name his prize bloom Nira because it's a governmental insignia.

Carried Off By Indian Band 30 Years Ago

Pine River, Man., Sept. 7.—After being more than 30 years with Indians in Western Canada and the United States, Mrs. Mary Knudsen, who mysteriously disappeared from her home when a child; has been reunited with her brother. It is believed she was picked up by the roving band of Indians who brought her up as their child.

Mrs. Knudsen speaks four languages—English, French and two Cree dialects—but she does not know Ukrainian, the only language spoken by her mother, Mrs. Julian Charpowski, a farmer's wife here.

Mrs. Knudsen speaks four tongues fluently as a result of her childhood among the Indians. When she was a child she was placed in a mission school at Crooking Lake, Sask. She studied there eight years, spending her holidays with the Indians, and 12 years ago was married to James Knudsen. She now lives at Hayes, Mont., and has five children.

Her resemblance to a niece brought about the reunion with her family. Her mother is considered Mrs. Knudsen is her child but a blood test will be made shortly to settle all fears of the relationship. A scar on the head and ear piercings are considered strong evidence she is the lost child.

Research on the control of sweet potato diseases has been responsible for reducing losses to about one-third those reported a few years ago.

TURKEYS EXONERATED OF EATING DIAMOND

Thirteen Years Afterwards Causes Finding of Lost Ring

PORT COLLINS, Colo, Sept. 7.—(CP)—After 13 years, Mrs. Ellen Dilly's turkeys stand vindicated.

In 1920, Mrs. Gill shook a tablecloth out of the door of her farm house. On it her visitor, Mrs. Jarry Scaup, had laid her diamond engagement ring. Soon turkey was carefully examined as the flock was killed that fall in belief one of the fowls had picked up the ring.

The farm later changed hands and Mrs. Harry Myers found the ring yesterday, not far from the house.

BOY PLAYS COP AND GETS ARRESTED

Barrie, Sept. 7—Pleading guilty to impersonating a police officer Frank Elsmere, 19, of Lefroy appeared in police court here and was remanded one week for sentence. The complainant, H. C. Walker, a Toronto barrister, said Elsmere, armed with a tin badge bearing the words "Captain Juvenile Police," and with handcuffs and dressed in a tunic with Mounted Police buttons, stopped his car and ordered the brakes to be tested. Elsmere is alleged to have stated he was looking for cars that had brakes and also for bootleggers.

PREMIER BENNETT VISITS IN TORONTO

Toronto, Sept. 7 (CP)—Premier R. B. Bennett, making his first visit here since his return from Great Britain and the World Economic Conference will attend the Canadian National Exhibition today.

He will speak at a directors' meeting prior to his public address and it is expected the Premier will touch upon high points of the recent conference, in both his speeches.

Mountie Keeps Bear From Eating Man

Ottawa, Sept. 7—Several persons have disappeared recently in the Yukon, and Royal Canadian Mounted Police officials suspect that some of them have been killed by grizzly bears, according to a report received today by headquarters here from Supt. A. B. Allard, officer commanding the Yukon District.

In support of his suspicions, he refers to an attack made on a prospector who was saved by Corporal D. A. McAuliffi after he had been severely injured.

Whales are fully grown at six to eight years though they may live to the ripe old age of 20 years.

Grey of Fallodon Dies, Ultimatum to Germany Sent Britain Into War

Northumbrian Home Is Scene of Death of Statesman Early Thursday

HIS CAREER

Last Days Spent With Windows Open Toward Bird Sanctuary

Christon Bank, England, Sept. 7 (C.P. and A.P. Cables)—Viscount Grey of Fallodon who, as Sir Edward Grey, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, gave Germany the ultimatum plunging Great Britain into the war died today at the age of 71.

He virtually retired from public life in 1916 because of failing eyesight and had been seriously ill for more than a week becoming gradually weaker although he waged a stubborn battle for life.

Death came to him at 6.05 a.m. at Fallodon, his beautiful home on the Northumbrian coast.

As Secretary for Foreign Affairs for the years from 1905 to 1916, Viscount Grey was fated to play a leading role in the destinies of Europe. He never wavered in his stand on behalf of Belgium after exhausting every effort to avert the great disaster of war.

During a five-months' period in 1918-1920 he was the temporary British Ambassador to Washington.

The room in the mellow red-brick mansion where the Viscount spent his last days looks out on a bird sanctuary he had set up on the grounds of Fallodon. Here, throughout the long days of his illness he lay with the windows open where every sound in the sounds of his well-loved birds could reach him.

Unconscious Now

He had been unconscious for nearly 79 hours. He could take no food. His remarkable stamina, however, surprised those at his bedside, and the entire nation.

The cessation of his feeble breathing alone indicated that life had flickered out. A sister, Mrs. Coetlogon, and her daughter, maintained a constant watch during the last hours.

The exact nature of his illness was not announced, but is believed to have resulted from high blood pressure.

A little less remarkable than his fame as a statesman was his prominence as a friend of birds and animals. It was said he won the trust of the most timid creatures and squirrels, robins, ducks, and wild fowl would perch on his shoulders or near him as he walked in the garden to the favorite spot where he fed them.

He also endeared himself to villagers in the tiny hamlet of Christon Bank and the nearby village of Embleton.

Near the gates of his estate—a great, tree-filled park— groups of anxious countryfolk gathered daily during his illness to read a new bulletin of his progress or to pray for him.

ENJOYS LIFE AT CENTURY

Mother of Marmora Man Came To Canada 99 Years Ago

Sebringville, Ont., Sept. 7. — Bright, cheerful and interested in current day events, Mrs. Valentine Litt, of Sebringville, will celebrate her 100th birthday on Sept. 11th. Her son, Frank Litt, here. A fitting observance of the event has been arranged by the members of the family.

Born in Alsace-Lorraine, Sept. 8, 1833, Mrs. Litt came to Canada with her parents when but one year old and settled in Fullarton Township. Two days after the battle of Waterloo in this country, she is still fairly active. During the last year she has attended church on numerous occasions and last month motored to Grand Bend, a lake resort, 40 miles from her home. She felt no ill effects from the trip. She enjoys reading and her eye-sight has stood her to good stead.

When about 20 years of age, Mrs. Litt married Valentine Litt. Nine children were born to them, two sons, Frank, of Sebringville and William, of Mornington, two daughters, Mrs. Anna Krupse, Stratford, and Mrs. Rieve, of Wyoming, Ont. Both are still living. She has 18 grandchildren.

While Mrs. Litt has no recipes for longevity, she admits she works hard and lived frugally. She has endeavored to look on the cheerful side of life.

In the early days, the little log cabin which her parents called home was lighted with a piece of wood in a tin of grease. The home was protected from the Indians by the dense forest which surrounded it. Mrs. Litt received little education until she reached the age of 13 years as there was no school in the district until a Lutheran minister conducted one a few miles from her home. She has been a lifelong member of the Evangelical Church.

Mayonnaise was named from the town of Mahon in the Balearic Islands.

PRIZE HOGS FOR BRITAIN TO MAKE TEST

Ontario Government Buys Seven Carloads At C. N. Exhibition

280 ANNUALS

Province Wants To Learn Why Our Bacon Sells Lowest

Toronto, Sept. 7—An experiment, unique in the history of Canadian agriculture, was launched at the Canadian National Exhibition yesterday when seven carloads of prize-winning hogs—the highest type of bacon hog in the province—were purchased by the Ontario government for shipment overseas to the British market. The total price paid for the 280 animals in the seven carloads was $7,200, an average price of seven and three-quarter cents per pound.

The plan of the provincial department of agriculture is to determine why Ontario bacon is bringing the lowest price on the British market of any imported bacon. When Col. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, was in England, in July, he was unpleasantly surprised to find that Danish, Dutch, Polish and Swedish bacon was fetching considerably higher prices than the Ontario product. Immediately upon his return to Canada he unfolded the whole situation to Premier Hepburn and the latter gave the department of agriculture permission to go into the market and purchase hogs for a trial shipment.

SKELETON IN NORTH SWAMP

Leather Belt Found In Tree Directly Over Clothed Bones

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Sept. 7.—(CP)—Mystery surrounds the finding of a skeleton by two men on the farm of W. A. Lindsay, west of Egremont Concession, 12, in Elderslie that the remains had lain on the spot for nearly a year.

W. Allen and E. Lindsay were on their way to the swamp nearby when they stumbled across the clothed skeleton. Close to it was a gold wrist watch, a tin cup and container, a drinking cup and fountain pen, but from these it was not possible to identify the body.

Almost directly above where the bones and clothing were found a leather belt hung from the branch of a tree which indicated the remains might be those of a suicide. No person from Elderslie or the vicinity has been reporting missing during the year and authorities are at a loss to solve the puzzle.

GIRLS MISSING AND REWARD IS OFFERED

Two Cousins May Have Been In Gaspe County

Quebec, Sept. 7.—(CP)—Search for two girls, Mary Macpherson and Maud Asch omitted on the Claude River District and village of Marsouins, Gaspe County today, following a report two girls resembling the missing cousins had been seen there last Friday. Police were informed an automobile containing two girls had stopped at a Claude River garage and that later the same girls had visited a hotel at Marsoulns. There was one man in the car. Police and volunteer workers at once concentrated their efforts on the area and hope by flag, search and location of the girls whereabouts in one of the two places.

A reward of $200 was offered yesterday for information leading to the finding of the girls, aged 17 and 15, who disappeared a week ago.

LONDON MAN VICTIM OF SLEEPING SICKNESS

Medical Men Try to Discover If More Cases Exist

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 7.—(CP)—Fears of the spread of sleeping sickness in this district was dead today as authorities sought to determine if another case of the disease existed. Rendol, Snell, 64-year-old retired salesman of Thedford, died in the hospital here, last night after lying unconscious since last Thursday. He had been ill 10 days.

Two cases of the disease in a mild form were reported from Petrolia, Sarnia where T. W. Creelman and Charles Smith were placed under care of specialists. Dr. A. J. Bell, Provincial Medical Officer, of Toronto said there was no danger of the disease spreading in the area under his supervision. Physicians said they knew of no other cases.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

Paramount introduces two new and refreshing stars in one of the fastest moving films it has been the privilege of the writer to see, in "Big Executive," at the Belle tonight and Friday, matinee daily.

Ricardo Cortes is not new to Belleville picturegoers, but never has the actor appeared to better advantage than in his role of the youthful trigger-minded financial baron, who holds Wall Street in the palm of his hand. You will welcome a new star.

New York's social register contributes another outstanding member to the cinema ranks in Elizabeth Young, who bursts on the film firmament in so convincing a manner that it takes your breath away.

In fact the production from beginning to end is quite breath-taking.

A remarkable performance is contributed by Richard Bennett, veteran of stage and screen, who, in the role of a 72-year-old financial genius, seeks to regain his lost prestige, working against the fast moving Cortes interests. As a love-starved secretary, Sharon Lynne offers one of her finest performances to date.

Much can be said about the direction of Eric Kenton. From the opening scene, the story unfolds with the rapidity of an express train carrying its characters to a thrilling climax.

"Big Executive," adapted to the screen by Laurence Stallings from a novel by Alice Duer Miller's popular novel offers perhaps the most vivid picture of Wall Street activities that has been presented.

Although the scheming brain of Cortes is continually brimming with dollar signs, he does find time to fall head over heels in love with the great granddaughter of his chief competitor in the street. It's a bitter dose to the old man when he finds a possible merger with allen forces, and the story reaches a climax approximating a notorious feud.

The excellent cast is ably supported by Dorothy Peterson in the role of a very much out-of-date wife, and Barton McLane.

FEAR BALLOONS DRIFTED INTO ATLANTIC

Balloon Disappears in Lightning Near Capreol Fishermen Relate Tale

In View Only About Ten Minutes When It Disappeared

600 MEN HUNT

2 Bennett Balloon Race Entries Still Missing

Sudbury, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP) —A balloon believed to have been one of the two missing in the Canadian Bennett international race from Chicago, pitched to the ground during a terrific storm in the Meteor Lake district last Sunday and has not been found, a party of fishermen said, today on arrival here.

Joseph J. Paul, or Sudbury, one of the fishermen, said he was fishing at Meteor Lake during the storm when he saw the big bag appear in the murky sky and finally attempt to make headway in the elements. A bolt of lightning blinded him for a moment, he said, and when he looked up the balloon had disappeared.

Paul said it may have fallen into one of the dozens of small lakes that dot the country. No trace was found of it or its occupants. Edward Close and Joseph Perreyne, of Mileage 56, were with Paul.

Balloon Flying Low

"We saw the balloon's supper about six o'clock," Paul said, "when Thevenge noticed the balloon. It was flying low—about 1,000 feet I would judge—and was half a mile away. One of the fishermen said I have ever been out in was raging at the time. It was very dark and there was a lot of mist and owing to the darkness and the haze we should not see any markings on the craft.

"Neither could we see whether there was any person in the basket. The basket however, was plain enough.

"All of a sudden there came a terrific bolt of lightning. When we looked around again we could not see any sign of the balloon."

Paul said the bag was in view only about ten minutes and was heading slowly north in the direction of Timmins.

In Difficulty

Evidently it had been having difficult before that," Paul said, "as we were talking to Jack Young, a trapper at Mileage 45, and he said he saw the same balloon about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. He was only 11 miles from where we were and apparently it took the craft about two hours to go that distance. The balloon was barely drifting when he saw it."

Toronto, Sept. 8 (CP)—Six hundred men working under direction of the Ontario Forestry Department today had their efforts to check fires in the Sault Ste. Marie district augmented by 200 Northern Ontario for one of the two missing bags in the Bennett Balloon Race that started more than a week ago from Chicago.

Ottawa, Sept. 8 (CP)—A request for Canadian Government assistance in endeavouring to locate the two missing balloons in the International Gordon Bennett Balloon Races at Chicago has been sent to the Dominion authorities by Hon. Warren Delano Robbins, United States Minister to Canada.

The message for assistance originated from private interests and was sent to Mr. Robbins through the Secretary of State Department at Washington.

Watch is Kept

All branches of the government service men are now on the alert for any news of the missing balloons. Stations in Northern Canada of the radio branch of the Department of Marine have been notified to keep a sharp lookout for any trace of the balloons, missing since Saturday last.

Earnest reports express fear that the balloons may have drifted over the Atlantic Ocean carrying the four men to their deaths. Experts say it would have been impossible for the "bags" to have remained in the air after Wednesday noon.

PRICES SOFT COAL TO RISE

Code Presented To Soft Coal Operators By Gen. Johnson

New York, Sept. 8—The controversy-ridden bituminous coal industry of the United States had been presented today with a code fixing minimum wages and working conditions providing for price increases.

Canada being a large furnace for United States coal the price increase embodied in the charter will naturally have its effect on Canadian pocketbooks. A code for the anthracite branch of the industry is late in the offing.

HEPBURN WILL NOT RETRACT

Charges Hydro Pamphlet With Purpose To "Deceive"

Toronto, Sept. 8—Mitchell F. Hepburn, M.P., Ontario Liberal leader, last night issued a statement accusing the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission of "studied distortion and deliberate misrepresentation" in quoting him partially in a recently issued pamphlet designed to refute accusation of the Liberal leader.

He stood by every statement with reference to the Hydro matter and the commission's reckless and disastrous management, he declared. He made from the public platform, in the press or elsewhere." Mr. Hepburn said. He accused the Hydro Commission of separating isolated

Eugene, Ore., Sept. 8 (CP)—Word reached here today that a lone wolf disorderly conduct—at Marshfield terrai has killed 35 lambs, then, apparently tiring of that diet, had slain and devoured a sheepherd dog set to watch the flock.

Pembroke, Ont., Sept. 8(CP)—This one doesn't depend on anyone for a drink of water. Owned by Milburn McBride, Wesmeath township, recently it was seen in the barn-yard busy at the well, working the pump handle up with its nose and down with its horns, working fast enough to pump a good stream into the trough. When there was enough water, the drank her fill and nonchalantly walked away.

Minneapolis, Sept. 8 (CP)—Kicking a cat till she was bowlegged is disorderly conduct—at Manager Baurenfeind found out. Baurenfeind was convicted of kicking his neighbor's grey Angora. The cat, said a veterinarian of the Animal Rescue League, is "dizzy and walks bow-legged," because of the kick.

Oakland, Sept. 8 (CP)—A police inspector beamed at Mrs. Emma Vasiza as he advised her he had succeeded in locating her 10 year old missing daughter, Catherine.

But Mrs. Vasiza on learning her daughter had eloped with Manuel Marshall, a professional wrestler, showed such violent displeasure that it took six patrolmen to calm her.

JUNTA SEIZES POWER AS CUBAN PRESIDENT QUITS

Mayor Outlines Project to Give City Park-Beach

Plan He Says Will Provide Work For 500 Men

ALL-LABOR JOB

Calling for the purpose of reorganizing the Central Relief Committee for the coming year, the first meeting of the season held in the City Hall last evening produced results far above the expectations of the small number of the original committee who attended.

One of the greatest moves in the work of caring for the needy unemployed of this city is promised with the announcement by Mayor George O. Tice, chairman of the committee, who announced that complete plans have been formulated for relief work for the coming months, and will be put into operation within the next week or so following their submission to the city council and the Board of Parks Commission.

The scheme unfolded by Mayor Tice is the levelling of Zwick's Island to a twelve foot depth, filling in the marshes with the material removed, building roads, draining off the surplus water, and making the first step toward the foundation of a permanent bathing beach on the west side.

500 Men to Work

On this work over five hundred men per month will be given steady employment. The regular wage will be forty cents per hour. Out of this wage those on relief will be able to apply a weekly deduction for the families at an average of twenty-two dollars a month, and when sufficient hours have been worked per month they will be able to obtain other work without interference or accounting.

Cost to the city for the actual

Highlights of Zwick's Scheme

Removal of twelve feet of top from the whole island, with the bottom material being used to fill the marshy and soft spots, build roads, form the foundation for a swimming beach and grade the surface. The thin surface will be kept for top reinforcement.

Actual material cost to the city for the shovels, picks and crowbars, the only tools necessary, will be in the neighborhood of three hundred and forty dollars.

Five hundred and fifty men will be given regular employment for the next five months or longer.

Working at a regular wage of 40 cents per hour, those on relief will be able to pay off their twenty-two dollar a ... relief obligation for rent, fuel and grocery vouchers to the city, the average family cost.

When sufficient hours have been worked to pay off this obligation the men are free to hunt other work and the hours and days available without reporting further to the relief office during the month.

Competent foremen will be hired to ensure the city receiving a fair amount of labor from the workers.

Those on relief who attempt to avoid the work must present a certificate from a medical doctor before they are excused from such labor.

Men who do not appear to be giving honest value to the city in amount of work, on complaint of foremen, will appear before the Central Relief Committee where disposition will be made of their case.

The work is expected to start within the next two or three weeks.

Alternative work suggested: Building of new roads, and city property in the northern section of the city; levelling of public property and play grounds, road repairing, and other overhaul, curb building on city streets.

NO REPRESENTATION AT MEETING

This city will not be represented at the Emergency Municipal Relief Association being held in Toronto on September 8, according to Mayor Geo. O. Tice. Mayor Peddle is one of the moving spirits of the Toronto meeting and will seek to have other municipalities concur in a special relief programme which has been drafted.

BRAINS DYING FEWER BIRTHS

Modern Civilization Says Professor Menaced By Birth Rate

Leicester, England, Sept. 8 (CP)—Claiming the Nazi birth fell on a paper which was to have been given before the British Association for the advancement of science today, Professor D. Katz of Rostock, Mecklenburg, was to have spoken before the psychology section of the association but his paper was suddenly cancelled. The Nazis had forbidden Prof. Katz to leave Germany.

Dr. J. J. Hurst, Cambridge, surprised the assembled scientists, with the information that brains were dying out. Owing to the rapidly decreasing birth rate among the more talented families, Dr. Hurst asserted the intelligence index of population was declining so rapidly as to endanger the safety of modern civilization. He suggested a scheme of family allowances for parents of all classes whose intelligence was of the higher grade. Prediction that in a few years the Eskimo race in Labrador would be extinct was made by Professor V. Stefansson, of the main factor was the europeanization of the people.

WEDDING GARLANDS TORN IN DENMARK

Jedenborg, Denmark, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Prince Knud and his cousin Princess Caroline Mathilde, were married today at the Royal chapel. The ceremony was heavily guarded against any unpleasantness by demonstrators.

During the night bunting and garlands, with which the streets of this hamlet had been decorated, were torn down, allegedly by Communists.

RESERVE BANKS TO SELL GOLD

Washington, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The United States Treasury today announced that Federal Reserve Banks may sell newly-mined gold to the arts and crafts and to foreign purchasers at $20.62 an ounce.

The Treasury plans to have the daily price approximate the world market price, less handling charges.

The daily price is subject to revision at any moment to conform with possible fluctuating markets.

Previously all gold was sold to the United States mint, by mandate, at the fixed price of $20.67 an ounce.

KILLS THREE WITH 2 GUNS

Madman Runs Amok In Belfast, Me., Then Slays Self

Belfast, Me., Sept. 8 (AP)—A mentally deranged man, who for years had been considered harmless ran amok in the business section of the city today, killed three men and critically wounded another, and then blew off his own head. He carried two shotguns.

The dead are:

Herbert E. Ellis, 65, an insurance man.

W. W. Blaisdell, 75.

Raymond Blaisdell, 40.

Adrian Jones.

R. B. Stanhope, a veterinarian, is in the Waldo General Hospital, and the superintendent said he could not live.

The business section of the city was thrown into an uproar as Adrian Jones, who had been considered harmlessly demented, came down main street with a shot gun in each hand.

His first downed Ellis, and then turning to the office occupied by the Blaisdell's, who are father and son and engaged in the undertaking business.

After killing the Blaisdells Jones went into Stanhope's office and shot him.

He then disappeared and was believed to have hidden in a nearby blacksmith shop. Officers set to watch about the shop and called for reinforcements.

KING FEISAL DIES UNDER HEAVY STRAIN

Massacre of Christians In Iraq Kingdom Caused Anxiety

DEATH AT BERNE

Famous In Arabia With Lawrence During Great War

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 8.—(AP) — King Feisal of Iraq died early today at a Berne Hotel from a heart attack.

The Monarch, who was 48, had been under a heavy strain in the last few weeks because of reported massacres of Assyrian Christians in his Kingdom.

When he arrived here, he refused to talk about reports he might abdicate and declared he would return to Bagdad upon finishing the cure here.

He was famous for his exploits with Lawrence of Arabia during the Great War. He came here from Bagdad three days ago with the intention of remaining two weeks.

His health had been poor for some time, but the sudden turn came as a shock to his entourage.

King Feisal or Iraq, was the scholar and desert warrior, who, with the aid of the romantic Lawrence of Arabia wrested a kingdom from the wreck of the Turkish Empire during the war.

Assyrian Trouble

Death came on the heels of Assyrian troops in Iraq the youngest nation in the League of Nations.

Einstein Leaves Belgium to Find Home Where Nazis Cannot Come

Blankenberghe, Belgium, Sept. 8 —Professor and Mrs. Albert Einstein plan to leave Belgium today aboard the yacht of a friend for an unannounced destination.

Although the Professor was not unduly disturbed over information that a secret German Nazi organization had set a price of 20,000 marks, 17,000 Canadian funds) on his head police continued to maintain a strict guard near his villa.

"I didn't know my head was worth 20,000 marks," the Professor remarked on hearing the report.

Mrs. Einstein, however, was alarmed, as her husband continued his habit of taking early morning walks across the downs.

The Professor had announced previously he intended to accept offers of homes given him by Artists or Americans.

Statement of Relief Costs in Detail for Year Ending July 31

In asking that the full statement showing cost of distribution of relief as expended by the City of Belleville from Aug. 1, 1932 to July 31, 1933, be submitted for public scrutiny, Mr. E. V. Tobey at the meeting of the Central Relief Committee held in the city hall last evening, explained that the request was made solely by the fact that the committee should draw to the attention of the public the comparative low cost of administration as compared with costs by municipalities. The motion was unanimously concurred in by other members of the committee. The statement follows:

Statement showing cost and distribution of relief as expended by City of Belleville from August 1, 1932 to July 31, 1933.

BIRTHS ALMOST TREBLE DEATHS

Births record a distinct win over deaths in the city for the month of August, with a contrast of 35 new arrivals and healthy baby boom against 12 recorded deaths, the majority of which were of individuals over the fifty year mark.

Of the number of births, girl babies still outlimned to hold the lead by a narrower margin during the past month. Sixteen male babies were registered against 19 females. In the death list five were males and eight females, of this number the majority of deaths occurred between the ages of 70 to 76 years. There were no cases of deaths reported during the month.

SLIGHT SCRATCHING ON CAR FENDER

A minor auto accident occurred on Front Street early yesterday afternoon when a car driven by Lolis Rosehold of Toronto, collided with a car driven by C. L. Walters of this city. Mr. Walters was backing out from the east curb on Front Street when the Toronto car, proceeding north, struck it. No serious damage was reported.

COURT ROOMS ALL DOLLED UP

A bright, clean, shiny police court room welcomed the city Friday morning's proceedings. Two men pleaded guilty to an infraction of the Liquor Control Act. The room was spick and span, having just recently been mopped, cleaned and all of the windows shining. Magistrate Millar complimented those responsible on the splendid condition of the place.

HYDRO BOARD MEETING ROUTINE

Business of a purely routine nature featured the regular meeting of the Hydro Electric Commission held today.

It was decided by members of the Commission that a booth would be taken at the forthcoming Kiwanis Karnival where electrical products of the local shop would be on display.

An account was rendered the local branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses for service at a room garden party for the sum of $13.66.

Several communications were received and filed. The financial statement for the months of May, June and July, was given members.

GIFT NIGHT AT BELLE THEATRE

A capacity house featured the All-Silver Premium Night at the Belle Theatre, Thursday evening. Many beautiful silver gifts were presented by the manager and staff to the lucky winners.

Mr. Thos. Murray of the Belvidere Hotel won first prize, a gleaming silver six-piece tea service. Second was Mr. Geo. H. Abel, winner of a silver flower basket. Mrs. E. Hogan was the winner of a sandwich tray; Mrs. Weaver a butter dish; Mrs. Bassett a bon bon dish; a bon bon dish; Mrs. W. C. Tanney a casserole, Miss L. M. Reid, a butter tch; Miss Ray Simmons a centre piece and Mrs. Brenzner, a serving tray. The feature offering was Alice Doer Miller's "Big Executive," featuring Ricardo Cortez, Elizabeth Young and Richard Bennett.

TRUCK AND CAR IN COLLISION

Making a right hand turn to proceed into the premises of the O.S.D. a truck owned by the Miller and Paisley Construction Company and driven by R. Grimshaw, was struck in the rear by a car driven by Mr. O. Runions of this city, Thursday afternoon. It is alleged by Runions that the truck turned slightly to the centre of the road before making the full right hand turn. Runions said he was of the opinion that the truck was about to turn right and he kept proceeding westward on his right hand side of the road when he said the truck turned in front of him. The Provincial Police investigated. The radiator of the Runions car was badly damaged while the tailgate of the truck was also broken.

SPANIELS WIN AT C. N. EXHIBITION

Lady Walden wins again! The beautiful Springer spaniel owned by Mr. C. R. Tilbrook of Moira Kennels as well as other Moira dogs made a most successful showing at the forty-third annual dog show of the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto this week. She won first on winning bitches. The Moira Kennels also won second on bitch, third with Standard D'Arc, and third with Professor in their various classes. Professor and Outlaw as a team won first prize which entitled the owner to a handsome bronze trophy for having the best brace of Springer spaniels in the show.

This list of awards is considered a splendid tribute to the high quality of Mr. Tilbrook's spaniel dogs.

Lady Walden and Professor left today for the Montreal dog show to be shown on Saturday. Their two dogs will also be shown at London, Hamilton and Welland within the next week.

APPLE TREE SEEN IN FULL BLOOM

SNELL KNOWN AT MARMORA

London Man, Victim of Sleeping Sickness, Editor There For Some Time

A. Rendel Snell, victim of sleeping sickness, who died in London, Ont., this week was at one time well known in this district, having at one time edited the Marmora Herald. Previous to acquiring the Marmora paper, Mr. Snell had been school principal of Marmora High School. The years of his residence in Marmora, have been dated variously by local acquaintances as from 1890 to 1900. It is not believed he has been in the Marmora district, coming from near London to take over the Marmora school principalship and later retiring to what is believed to have been his former home, Thetford, near London.

INSECTS GIVE MEN SURPRISE

"No authentic records have yet been made of the tse-tse fly in the North American continent as far as I know," stated Mr. A. B. Baird, chief of the local Dominion Entomological Branch, when questioned today.

A conceded authority on insect life, Mr. Baird has followed closely the conflicting reports emanating from south of the border regarding the reported finding of this particular winged African carrier of the dread scourge of sleeping sickness.

"Medical experts of the U.S. government have been attempting to find out whether it is the tse-tse fly or not, but as far as I know none of them has reported finding the real fly," stated Mr. Baird.

"Probably some one who has been in Africa and has seen the fly there thought he recognized it in St. Louis and, promptly spread the alarm," added Mr. Baird.

Whether the insect could survive the climate of this country is not known at the local laboratory.

"The insect would has given us repeated surprises in the last few years, and we are not prepared to state whether or not any particular species of bug could live in any specified climate. At present a number of insects from southern countries are doing handily right up in northern Canada," they stated.

Until a definite finding is announced by United States Government experts officials are not prepared to believe that the tse-tse fly has made its appearance on this continent.

NEW GUN LICENSES SELLING RAPIDLY

"The new gun licenses are selling like hot cakes," stated, Mr. J. S. Fisher, issuer for the biermits for this district. "We've had all kinds of applicants during the past week or so."

The licenses are required by all who carry any sort of rifle or gun in the open, except farmers on their own land, and are issued at a cost of one dollar.

SPINE SAID TO BE FRACTURED

Miss Dorothy Simmons of Tweed In Critical Condition

Miss Dorothy Simmons, Tweed, who was seriously injured in an automobile accident near Chapman's Corners, is still in a critical condition, a patient in the Belleville General Hospital, suffering from what physicians say is a fractured spine. Dog Carey and Clare Rashotte, also of Tweed, other passengers in the car, sustained minor injuries.

The accident happened about 4.30 a.m. Monday last and according to the theory of the Provincial Police, was caused by the density of a fog. The car, which is owned by Harry Artis of this city, was being driven by Rashotte. The party were returning from a dance and failed to make the turn west of Chapman's Corners. The car went into the ditch for a distance of about thirty feet, later turning over on its side. The automobile was badly damaged during the accident.

Miss Simmons, who was a passenger in the rear seat, was thrown to the floor where she sustained several internal injuries. Later she was taken to the local hospital where upon medical examination it was discovered her spine had been fractured. Despite the seriousness of the injury reports are to the effect that Miss Simmons is resting quietly and is on the way to recovery.

The Provincial Police are still investigating. Artis, the owner of the car, and not a passenger at the time of the accident, having loaned his automobile to Rashotte.

SLEEPING SICKNESS IS NOT KNOWN HERE

Any outbreak of sleeping sickness in this city or district would be unparalleled in local medical records, according to Dr. G. E. Cronk, M.O.H. of this city, who was questioned today.

At present the district is free from the dread disease which has gradually spread north to Western Ontario border cities from its first discovered outbreak in St. Louis Missouri, several days ago.

"I have never heard of a reported case of the disease in this district," stated Dr. Cronk.

According to the M.O.H. the symptoms would be readily discernible to any qualified physician.

CYCLE DID NOT HIT CAR

Later Version of Tragedy Relates How Cycle Swerved

From news obtainable Wednesday last, regarding the fatal accident of which the late William Edwin Rose of Cherry Valley, was a victim, this paper published that the motorcycle he was driving crashed into the side of a car. From further accounts received, the cycle to avoid the car, swerved to the side of the road and went in the ditch with the fatality resultant.

Will Rose was driving his motorcycle, and on the seat behind him was Bill Brooker of Cherry Valley. As the motorcycle approached the corner a car drove out of the East Lake road. The men on the motorcycle swerved on their way to Cherry Valley. To avoid striking the car the motorcycle was turned sharply to the left. It left the road in the ditch. The driver was thrown head first against the side of the ditch, fracturing his skull and his skull was stove in. He and his companion were taken to the Prince Edward County Hospital. Rose passed away in about an hour. Brooker was thrown about twenty-five feet. He suffered principally from shock and soon revived.

Following the inquest the motorcycle was Willis Blakely of Picton, with Miss Victoria Rose, sister of Will Rose, on the seat. The car was driven at a safe distance behind the unfortunate riders.

The funeral of the unfortunate victim of the accident, who had been in good health until the fatal accident, was largely attended by a large number of the Cherry Valley community, were held this afternoon from the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Nelson Rose, at Cherry Valley, and interment made in Glenwood cemetery.

TWO MEN ARE FOUND GUILTY

Take Term of Three Months For Operation of Still

Following a raid by Special Provincial Constable Ernest Hollingshead Lake, Fred Woodcock and Orval Bevin of Sim Tree, Ont., were arrested and charged with operating an illicit still when they appeared in the police court at Northbridge, before Magistrate Lloyd on Wednesday. The men pleaded guilty and were fined $200 and costs or three months in jail. The men chose the latter sentence.

The men as the outcome of a raid on farm near Sim Tree where a still, mash and other equipment and about two quarts of moonshine liquor seized. The case was turned over to the R.C.M.P.

DELAY SEEN AHEAD OF ZWICK'S ISLAND PLAN

Proposed Improvement Scheme Will Not Proceed at Once

Further details of the proposed work on the Zwick's Island improvement scheme as suggested by Mayor Tice at the Central Relief meeting held on Thursday evening were given today at the city hall.

At the city relief office, officials explained that the date of start of the work may be delayed longer than at first expected. It is pointed out that an enormous amount of clerical work is necessary before workers and their families can be granted into the relief classifications, and amount of relief necessary in each case.

MASONS PAY LAST TRIBUTE TO DROWNED

E. J. Repath and William Dick Buried At Toronto

TWO FUNERALS

Two Hundred Wreaths On Bier of Late William Dick

Toronto, Sept. 8—Attended by many prominent members of the Masonic Order, the funerals were held yesterday of Edward J. Repath and William Dick, Toronto men, who were drowned at Northport in the Bay of Quinte on Monday when their skiff capsized. Rev. T. A. Ben-Oliel of St. Dunstan's officiated at the service for Mr. Repath which was held from the residence, 386 Spadina Road. The last rites of the Masonic Order were observed by Rosemary Lodge. Interment was in St. James' Cemetery.

Rev. Sidney Mount acted at the last rites or William Dick, held from the residence, 109 DeGrassi Street. Rev. Mr. Mount, who is Grand Chaplain of the Masonic Order in Ontario, spoke highly of the tragedy and offered words of comfort to members of the family. Among the great number of floral tributes at the funeral of Mr. Repath were wreaths from Mount Sinai Lodge, A.F. and A.M.; Palestine Lodge; Occident Chapter, A.M.; Nobles of Hamedan Temple; Harmony Lodge; Fern Chapter, O.E.S.; Rami Ghar Grotto, Brampton Grotto Club; Maple Leaf Shrine, University of Toronto; Shamrock Lodge, A.F. and A.M.; Mount Sinai Chapter, Mount Dennis and Weston Rami Ghar Grotto Club; High Park Lodge, A.F. and A.M.; Maple Leaf Shrine Patrol; Department of Chemistry, University of Toronto; and the Francis Hague Chapter.

Nearly 200 wreaths attested to the esteem in which Mr. Dick was held Among these were wreaths from Rami Ghar Grotto, Sons of Scotland, Daughters of Scotland, Lady of the Lake S.O.S.; Caledonia Lodge, A.F. and A.M.

TRAILS CLUES OF ROBBERIES

Watertown Deputy-Sheriff Finds Dresses Mailed From Belleville

J. R. Dalzell of Watertown, N.Y., deputy sheriff of Jefferson county, has been in this vicinity the past few days, tracing the actions of a man at present incarcerated in the Watertown jail for alleged burglaries in and about that city. The deputy sheriff has secured facts which might connect the man with break-ins from Belleville to Brockville of this side of the border.

The man it is believed, mailed silk dresses from Belleville to a girl friend in Watertown and these were found to be part of the loot taken from a store in Brockville.

Sheriff Dalzell stated his belief that his trip to Canada had been most successful in clearing up a number of clues connected with the case.

ORPHAN MISSES CHANCE OF LIFETIME

Taken from an Omaha orphanage for probation, with a view to adoption by wealthy Mr. and Mrs. Jean Streng, of Paterson, N.J., 14-year-old Peter Christopoulos, who reminded the Strengs of their dead son, Henry, failed to qualify and has been returned to the orphanage. He is shown (TOP, LEFT), with Mr. and Mrs. Streng and in the other three panels with the Streng's daughter, Jean, who treated him as a brother swimming with him, taking him out in the family motorboat on Lake Hopatcong, N.J., and doing her best to make him feel he was one of the family. But the publicity attendant upon Peter's transition from humble orphan to adopted son of a wealthy family turned the boy's head, and in CENTRE he is pictured as he started back—the chance of a lifetime thrown away.

Partridge Season for Ontario Residents from Oct. 9th to 19th

Gun License Is Only Requisite For Showing

EARLY DATES

Toronto, Sept. 8.—Open season on partridge for residents of Ontario only, with possession of a gun license the only requirement to permit hunting, will be from Oct. 9, to 19, both date; inclusive, Hon. George Challies, Provincial Secretary, announced yesterday. Special seasons for deer and moose hunting later in the year are included in the Order-in-Council authorizing the dates.

By the arrangements made by the department, residents of Ontario will have first "hunt" on partridge and at the same time will not be subjected to the danger of the moose and deer open seasons. Deer hunters will be allowed a particular season for the first five or six days of deer hunting season, in each case later than the residential open partridge season.

The general open season applies to all areas of the province with the exception of crown game preserves, provincial parks and other areas which are regularly legally prohibited. Bags are limited to five a day of ruffled grouse (birch partridge), Canada grouse (spruce partridge), sharp-tailed grouse (prairie chicken), prairie hens and pinnated grouse. The season gun hunter must not exceed 15. All birds must be consumed as food of mounted before Nov. 20 except in case of special exemptions by the department.

The special seasons for deer and moose hunters are as follows:

In the territory north of the Canadian National trans-continental, Oct. 20 to Oct. 25; south of the trans-continental and north of the N.B. line from North Bay to Heron Bay on Lake Superior, Oct. 20 to Oct. 25.

South of the latter area and north of the French and Mattawa River, Nov. 1 to Nov. 6.

St. Joseph's Island, Nov. 1 to Nov. 15.

South of the French and Mattawa rivers but in the territory listed on deer hunting as CC Nov. 6 to Nov. 10.

All dates are inclusive.

The department has released 433 Hungarian partridge hens and 433 cocks, Mr. Challies also announced yesterday, and 833 English ring-tail pheasant hens and 885 cocks. In addition, 1,214 settings of ringtail pheasant eggs, 15 eggs to the setting, have been distributed through out the province by the department hatcheries. Settings may be obtained by written application, the batch remaining the property of the provinces after release according to provisions of the game laws.

SHOOTS SELF AFTER HE TELLS FRIENDS

Sarnia, Ont., Sept. 7—Coroner Dr. F. W. Mulligan decided today George Pritchard, 32, Petrolia, Ont., committed suicide when he shot himself here last night, and announced no inquest into the death would be held. Pritchard's body, with a bullet wound in the temple, was found on the outskirts of the city behind the automobile the salesman had been driving.

Pritchard, it was said, told two Petrolia men he intended to take his own life, but his statement was not taken seriously. The body was found three hours later. Motive for the suicide was not determined. He is survived by a widow and two children.

WEEDY GROWTH KEEPS MEN BUSY

City workmen who have been constantly employed during the summer attempting to keep ahead of the phenomenal growth of weeds during the present season are making one more round of the vacant lots and city property along the roads with scythes again sweeping the tall weeds to earth. The dryness of the weather during the first part of the summer and the recent wetness have combined this year to make a record crop.

U. S. STARS IN RUGBY INVADE

Rough Riders May Boast An All-U. S. Backfield

Toronto, Sept. 8 (CP)—Invasion of Canadian rugby by United States stars, begun in 1931 when Warren Stevens moved his deft forward passes from Syracuse to Montreal, has reached a new high this fall with enough foreign players in the Intercollegiate League alone to form a team with a few subs and two coaches.

Men who deserted their football across the border will pilot two of the big four teams this season and sprinkled through the player rosters is a foreign legion of 15 huskies bringing the tricks of the American game to add interprovincial teams. As yet no one has brought up the embarrassing fact that the union has a June 1 residence rule. As far as league heads know that date and no protests are expected from club officials who have gone too often on empty stadiums.

Wally Masters, dropped by Ottawa last year when it was proved he was a professional baseball player, is coaching Rough Riders this fall and, with the training season just started has five United States players bolstering the natives who haven't been able to hoist the capital out of the cellar in years.

Rough Riders may boast an "all U.S." backfield are closely followed in the race for American material by Montreal and Toronto Argonauts. Winged Wheelers with whom Stevens started the craze for American forward flippers and Hal Baysinger, Syracuse quarter, carried it on last year, has four United States players ready to help carry their fortunes against Hamilton Tigers, union champions whose only foreign star is Don Gradiner, Gettysburg back.

CHIP OFF HIGH SPOTS OF WALKS

As an alternative to the complete rebuilding of a considerable amount of concrete walk which has become badly heaving on Front street since it was first laid down, employees of the department of public works during the past few days have been chipping off the high spots with cold chisels and hammers where the elevations are more bothersome. Many of the spots had become stumbling blocks to pedestrians and a continual menace to wearers of

SAYS QUEBEC DISAPPOINTED

French - Canadian Feels He Is Looked On As Foreigner

Newmarket, Ont., Sept. 8—(CP)—Rev. Father Henri Sahut Denis of the University of Ottawa, was on record today with the declaration French Canadians would never have entered Confederation had they been able to visualize the conditions which now exist.

Father Saint Denis was addressing members of the Liberal-Conservative Summer School here last night, when he thus declared himself.

"Fraternity should be a reality based on the achievements of the past," he said. "Yet today in most provinces we are treated as foreigners. Had such a result from Confederation been apparent at the time we would certainly never have agreed to it for a moment."

"The French Canadian," Father Saint Denis said," resents ostracism and condescension. He regrets having to bargain sometimes, not for privilege, but for rights. He is second to none with regard to appreciation and loyalty to his country."

The speaker pleaded for a "rekindling of the spirit of tolerance and friendship" which prevailed at the time of Confederation between the two races. This, he said, was necessary to make Canada an united an actual accomplishment and complete the work started by the Fathers of Confederation.

NINE REDS TO BE EXECUTED

Convicted of Attempt To Murder Nazi Trooper

Duesseldorf, Germany, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Nine Communists were sentenced to death for murdering a Nazi storm trooper and attempting to kill several others in an attack which precipitated the Nazi Putsch in Erkrath June 30, 1932.

The prosecutor demanded the death penalty for 12 men accused of the crime, but one was sentenced to 15 years and two were acquitted.

FIREMEN CARRY OUT FAMILY FROM HOME

London Household Awakened by Fire Under Apartment

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 8.—(CP)—Mr. and Mrs. William Lewis and their three children were routed from their beds early this morning by fire which broke out in the storeroom of a fur shop directly under the low their apartment. The members of the family were carried to safety by firemen who scaled up ladders to reach their living quarters.

Loss to the property and stock of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis was estimated at between $5,000 and $8,000.

Breaks Into Garage To Get Money To Pay Man Five Dollars

Racine, Sept. 8.—(CP)—Defending himself when arraigned on a charge of breaking into a filling station here, Peter Bazer, 32, of Racine, testified thus:

"The operator of the station gave me $5 a week ago to buy him a dog. I spent the money, but not for a dog. I had a dream with a dog or $5. It was quite a problem because I didn't have the money. So I broke into the filling station to get the money to buy him back."

Ninety days was the penalty.

ARRANGE BARTER PLAN

London, Sept. 8—An arrangement which is an outcome of the Imperial Economic Conference held at Ottawa last summer, has been made by which British cream separators will be exchanged for Canadian plows. The arrangement has been concluded between the R. A. Lister Company of Dursley, Gloucestershire and the Cockshutt Plow Company of Canada. First consignments from both companies have already crossed the ocean.

OBITUARY

MRS. ARCHIE WALKER

Picton—There passed into rest the oldest communicant of the congregation of St. Philip's Church, Milford, in the person of Matilda Maugrove, wife of the late Archie Walker, on August 13th.

She will be greatly missed in the community as one of the kindest and most sympathetic of its residents.

Until recently, when age and infirmity prevented her, she was a regular attendant at the services of St. Philip's and an indefatigable worker in the Ladies' Guild, taking an interest also in the social and religious activities of the Methodist Church at Milford.

Ministers of both communions, as well as their congregations, will remember her charity and hospitality as that of a beloved servant of God and man.

The funeral service was held from her late home to Cherry Valley Cemetery, the Rev. Rural Dean Winter officiating.

Left to mourn are two sons, Emery of Cherry Valley; Willet of Milford, and one daughter, Mrs. J. N. Boyd of Belleville, also three sisters.

Requiescat in Pace.

LATE CALVIN L. CUNNINGHAM

Many former friends and neighbors met in the Ameliasburg Methodist Church Thursday afternoon to attend the funeral service for the late Calvin L. Cunningham, who had been so widely known throughout the community there, and had been for so many years an active participant in that church's undertakings. The Rev. J. D. P. Knox of this city, conducted the service at his late residence, 2 Bridge St., and was also in charge of the service in the church and at the graveside in Ameliasburg cemetery; the Rev. W. G. Fletcher of Mountain View, assisting at the church and place of interment.

Acting as bearers were Messrs. S. B. Vancott, John Gibson, William Reddick, H. Spencer, H. Dempsey and O. Mons.

MRS. JOHN G. FITMAN

Another aged and lifelong resident of Thurlow passed away Thursday afternoon when Mrs. Emaroy Pitman died in her 86th year at the residence of her son, Blake, in the 5th. concession of that township. The deceased was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Willet Parliman and the last remaining member of that family. She was born in Thurlow and had resided there the long years of her lifetime, and was the widow of John G. Pitman, who predecessed some years ago. The late Mrs. Pitman was a member of the Carmel United church and had been well known and highly regarded throughout the countryside. Surviving are the son, Blake, ab whose residence her death occurred and a daughter, Mrs. Mary Spencer of Amelisburg.

Perhaps Sweet Thing's Kiss Means Stag Party

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 8.—(CP)—Perhaps the incident which followed the second heat of the Harmsworth Trophy Race —when an unnamed "sweet young thing" asked Hubert Scott-Paine for a kiss, and got it—had something to do with the arrangements for the reception and dinner to be tendered the British speedboat racer here Friday. The dinner will be stag— strictly stag. But after the dinner, when specimens are being made, women may listen from a safe distance in the Mezzanine about the dining-hall.

Sheriff Buys Gun To Guard Desperado

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 8—(CP)—Undersheriff Stanley Rogers dug down in his private purse for $200 to buy a machine gun to guard Harvey Bailey, desperado. He already had six machine guns but he considers seven a lucky number.

CATTLE WINNERS OF MANY PRIZES

"Maddo Champion" No. 86619 aged heng sire, owned by Mr. D. C. Spencer, won first place in his class and 3rd grand champion at Belleville, has also successful in winning the "Ribbons" and also in Ontario Intelligence Special for the best Holstein bull any age. His "get of sire class", 1st prize and reserve for grand champion, in strong competition against two bulls and yearlings in a class of 5 get of sire.

The young bull "Champion Echo Segis" No. 102560 won third place in his class, and it is of special note that the young heifer, "Champion Dora de Kol" No. 275957, seven months old, won in her class of junior calves, annexing first place and the Holstein female any age, and also won the Holstein Belleville special prize. This calf also won the C. Eaton Co. Special for best calf, any breed, over six months old. The prize for this competition was an eight day clock which was presented by Mr. Spencer in front of the grandstand on the afternoon of the judging by Mr. Fair, by Mr. R. M. Mitchell, president of the Fair Board.

10,000 UNEMPLOYED MAY GO TO SCHOOL

Hamilton, Sept. 8.—(CP)—Public School days may start all over again for upwards of 10,000 unemployed persons.

Tentative plans for the state emergency relief board, announced yesterday, call for the establishment of Vocational Schools at 20 to 25 centres, with the government putting up the $250,000 expense money and the State furnishing the equipment.

The money will go to pay about 500 teachers and others needed to conduct the classes.

MONEY MORE DANGEROUS THAN MACHINES

There is more danger to mankind in the case of "money versus man" than there ever was or will be in the case of "man versus machine," said Sir Frederick G. Hopkins opening the British Association for the Advancement of Science Congress.

That is the answer of science to the school of thought which holds growth of the machine to be a prime cause of the world's unemployment evil and economic disruption.

Sir Frederick referred to words by Sir Alfred Ewing which he said were still being echoed:—"that the command of nature has been put into man's hand before he knows how to command himself."

"Of science itself this is no indictment," he added. "The indictment is of mankind. Recognition of the facts of nature cannot be absent from the minds of those whose labors are daily increasing mankind's command of nature, but it is due to them that the truth should be viewed in proper perspective.

"It is, after all, war to which science has added terrors, and the fear of war, which alone give it real urgency; an urgency which must of course be felt in these days when some nations at least are showing the spirit of selfish and dangerous nationalism. I may be wrong but it seems to me that, war apart, the gifts of science and invention have done little to increase opportunities for the display of the more serious of man's irrational impulses. The worst they do is perhaps to give to clever and predatory souls that keep within the law, the whole world for their depredations instead of a parish or a country as of yore."

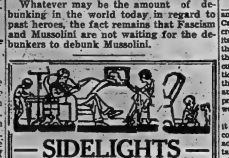
Sir Frederick was regretful that few men of affairs seriously believed what was yet probable—"that the replacement of human labor by machinery of will impose a new structure upon society."

SMALL DEED, VAST RESULTS

From Rodosh, Jugoslavia, comes a story showing the havoc caused by a tiny mouse which quietly gnawed a cable in a power house. The result was the pumping station was destroyed, water for irrigating an entire district has been shut off and unless the plant can be rebuilt in six weeks, hope of planting crops for the season will be gone, as the district depends solely on agriculture and if the crop is lost the village and country will be bankrupt. The loss so far is estimated at $150,000.

Mouse-like we are unconscious of the influence of their acts as this wee mouse which was only doing a mouses work when it caused so much damage. Just as a train of circumstances was set up by the shortcutting of the cable, so the little act, good or little, leaves a huge influence behind it. Good deeds live after us as deeds of evil in time may run itself out as the results are countered by good in the world. While the little deeds of good are on its heels only mission which all the evil in the world cannot upset.

MUSSOLINI STATUE



One has often heard of seeing things through another man's eyes but in every fact Romans and other Italians as well as visitors to the classic land will look upon Rome in the future through the eyes of Mussolini, if a hollow figure of gigantic proportions in the very shape and form of Benito Mussolini, perched upon the top of Monte Mario. Two statues will climb inside the monster statue. Il Duce will wear the dress of a Roman shepherd with goatskin kilt, sandals and strapped sandals, and will bear the shepherd's crook. This is intensely dramatic and theatrical.

Mussolini has an eye to the spectacular and he undoubtedly is thought of his immortality of fame. He has chosen a classic dress for his figure which with the pedestal will reach a total height of 236 feet. He has picked a form of representation which may bestow upon him an immortal reputation.

He has, of course, a background of great men, from the mythical days of Romulus and Remus, the founders who were said to have been suckled by a wolf 753 years before the birth of Christ, all the way down Roman history, the famous Gracchi brothers, Marius, Pompey, Julius Caesar, Augustus the almighty Roman Emperors, and the Middle Age and Renaissance heroes. No wonder Mussolini lives in an age of grandeur and speaks a language of magnificence. He comes of the race which produced Horace, the dyrisinger, and Vergil, the Roman poet of nearly two thousand years ago, who sang of woodland and the countryside in his idylls as well as of the great imperial history of the Roman people. The city the centre of power in state and in church for many centuries, is a fitting place for a statue of one still living, who, whatever his shortcomings or weaknesses has proven himself one of the most resourceful of men, who by his strength probably saved Italy from revolution or communism.

The erecting of a statue of this kind may seem foreign to the quieter mood of the North which prefers to leave statues to be erected by survivors after death and yet it has something to speak for itself. A little bit of hero worship would probably not hurt the people of the north.

Whatever may be the amount of debunking in the world today in regard to past heroes, the fact remains that Fascism and Mussolini are not waiting for the debunkers to debunk Mussolini.

TO GROW

To grow, that is the aim of life;
Serenely as a flower,
Untouched by any hurt or strife,
With beauty for a dower!

Or, if it need be thus, to grow
Through conflict, struggle, stress,
Through poignant passion, and to know
Few hours of happiness.

To make each joy, each sorrow bring
The goal one step more near;
To let no grief too deeply sting,
To hold no bliss too dear!

To grow, to conquer, to endure,
With courage half sublime,
To gain the soul-strength which can cure
All pains and pangs of time!

A KIT OF TOOLS, a blanket or two, a bicycle, and the open road for a skilled picno tuner, who had passed his sixty-fifth life milestone, and when work would be come to him no more. This is the gentleman of the open road and the broad highway rested in Belleville in Firemen's Park, Labor Day. He didn't talk much nor encourage sociability from the other habitues of the park, distintly minding his own business and letting other people mind his. Another knight of the open road who passed the holiday in the park was an itinerant salesman of shoelaces, pins, needles and notions generally. He was smoking a short pipe and gazing out at the world through disgruntled eyes. Led on by a question or two he broke out with "There is a lot of trash floating about, pretending they are good men out of work —just trash—why the real bums are kings beside them, for the bums does not pretend to be what he ain't. They make business bad for regular business men like me. My goods are good materiil, not trash, and I get a fair profit. He was just returned from a trip to Windsor—walked all through the western part of Ontario—just made enough to eat at that. Now I am going out Tweed way. Would have gone this morning only it looked like rain and there is not much shelter out that way. I walked all over Prince Edward, but the trains are all right again, let you ride all you want as long as you behave yourself. I'm going to get off the main road towns, too many no-good tramps getting alky money selling cheap trash on hard luck stories. Me for the north country where hearts are big, bums are scarce, where men are men and women are all wool and a yard or two wide and full of generous impulses from the feet up. So long, Pal, I'll be seein' ya."

RIDING THE FOREST GOAT

If any one is tempted to imagine that membership in Mr. Roosevelt's forestry conservation outfit implies a state of despair, he is mistaken, if the news from the Connecticut encampment is typical of the national forestry camp situation, declares the Baltimore Sun:

"It seems that a mystic order has already been created among the foresters, the organization being on-true joiner lines. The order is called the 'I.D.K.', which initials are not translated, and the officers call themselves by such titles as Great Oak, Small Oak, Sturdy Elm and Tall Pine. The neophytes are known as Saplings. It is thus proven beyond peradventure of a doubt that lodge meetings are made from any of the vicissitudes of our economic system. Come the much advertised 'total collapse' we shall have the secret orders, perhaps one known as the W.D.W. E. (Oh, yes, When Do We Eat), with a Grand Skeleton, Noble Skeleton and Past Noble Skeleton in the entrance hall.

"Give an American an afternoon off, and you'll find him riding the goat. It's his passion."

FLYING WING THAT FLIES

After several years of investigation and experimental work on a small scale, Dr. Snyder, South Bend, Indiana, has successfully flown the first full-size power-driven tailless plane, the Arup, at his local airport, according to Popular Aviation. Further, it is said that the Arup is the first flying wing of any kind to fly in the United States, although several have been flown in France and Germany.

and told them, among other things, Canada needed a 50 per cent. increase in population if it is to take its proper place among nations of the world. He cautioned, however that the present was no time to discuss means to increase the population when unemployment exists in the land, and revealed two Canadian authorities had been working on the problem with a group of "most powerful interests" in Great Britain.

From the Prime Minister's speech it appeared clear his government considers it unnecessary to take any action in Western Canada to curtail wheat production. He told the school Canada's quota under the recently signed international wheat agreement approximated very closely its ten-year production of that cereal.

Soares Critics of Radio

Mr. Bennett scored persons directing personal attacks against members of the Canadian Radio Commission and told his audience the country wanted to part with government controlled radio it could do so, but, he warned, if the people ever do it, they will find it very difficult to get it back.

Mr. Bennett repeated his statement made in Montreal the day of his return from the United Kingdom that Canada could not embark on a programme of wage increases and decreases in hours of labor because such a plan would lose the export trade which places the country fifth among exporting nations.

In his speech he declared his belief, despite institution of dictatorships in several countries, that no better system of government than democracy, despite its faults, had been evolved.

Democracy, he said, was facing the greatest test since it had to compete with the only hope of 20th Century democracy lay in education.

SOVIET-RUSSIA BUYS A CIRCUS

Prague, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Soviet Russia has gone and bought a circus. It is the Strakoni Circus, which once lived off the fat of the land in capitalistic Europe but in recent years fell into financial straits.

It was struggling precariously through Rumania, the reports said when Soviet representatives offered the elephants and tigers a home in Moscow.

THREAT IS CHARGED

Anderson, S.C., Sept. 8.—(AP)—Charles C. Jordan, 57, said by Federal agents to be the recipient $10,000 of Lefel Tucker under threat of kidnapping the latter's children, was arrested early today. Federal officers said Jordan had confessed, and that a warrant for him would be issued today.

UP-TURN SEEN IN REVENUES

July Figures In Canada Most Encouraging For Long Time

Ottawa, Sept. 8 (CP)—Canada will continue to place its confidence in export trade to help the nation out of the depression. To do this production costs and the quality of the products have to be kept on a basis to meet world competition.

On his return from London Premier R. B. Bennett said: "This country is the fifth exporting country in the world. We must maintain our position as an exporting country." After referring to the high standards of competition Canadian goods had to meet the Prime Minister added, "We cannot, if we would engage on a basis on which we can survive and maintain our solvency, lower our standards of living on the one hand or on other experiment with cutting down hours of labor and increasing rates of pay."

Similar sentiments have been expressed by Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce. The bid for external trade will go on undiminished, he declared, when other branches of the Civil Service are being retrenched and new junior trade commissioners are to be appointed.

While industry will endeavour to support the finances of the country by a high margin of exports over imports, Finance Minister E. N. Rhodes is working with an eye to balancing the budget. He foresees a reduction in public service costs of $14,000,000 this year and reports are that already some $9,000,000 have been lopped off. In a few months he will go to the provinces of the Dominion to convert their Victory Bonds bearing interest at 5½ per cent. due in the near and next and a new issue bearing interest probably around five per cent. The fact that the government was able to borrow almost $75,000,000 in the last month is said to have had the issue oversubscribed strengthened the Minister's hand in this undertaking. The reduction will mean a great saving in interest payments.

The Dominion's revenues have also shown an upturn. After falling for months and even years, the figures this year were greater than July 1932 and August is also expected to show a further upward climb.

statements in his speeches from political pamphlets, of which two have been issued to date.

Mr. Hepburn's statement follows in part:

"There are two purposes apparent in the Hydro Electric Power Commission's latest political pamphlet. The first is to place me in debt, of the Liberal party, and the second is to deceive the people into believing that the Commission has not purchased a power surplus. Both attempts are false.

"The Commission insists that the matter at issue is whether I stand by my statements as made from the public platform. I quite sympathize with the Commission's desire to make me, rather than their own misstatements of record, responsible for the Commission's lack of not only themselves.

Nothing to Retract

"I stand by every statement with reference to the Hydro matter and the Commission's reckless and disastrous management, which I have made from the platform, in the Press, or elsewhere. I have nothing to retract; it is all true. To those statements I am prepared to meet that I endorse the exact accuracy of the information which I have contributed to me, nor indeed, the excerpts separated from their context on both sides of questions which Hydro has collected and which those responsible for Hydro management, Commissioner Maguire of Insurance fame and Commissioner Meighen of Ahitibi real fame, use to suit their own purpose.

"This controversy as to what I have charged and it has not been denied, and why did it depict its reserves last year by $2,888,0007. And what about its $7,900,000 increase in operating cost over 1929? And why a fifty per cent. increase in basic cost per kilowatt hour over 1929? These are revelations in my statement to which the commission makes no reply and offers no explanation."

WRONG WHITE HORSE TAKEN

Complicated Case Heard In Police Court Thursday

Facing a charge which, when read according to the unusual charge of bygone days, Barton Westfall and his wife, Alice E. Westfall of Rossmore, appeared in the local police court before Magistrate Mitel charged with horse stealing while "not a householder," that entered into the case, stood patiently on the pavement, be-tween the Bellevue Police court on Thursday morning.

The case arose following an information laid by Lewis E. Mastin, a neighbour of the Westfall's regarding the taking of his white horse on Tuesday last. The charge against Westfall was dismissed while Mrs. Westfall was found guilty and given a suspended sentence. Owing to the fact that some previous trouble had ensued between these parties His Worship later found Mrs. Westfall over to keep the peace.

The difference of opinion arose following the arrival of Lewis Mastin's white horse by Mrs. Westfall, who alleged that the animal belonged to her. Mastin stated that the horse referred to by Mrs. Westfall was still at pasture in the Mastin farm, where it was left by Mrs. Westfall. As the case was becoming more complicated owing to the reference to the ownership of horses Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., called a short recess and "Old Sam" the horse was led into the Westfall was identified by witnesses. The horse was led over to the police station, having been driven to town by Mrs. John Mastin, father of the informant.

Following the identification of the horse "Old Sam" His Worship ordered that Mrs. Westfall return the horse in her possession while Mr. Mastin is to return "Old Sam" to its rightful owner, Mrs. Westfall. Mrs. Westfall was called upon to pay the costs of the proceedings, however.

WALLBRIDGE W. M. S.

The September meeting of Women's Missionary Society and Women's Association was held in the town hall on Wednesday September 6th. Deaths of Mrs. Chisholm's father, about twenty members were present. The president, Mrs. Chisholm, occupied the chair and opened the meeting by singing Hymn, "Stand Up, Stand Up For Jesus" followed by the Lord's Prayer repeated in unison.

President gave a splendid talk on the Missionary Golden Rule.

Prayer by Mrs. J. Chisholm. Hymn "A Charge To Keep I Have," then followed a duet by Mrs. Chisholm and Mrs. Mitchell, after which prayer by each member. Mrs. Chisholm read the minutes of last meeting which were approved, Mrs. L. J. Ketcheson and Mrs. Chisholm were a committee appointed to help with next month's program. Hymn "Blest Be The Tie That Binds" from Rev. Mr. McMullen, asking for the assistance possible for Dundas Street Mission. It was decided to have a shower of necessities at next meeting.

A beautiful solo by Miss Johnson, "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning" accompanied by the guitar and enjoyed by all.

Miss Freda Hinchcliffe gave a full outline of 3rd chapter of Study Book, "The Call of the Western Prairies" and told how the Hudson Bay Company was established.

Mrs. Nicholson had charge of Temperance Hymn. Mrs. Mitchell gave a splendid paper on Alcohol. Freda Hinchcliffe gave a reading on "Social Temperance."

Hymn, "Jesus Shall Reign".

Mrs. Ketcheson had in charge of meeting of Women's Association, a very interesting following by prayer by Rev. Mr. Johnson.

Minutes of last meeting were read and adopted. Plans made for 50th anniversary services in October, following by a social hour and tea.

Mr. Johnson to have charge of one service and Rev. Mr. Jobin of Stirling for the second service.

Meeting closed by all repeating Mizpah Benediction.

Light Sleeper Hears Boards Being Ripped

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 8.—(CP)—James Sanderson, East Side resident, hadn't been a light sleeper and if he hadn't heard the sound of nails and boards being ripped from his house late at night, the house would be minus a verandah today. As it is his house only boasts of a half a verandah. As he investigated the sounds that had awakened him he found two youths had demolished the west end of the porch. Thieves escaped, motive unknown.

MAYOR OUTLINES PROJECT

working materials needed, will be in the neighborhood of four hundred dollars, while the work itself will be borne to a large extent by governments under the new policy of two-thirds cost of specified work to the various municipalities.

The announcement or Mayor Tice was made following a statement by relief officials that the cost of caring for the needy in the city was mounting steadily and that many new families were already applying. The cost of relief for the month of August is expected to reach twenty-two hundred dollars.

For the period between the first of May last year and the first of April this year the total cost had reached the figure of $59,000.00. This prompted a question by the Mayor Grocery Clerk addressed to the chairman, Mayor Tice:

Disgruntled with Debt

"Can't we get away from all this expense by supplying work at less money? As I can see we have paid out fifty-nine thousand dollars for nothing but dole. We should have had value for it but disgruntled men and women. We'd be well advised to supply a program of work this year. Three projects are suggested; first the esplanade, second Ezekiel's Island and third, what is claimed to be necessary sewer work. Every one knows my stand on the esplanade, the sewers apparently do not need so much work on them and the Island project is third. Now the government wants to know what our program is for the coming year."

"There has been a lot of controversy around the street regarding the whole thing lately among certain parties," replied Mayor Tice, "but I want to make myself plain. Two years ago three plans were suggested to give men work. One was the esplanade, the second was the auxiliary main and the third was Zwick's Island. The water main was done by vote of council; the Mayor had nothing to do only that council act. I was opposed to the esplanade and Zwick's Island from the start. I didn't think we needed that kind of work to give the men, but now times have changed and men should get work for what they get. They realize that and the majority are willing and glad to work. For the past six months they have pleased for it.

Levelling of Island

"I have a plan that has been presented since last summer's work, that means the levelling of Zwick's Island, filling in the marsh, the building of necessary roads and the construction of a beach. As Mayor of your city I give you my word this work for a moment, except for the work it would give the men, I do not consider the esplanade for a minute. There is too much water to float tied up in that, there is too great cost, and there's not enough work for that many men for the expenditure involved. I can't see how I could conscientiously spend the citizens' money on it.

"The Zwick's Island project has been brought up to the considered attention of the Parks Board, and they agree to the work as long as certain specifications are followed out. The cost of the material for the work has been all guaranteed for me so there is almost the last man how many can be put on the job.

Work or No Relief

"The workers will work consecutive hours for the same wages as others received. Unless the man really tries to keep his end up he will get nothing. Whether they get cash or vouchers is up to the city to say, and work to be finished to his stated hours for the month to be through until the Parks Board and the Relief Board want the top taken off and the fill used for other low spots. When the land is levelled the whole island will be just two feet higher than the present lowest point. The place may be no good for the next twenty years, but the work will have been supplied to the men when they needed it. And we won't have disturbed the city with a huge debenture debt to pay off."

"The idea is a splendid one," stated Mr. G. A. C. Web, "but I'd like to see it kept to the tax rate down. The city at present is in splendid shape and it must be kept there. Two or three years of slow going and we'll be ahead. At a recent meeting of the School Board committee it was agreed upon that the East Side playing grounds should be levelled. That's something else that could be taken care of."

Esplanade Suggested

Ex-Mayor Reid followed: "Congratulations to the School Board; they wouldn't let us do that work when I was Mayor. Zwick's Island—I still have a carefully prepared plan of improvement of the Island in my office, one that was presented to Premier Henry some time ago. That would be made a beautiful spot, if it is tiled and drained. I would suggest also that a double road be made to the Island. Regarding the esplanade. Too many people like the view better at Dalhousie. There is nothing that would give the men of Belleville more work. There are some talk of having to finish it in one year. That's not the way. We have to be secured before the work could start."

Mr. Reid—Yes, but you don't want to build it all at once. Many of the owners would be willing to let their property go cheap if they are the work go through. $56,000 was all the property was priced at when the work was done. Of that sum at present would be paid for by the government.

Only Few Benefited, Says Mayor.

Mayor Tice:—The points I am against the esplanade appears to be of a benefit for only a certain few. Only a few owners would have to pay for. They say that parking congestion would be eliminated. Yet what council and I was opposed to the esplanade and Zwick's Island from the start. I didn't think we needed that kind of work to give the men, but now times have changed and men should get work for what they get. They realize that and the majority are willing and glad to work. For the past six months they have pleased for it.

Mayor Tice for his consideration.

Fuel Supply

Before adjournment a committee composed of Mr. G. A. C. Web, K. V. Illsley and ex-Mayor Reid was named to investigate the matter of fuel supply for the coming winter. The question of whether the city will be supplied with standing wood lot timber or be supplied through contract from local wood dealers was left to committee.

Mayor Tice had previously been approached by a township resident with the offer of a standing wood lot, at a cheap price. In the opinion of Mr. G. A. C. Web would mean the setting up or a city wood yard. According to him a local fuel dealer who approached him and explained the matter, no appreciable saving would be made in this manner but wood would be as cheaply supplied to the city by tender in quantity lots.

LAKE SHORES ARE SEARCHED

10-Ton Schooner Thought By Indians To Have Foundered

Winnipeg, Sept. 7 (CP)—Rock bound shore of Elk Island, tiny uninhabited spot in Lake Winnipeg, near Victoria Beach, 85 miles north of here, are being thoroughly combed in hope of finding trace of the missing auxiliary schooner "Breeze" and her crew of two—T. Haddick and his nephew, James Edgerton. The 10-ton, double masted schooner has been missing for more than two weeks.

The reports from Indian fishermen sent searchers to Elk Island. They reported seeing the "Breeze" with sails set, heading in the direction of the island on August 29th. Later, a terrific storm swept the lake and the Indians believe she foundered.

Haddick and his nephew, both residents of Winnipeg, have not been heard from since August 29 when they left a Lake Winnipeg port bound for Victoria Beach.

Flying boats and land parties have continued an extensive search during the past few days, despite inability, heavy smoke clouds from forest fires blanketing the lake at times, has hampered the aerial search.

KING FEISAL DIES

family, which culminated in reports that 600 Assyrian Christians were massacred.

The King, broken in health, was deeply angered by these charges, which undoubtedly contributed to weaken his heart. He was gravely ill when he came to London only a few days ago, and his physicians, although realizing the treatment in Switzerland, at first were not apprehensive of his ability to stand the journey.

While it was generally known that the ruler's health had failed, he was a shock even to members of his entourage. His intention was to remain here two weeks, then go by air to his capital, Bagdad.

Feisal was succeeded by his brother Ali, who is in charge of fun-damental arrangements.

King Feisal was born in 1885, at Taif, the son of Sharif Hussein ibn Ali, descendant of Hashmah, the only surviving child of the Prophet. He was educated in Turkey, but escaped to Mecca.

After the Great War, he played an important part with Colonel Lawrence and T. E. Lawrence in Arab revolts. In 1920 he was elected to the Syrian throne by a plebiscite.

Denies Fanaticism

On his arrival here the monarch in an interview insisted there was no fanaticism against Assyrian Christians in Iraq.

"The Iraq government only did what any civilized law-abiding government would have done — it stamped out an attempt of a small minority of rebels to over-throw order and authority he said.

He declared his relations with Great Britain, which the mandate gave up its mandate over the young Kingdom, were "very good."

Before retiring last night he conferred at length with Premier Henry Tid on Intercaden, Switzerland, for lunch, and returned about three p.m. yesterday, after an unscheduled stop.

Professor Charles Kocher, a noted doctor, was called and a nurse also remained in attendance during the night. When an inquiry was made about the Monarch's health at 10.30 o'clock, a Palestinian expressed himself as satisfied.

Turn For Worse

A few minutes before midnight, however, the patient took a turn for the worse and he died at 12.30 a.m. The body was taken to the Anatomical Institute, a clinic. It will be sent to Iraq possibly today or tomorrow.

The brother, former King Hodjaz, who was stopping at a hotel near Berne, was immediately summoned.

King Feisal's heir is Prince Ghazi who is 21.

ARM OF CHILD BROKEN

Campbellford, Sept. 8.—When he collided with a cart as he was cycling down English Church Hill on his wagon here last night, Gordon Clary sustained a broken left arm. He was treated by Dr. S. S. Brintnell and allowed to go home.

THE MODERN CAR

THE FORD V-8 is The Modern Car. Modern in its distinctive lines. Modern in its eight-cylinder design and performance. As Henry Ford himself says—"The V-8 is the coming car for the majority of drivers. It will be only a short time until motor manufacturing practice will follow the trail we have blazed."

That's something to keep in mind when you are deciding on which automobile to buy. You don't want to buy a car today that's going to be old-fashioned and out of date a year from now.

The Ford V-8 is revolutionizing the industry because it is an entirely new kind of eight-cylinder car. No longer need you deny yourself the satisfaction of an eight because of high price. No longer need you worry about cost of operation and up-keep.

The Ford V-8 sells as low or lower than cars with fewer cylinders. And don't let anybody tell you that it isn't as economical to run. Talk to owners of this 1933 V-8 and they will show you exact cost records of 22 to 25 miles per gallon of gasoline. Practically the only car that will beat these figures is the New Ford Four.

In fairness to yourself—for the greatest dollar-for-dollar value—see and ride in the big New Ford V-8. We challenge any low-price or medium-price car to match its quality, performance, and economy.

The Weakening Agony of Piles (Haemorrhoids) Ended

Thousands Bless This Famous Herbal Ointment

Piles or haemorrhoids cause excruciating pain and often serious loss of blood. The famous Zam-Buk ointment is wonderfully soothing to the sensitive veins and itching parts. Zam-Buk derives its healing and mildly astringent influence from herbal extracts of special value in this weakening and agonizing complaint. Zam-Buk has a wonderful record of success.

THE BEST OF PROOF

Mrs. R. Archer Miller of Bells Corners, Sandwich, California, a nurse, writes as follows:—"My husband suffered from Piles for years, but a year ago he began using Zam-Buk and has found neither time nor money lost by work. He had medical advice, tried all sorts of baths, hot packs, creams and ointments which cost him hundreds of dollars without any benefit or relief. Finally a friend gave him a box of Zam-Buk after application of one day he obtained a good night's rest. He continued the treatment and by the time he had finished a second box he was completely relieved of this dreadful ailment which so many suffer from."

Mrs. F. Barrett, Pioneer, Alberta, writes:—"My husband suffered from Piles for over seven years and was a young girl and I have known him in his awful misery, which has been troubled with itching piles and antiseptic wash. Zam-Buk soon stops all pain and itching. It gets at the root of such troubles as eczema, salt rheum, bad legs, ulcers, scalp disease, poisoned sores, etc., and is also a fine ever-ready first-aid for injuries. Weddings

SMART—ELLIOTT

Ottawa. Sept. 8.— All Saints' Church, Westboro, was the scene of the wedding at ten o'clock yesterday afternoon of Charlotte Winnifred, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Elliott, of Westboro to Mr. Hubert Hunter Smart, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Smart, of Toronto. Early autumn garden flowers in variety decorated the church. Mr. H. Webster, the church organist, played the wedding music, and Col. the Rev. R. H. Stacey officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. George Elliott, of Trenton, and was attended by her sister, Miss Dorothy Elliott, and by the groom's sister, Miss Anne Smart, of Toronto as bridesmaids. Mr. Ernest C. Elliott, a brother of the bride, attended the groom as best man.

A lovely gown of triple sheer white crepe and a turban of the same material was worn by the bride. She carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses. The bridesmaids were gowned alike in frocks, fashioned with velvet turbans, and accessories in the contrasting colors. Miss Elliott wearing blue lace with pink accessories, and Miss Smart pink lace with blue accessories. They carried sheafs of asters.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott, when Mr. and Mrs. Smart left for a wedding trip to Montreal and Quebec City. The bride's travelling costume was a powder blue sharkskin suit, a grey felt hat and grey accessories. They will take up residence in Toronto.

Guests from out-of-town included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smart, and Miss Annie Smart, Miss Lulie Elliott and Mr. and Mrs. Percy Wootter, all of Toronto, Mr. George Elliott, of Trenton, and Mr. Walter Elliott of Halifax.

MARSHALL—HILTON

St. Thomas' Church, lovely with late summer flowers, was the scene of a very pretty wedding at twenty-thirty this afternoon, when Doris, daughter of Mrs. Alice Hilton, of Carleton street, became the bride of Mr. Thomas Robert Marshall, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Marshall of Port Erie. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. L. Geen.

The bride entered the church as wedding music was played by Mr. Chas. Sleicher. She was given in marriage by Mr. N. Nixon of Trenton, and wore a charming picture in her gown of white silk organdie fashioned in Empire style with long flaring skirt. Her full circular veil of tulle fell in graceful folds from a small velvet turban and she carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

Miss Carrie Cannida, and Miss Dorothy Canning, cousins of the groom, were bridesmaids and looked very dainty in picturesque dresses of silk organdie, made in similar style, the former in pale peach and the latter in orchid, with matching hats and accessories. They carried pink roses.

Mr. Murray Knapp of Port Erie, was groomsman while Mr. Leonard Jackson of Port Erie, and Mr. J. Walter Hilton, the bride's brother, acted as ushers.

After the ceremony a reception was held at 23 Isabel street, several guests being present. Mrs. Hilton, mother of the bride, wore a handsome gown of poudre blue crepe with a shoulder bouquet of roses, black velvet accessories while Mrs. Marshall, the groom's mother, was smartly attired in yellow silk organdie, with a shoulder bouquet of roses, brown hat and accessories.

The rooms were prettily with gladioli and summer flowers the gifts of Mr. Alfred Symons and Mrs. Frank Post.

The groom's gift to the bride was a wedding of pearls and to the bridesmaids, Marcasite pendants, to the groomsman a Rolls Razor and to the ushers gold tie pins.

Later the bride and groom left on a motor on a wedding trip to Eastern cities, The bride travelled in a smart ensemble of Parma brown with corduroy velvet wrap and a cloche hat of velvet in the same shade. On their return they will take up residence at Port Erie.

Great-Grandmothers Are At Baptismal Service At Moira

On Sunday, August 27th, Ivan Coulter Clare, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Coulter, Moira, and Carl Eugene Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Reid, (nee Dorothy Coulter), were baptized by Rev. H. Herrington at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Coulter, Moira.

Among those present, besides the parents, were the great-grandparents:—Mr. and Mrs. George Clare, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Coulter (nee Reid), Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Coulter (parents of Mrs. Albert E. Clare and Mrs. Milton J. Reid), and the great-grandmothers, Mrs. Hugh Coulter (mother of Samuel Coulter) and Mrs. Walter Carleton (mother of Mrs. Samuel Coulter). Other relatives and friends were present, making the great-grandmothers, each aged 84, signed the baptismal certificates as witnesses. Snapshots were taken after the ceremony.

The two great-grandmothers present, Mrs. Wm. Coulter and Mrs. Carleton, are the only old people around. Mr. Herrington has passed into pastoral care of octogenarians and two nonagenarians.

W. M. S. Executive of Kingston Presbyterial Meets

The executive of Kingston Presbyterial W.M.S. met at the home of the President, Mrs. Geo. Reid, Brock street, on Wednesday afternoon with a good representation present.

Meeting was opened with prayer which was followed by the reading of the minutes of previous executive by the Recording Secretary, Mrs. Bowles.

The itinerary of Miss Lamont, Field Secretary, was discussed, after which every auxiliary in the Presbyterial will have an opportunity to hear this talented speaker.

On motion of Mrs. Seymour and seconded by Mrs. Bowles, Kingston was elected conveyor of the nominating committee for 1934.

Miss Cameron of Camden East, was appointed delegate to attend the Detroit Board meeting in the capacity of the Presbyterial.

The Treasurer's report was given by Miss Cameron, showing a total of $1,106.92 having been received to date, this amount being applied in advance of the sum receiving for the full eight months of 1933.

An invitation to hold the next Summer Presbyterial in West Huntingdon was gratefully accepted.

It was also agreed to interview Presbytery with the suggestion to hold a joint meeting at the same time and place.

A motion was also passed requesting Council to reconsider the activities and duties of Mission Band, full of new Life Members in Glad Tidings.

At the conclusion of the meeting tea was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Ranson and Mrs. Rutherford.

HELD RECEPTION

A reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hanson, William street, on Saturday, Sept. 2nd., in honor of the marriage of their son, Kenneth, to Dorothy Turner of Toronto.

Sixty-five guests were served to a dainty lunch, after which the bride thanked her guests for the beautiful presents she received. All enjoyed the motor trip through the town to the strains of tin, old "tin can" music and some dancing was enjoyed by the young folks. All left around midnight after wishing the bride and groom many many happy years together.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson will reside in Montreal.

Riversides Rally in Seventh to Eliminate Bearcats by Score of 11 to 2 at Trenton

"Cats" Play Fine Game But Trenton Bats Connect In Seventh

3 COSTLY ERRORS

Twelve Hits Made By Home Team To Bearcats' Seven

Trenton, Sept. 8 (Special)—With their backs to the wall and faced with elimination the Trenton Riverside Dairy softball team staged one of the most thrilling last minute rallies ever seen in the annals of softball in Trenton to defeat the Belleville Delancy Bearcats by the score of 11 to 2 at Bayside Park here last evening. The Trenton win eliminates the Belleville entry from further competition in the O.A.S.A. play-downs while the win entitles the Riversides to enter the second round with the winner of the Oshawa-Peterboro series, now in progress.

For over six innings Earl "Sonny" Green who hurled for the visitors, silenced the bats of the local batsmen, restricting them to six hits, including a home run by Art Scarlett in the sixth. In the rectic 7th however, the local bats rang out with extra base hits that resulted in seven runs being scored in their favor. Bunched hits and hard smashing singles pounded out by the locals knocked the elusive Green off of Green and he was later replaced by Johnnie Bawden, who pitched little more than a safe journ on the hilltop and was replaced by Harry Riddle in the eighth after three runs had been scored.

Herb Chambers was Manager Smith's choice to start the game but after yielding a run in the 4th the local hurler seemed to weaken and was relieved by Ralph Ingalls by Clem Loughlin, who finished the contest, allowing not only blanked the Bearcats for the remainder of the game but received credit them to two singles in the five innings he pitched. The seventh was the most prolific hitter of the game when his big bat resounded lustily and rounded it home run, a triple and a single. Ken Chambers connected safely for a triple and a single while Steenburg counted a double and a single with Captain Roy Smith blasting out a triple in the bottom of the 7th. All of the local batsmen hit for the pigskin. Only one extra base hit was registered by the visiting team, George Jenkinson counting a double in the 4th inning. Ralph Ingalls called on the plate on a close play. The diminutive catcher of the Delancy boys seen registered by the Bearcats.

The Bearcats committed three costly errors during the game while the Riversides played errorless ball throughout. The Bearcats were minus the services of their regular catcher, Lawrence Tuttle through illness.

The lineups:

Trenton—K. Chambers ss, Alexander sf, Scarlett 3b, Smith 1b, Ingalls c, Loughlin ph, Ingalls cf, Chase lf, H. Chambers 2b, Dublin p.

LEADERS LOCK IN REAL TIE FOR PLAY-OFF

Buffalo Leads By Very Narrow Margin

THURSDAY'S GAMES

(By Herbert Barker Associated Press Sports Writer).

Toronto Maple Leafs, Montreal Royals and Buffalo Bisons were locked in a virtual tie for the 4th International League playoff position today with the end of the regular season only three days away.

Buffalo's 13-5 trouncing of Rochester Red Wings, coupled with Montreal's 9-7 victory over Toronto left the three clubs so closely bunched that a blanket would cover them and sent the experts into a battle royal as to the outcome of the race. The net result of these calculations gave him in the smallest fraction of a percentage point ahead of Toronto and Montreal another fraction behind as follows:

Club	Won	Lost	Pct
Buffalo	81	54	.600
Toronto	79	52	.603
Montreal	79	52	.6066

Charley Perkins, just recalled by Jack Dunn from Baltimore, clubbed for Buffalo as the Bisons thumped Rochester under a 5-hit barrage wit hthree apiece going to Ollie Carnegie and Jack Smith. Carnegie was relieved by Lefty Sewell after he had been working between innings.

Milton Stock, in bowing to Montreal, suffered his fifth successive beating. Erwin Stuthman also was driven his and would have had a shutout but for his own wildness. The Ryan brothers, Joe and Blix, of the Leafs until the sixth when the Royals got five hits in a row, after two were out and scored seven runs. Slim Sitzmore's homer with two on and Cliff Mellon's steady pitching gave Baltimore Orioles a 3-2 victory over Newark Bears who already have clinched first place. At that Newark's loss of its season's greatest pitching streaks was shattered.

When Margin Duke was lifted after four fifth inning it marked the first time in 14 successive games that Newark's starting pitcher failed to go the route.

Albany clubbed out six hits for five runs in the fifth inning and beat Jersey City.

GIANTS LOSE MUCH OF LEAD

May Now Have To Fight To Hold To First Place

(By Hugh S. Fullerton Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer).

The Giants ended a slump of a few days ago as a matter of importance only to Pittsburgh Pirates, second place club in the National League, moved into its final stage today looking like a routine matter indeed for New York Giants.

The league leaders, beaten in three of the first four games, had proved of the Cubs' class but almost had to win the final clash in order to enjoy any degree of safety during the remainder of their western tour. Their margin was reduced to 5 1-2 by the 14-2 drubbing they administered the Cubs yesterday would leave them a slim working margin of six games when they reached Cincinnati, followed by series against Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals, who seem to be almost unbeatable on their home grounds.

Heinie Meine did a neat job of blanking the Giants yesterday, allowing them 10 hits including a homer by rookie Phil Weintraub and fanning five out of a few tight spots. Roy (Bus) Parmelee couldn't get the Reds out.

They blasted him from the slit after four straight innings, a sensational record, and a tribute to the brilliance in the Cincy infield. Adolfo Luque managed to end the inning. Luque went on to hurl four-run ball in the third, Lefty Clark gave up a few more runs and Sam Bohne and Si Johnson finished up.

Although the local pitching staff has been holidaying at Crowe Lake, Mrs. Bleecker of Montreal was a week-end guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bleecker.

Mr. Magee Sanderson of Hamilton visited at his home here, over the weeke-nd.

Mr. Donald Marett is holidaying in Toronto.

Little Miss Joan O'Connor has returned after visiting in Niagara Falls for the past month.

Mr. M. Moss of Kingston was in town on Wednesday.

Mrs. M. Hughes, and family have returned to Belleville, having spent the summer months at Crowe Lake.

SOMERVILLE FACES TASK

37th Titular Hunt Opens At Cincinnati On Monday

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 8 (CP) and Just a year ago golfing stars and spectators at the Pine Valley Farms course at Baltimore were wont to pass a silent minute seated on a log near the home fairway.

He was a comedian in the United States amateur golf championship that year, some knew he didn't. No one disturbed him, for as a matter of fact none of the critics or even the onlookers gave this quiet young from artist a thought.

Today found the same silent, sandy-haired athlete the centre of all eyes.

He is C. R. (Sandy) Somerville, London, Ont., returned across the border to defend the crown he won in such surprising fashion at Pine Farms.

It is only the second time since 1896 that a golfer other than a native of United States has defended the Havemeyer trophy, Harold Hilton, Briton of bulldog tenacity on the links, won the championship in 1911 but failed to retain it.

Somerville faces what appears an even more difficult task than Hilton. The man who appears his most dangerous foe is Johnny Goodman, United States open champion who arrived here yesterday. Goodman is seeking revenge for the sound lacing the Londoner gave him in the amateur final last year.

Sandy simply were Goodman down by his boring-in tactics. The rugged training he had received in Ontario amateur golfing matches, in football games and on the cricket pitch had given the Canadian a physique far too powerful for Goodman to cope with.

Two down at the end of the last nine, Sandy just tightened his belt, went on to victory by winning the 32th, 36th and 30th holes in succession from the same opponent who lacked the stamina of his Canadian opponent. Today Sandy will fare in the 37th titular hunt starting Monday at the Kenwood Country Club course is a matter of great speculation.

CHABOT GIVES UP HOCKEY FOR GOOD

Toronto, Sept. 8.—(CP)—Lorne Chabot, Toronto Maple Leaf net-minder, announced today that he retired from hockey. A new position with a dairy company secured by his presence here all year and he has decided a business career holds more for him than the few more months he might play big league hockey.

Knocks and Boosts

Belleville's five junior golfers, who participated on the Ontario junior golf tournament recently, returned home with creditable scores. Dave Allen, with a total of 169 consigned while Billie Cook also turned in a score card that made him one of Belleville's future golf experts. The participants were all new aspirants to golfing honors and severe weather conditions which prevailed in their efforts to negotiate the A steady downpour of rain with a strong wind to boot, greeted the stars, Jack Carman, Al Faulkner, Harold Doyle were the other three to compete from Belleville. The other members of the Bay of Quinte district team, which won honor in the local juniors played, are Bill Hall and Bill Smith, both of their junior members.

The latest O.S.S.A. bulletin issued during the week-end places Belleville junior game being played in Belleville on Saturday, Sept. 16th, when the schools will play off to see which the Crystalcurs were to play in Trenton. Belleville will play the second game being played here on Wednesday the 20th. The winners of the Young immediately get into competition with Cardinals, who were to be almost unbeatable on their home grounds.

Heinie Meine did a neat job of blanking the Giants yesterday, allowing them 10 hits including a homer by rookie Phil Weintraub and fanning five out of a few tight spots. Roy (Bus) Parmelee couldn't get the Reds out.

They blasted him from the slit after four straight innings, a sensational record, and a tribute to the brilliance in the Cincy infield. Adolfo Luque managed to end the inning. Luque went on to hurl four-run ball in the third, Lefty Clark gave up a few more runs and Sam Bohne and Si Johnson finished up. A considerable degree as the "big blonde" of the world play baseball when he so desired.

Rigby was considered one of the best junior football players in Eastern Ontario last fall but, he'll find a world of difference between junior interscholastic and senior Intervarsity football. On the other hand when the local collegiate team downed the Queen's Juniors last fall Coach Bill Shaw of the Tri-color stated, after the game that Rigby was one of the best junior gridders he had seen in many years.

Schools having reopened, it suggest this problem for next month's If Car Wood or Scott-Paine fell out of a power boat going at the rate of 80 miles an hour, he would be thrown with a certain force from what height in the air would he have to fall, any of a hundred to hit the water with equal force?

The sports columnist of the Peterboro Examiner seemed somewhat upset after the Crystalcurs defeat of the Kingston sports editor relating to the fact that he placed the decision of the Peaks from the C.O. R. Rowing Club. Littlest scribe did not mince his words but on the contrary stated that the Peaks were unnerved all and sundry accessories made by the Kingston scribe after the race. Peterboro scribe as we stated previously "we cannot agree with you on the Peaks unnerved all enter into the picture." The Peterboro scribe should be satisfied with these remarks—"Yeah, next year we'll show you fellows a thing or the Central boys." (We wonder).

Another local team hit the dead last evening when the Delancy Bearcats were eliminated by the Trenton Riverside Dairy nine in a softball game played at Trenton in the O.A.S.S.A. play off by the score of 11 to 2. The Bearcats were unable to get their batting clicks and were held until the seventh when they Riverside Dairy nine in a three-run rally. The Belleville baseball went up and before it decided to call the game had crossed the plate during that frame. Up until the fatal seventh Sonny Green who hurled for the "Cats" find the situation well in hand having allowed but two hits for over six innings.

Congratulations are due the Riverside Dairy softball team somehow they stayed during the entire season in the baseball league in the final game stamps them a baffling team. It is hoped they can add to their string of victories in the next few games.

Dan Howley's Toronto Maple Leafs have been playing hard these days. The Leafs dropped another yesterday to the Royals and were the battle for second place in the northern group of the International loop is on. The Buffalo Bisons, Montreal Royals and Toronto Leafs are bunched together that grapes on a vine. After falling back slightly last month the Pittsburg Pirates have loomed up as a new threat in the National League horizon. The Gibson managed clan have beaten the best two nuines the Giants boast of in so many starts.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

Traders Remain on Sidelines, New York and Other Markets Unable To Make Headway—Mining Shares Move In Narrow Channels—Small Recessions in Gold Stocks—Wheat Recedes on Chicago and Winnipeg Boards.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 8 (CP)— Toronto Stock Exchange listings moved along to a slightly lower level today on light turnover. New York's inability to make definite headway with the early strength of Monday deterred traders to remain on the long line.

Nickel fluctuated between 20.40 and 20.80 and the latter at 20.40 was off 10 cents. Smelters dropped 9 to 130. Brazilian gained 1-4 to 10 7-8. C.P.R. was unchanged at 16 1-3 and Ford A unchanged at 14 1-2.

Distillery shares continued their slow sagging from the price level of Tuesday. Walkers common picked up 3-4. Distillers Seagram 1-2. Industrial Alcohol showed a half and Brewers and Distillers 5 cents to 2.65.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

Winnipeg, Sept. 8—Entire lack of sensitivity to bullish influences of today left wheat futures prices at the close jammed down to the minimum prices allowed by the Grain Exchange Board and exactly where they stood at the opening bell. October was quoted at 70¼, December at 71⅝ and May at 76⅝ cents.

Heights were not maintained throughout the dullest session ever recorded on the exchange and there believed there was even more in sight which had no effect in the face of the "rout." A small quantity of export business, estimated as low as 300,000 bushels, all too small to be lapped up by eager sellers, and futures showed maximum ability to absorb such influences.

The closing wheat board graphically showed the stagnation that prevailed all morning. Open, high and low for all futures registered identical figures, with the close being only an "added" variation of the quote.

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP)— An improved selling movement in the last hour stirred the stock market slightly from its atmosphere of dullness today. Some forenoon losses of fractions to around a point were recovered and a few issues managed to push ahead for net equivalent gains.

American Telephone advanced nearly 3 while Westinghouse, National Distillers, Western Union and American Commercial Alcohol improved around a point each. Union Pacific recovered a couple of points after sagging more than 6. United States Steel was a shade better than steady. Transfers approximated 1,200,000 shares.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 8.—(CP)—Interest in the mining shares was lethargic today and the Standard Exchange closed with prices generally lower. Arrow changed it any from Thursday's finish. Nickel slipped about a fifth as New York fluctuated but recovered and other Base Metal issues held about steady. High-priced gold shares had a majority of small recessions at the close.

Dome, Hollinger, Trax Hughes, Pioneer, Wright Hargreaves and Sylvanite took losses of 5 to 30 cents while Lamaque, Bidgood and Sherritt gained as much.

In the Oil group Alar firmed a 25 cents and Acme a fraction to 25 but Olga, Nordon, Royalite and oil stocks were divided fractionally.

The tone was better for some of the penny mining issues notably Bobjo, Lee Gold, and Central Patricia. The industrials moved up to 55 in heavy trading but succumbed partly to profit-selling.

W. E. KELLEY IS INDUCTED

Becomes Minister of St. Andrew's At Trenton

TRENTON, Sept. 8.—Rev. W. E. Kelley, B.A., B.D., was inducted as minister made pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Trenton, at an induction service conducted in the church last evening at eight o'clock.

Rev. A. E. Cameron of Pittsburg, ex-moderator of the Presbytery of Kingston, acted as chairman during the evening. Rev. R. K. Earle, B.A., Amherst Island, preached the sermon, taking as his subject from Isaiah verse of the nineteenth chapter of St. Luke. In his discourse Rev. Earle pointed out that the latent energy and power that is in one grain and radiating contrasted with the most humble of human minds of loved less than the former and than man's mind. If this was the case how much more wonderful was the personality of Jesus Christ, he asked. Rev. Earle continued, "He wrapped up with himself, a symbol unto himself with the Publican who was aware of his sinfulness and unworthiness, and his need of God. Only the sinful, Christ declared, said the minister, was able to penetrate the veil and see the glorious face of Pharisee and touch the man beneath.

Following the sermon Rev. A. E. Cameron narrated the steps and difficulties that had arisen in the months leading up to the resignation of Rev. C. K. Nicol, who was given a call to Oakville, in May, and the unanimous call extended to Rev. W. E. Kelley of Lethbridge, Alta.

Addressing the newly inducted minister Rev. Dr. J. A. Seymour of Belleville declared that he was quite different when it came to telling another minister how to run his business for everyone had a different method. However, he stated that a minister must have all things a godly man. He pointed out that the greatest work of the ministry were in the line of definite successes in the past and that the 19th century was the day when people were preaching the word of God. "We are living in a day when the truth which is not so easy in our own day," he asserted. "Strive to preserve Fellowship with men as you have done in your other congregations" he said. His observation was that humanness was the great need of the ministry. "Let the minister understood men and women in an intimate way because of humanness. This applied to visitations, and even to that one moment of communion in the valley of the shadow," he concluded.

Rev. S. M. Scott, newly appointed moderator of the Presbytery of Kingston, addressed the congregation exhorting the members of the congregation to give the incoming minister during his pastorate here. Rev. Dr. A. Gandier of Deseronto, Rev. R. J. Craig of Demorestville, also presided and the induction ceremony ended with the singing of the pronouncement of benediction by Rev. Kelley. All visiting ministers and elders of the Town of Trenton were represented at this service—Rev. F. W. Arthur Smith, rector of St. George's Anglican Church, Rev. C. B. Sissons, pastor of Grace United Church, Rev. A. E. Edmison, minister of Bethel United Church and Rev. H. E. Sanderson, pastor of the Trenton Baptist Church.

Following the service a reception was held in the Sunday School rooms.

MONAGHAN—LONG

St. Benedict's church, Detroit, on Saturday, August 26, at eight o'clock, was the scene of a pretty but quiet wedding when Stella Agnes daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Long, Trenton, R.R.- No. 3 was joined in marriage to John Monaghan son, of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Monaghan.

The bride wore a long tight fitting gown of white satin duchesse velvet with quaint sleeves. Her hat was of the same tone of material and she carried a bouquet of Premier roses and baby's breath. Miss Marguerite Long was her sister's attendant. Her gown was of eel grey chiffon velvet with hat and slippers, to match and she carried delphinium roses and baby's breath. Mr. Dan Monaghan acted as groomsman.

Following the nuptials a breakfast was held at the home of the groom's parents.

On Sunday the bride, groom and maid of honor were welcomed at the home of the bride's parents. A sumptuous turkey dinner and reception followed with many relatives and lasting. Mrs. Monaghan received the guests wearing her wedding dress and Mrs. Long also received wearing black lace over crepe romaine. The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful gifts. At midnight a buffet lunch was served. Mrs. M. J. Sweet and Mrs. Asa McDermott were hostesses. The travelling the bride wore a russet green suit with brown accessories. On their return they will reside in Detroit.

AUTOMOBILE IS TAKEN AT TRENTON

Following reports relating to a stolen automobile coming to the attention of the local Provincial Police were police Thursday relating to the theft of a Chevrolet sedan, license plate number O-9664, had been stolen from that town. A search was broken into at Trenton and the automobile stolen, the reports stated. No trace of the stolen car was received up until Friday afternoon.

SHE LOST 32 lbs.

New Frocks No Longer Worried Her

"How did she lose that 12 lbs. of fat?" is what you will be asking. Let her tell herself:—

"About 18 months ago I weighed 178 lbs.—which I can assure you annoyed me very much. Everything seemed a misfit, even my ordinary clothes. Nothing would fit me comfortably, and walking was a real exertion. Then I heard of a friend to try Kruschen Salts and I am glad I did now. After the first ten months I lost 28 lbs of fat. Now, for the last 7 months my weight has been 146 lbs., and I feel much better in health. I have got weight tickets to substantiate my statements."—(Mrs.) M. B.

Kruschen contains the six mineral salts, proportionately balanced found in a bottle of these famous—European Spas used by generations of fat people to reduce weight.

Kruschen helps blood, nerves, glands and body organs to function properly—you gain new strength and energy—feel years younger—look better, work better.

POST FAMILY HAS RE-UNION PICNIC

A very pleasant day was spent at Oak Lake on Thursday, August 31, when a number of Frankford and relatives gathered for one more visit with Mrs. Post who is leaving in a few days for California where he has been living for the past five years. Fay Glenn of Oak Lake drew a picture of happy picnickers, who looked excited with the beauties and everybody glad to see the other fellow, a number having not seen each other for years and some not ever before. The day was ideal and at noon all sat down to the table and the fare's beach was spread and fairly groaning with all good things in eats and sixty laughing, talking, people seated for the feast and after grace was said they all enjoyed the lovely meal.

When dinner was over and cleared away all the lovers of the water donned their bathing suits and spent two happy hours dipping in the lake. They got a real thrill out of the Canadian Rock at Deseronto this a number of races and games were supervised by Mrs. Will Glenn and prizes were given for each. Prizes were also given for the oldest lady present, being Mrs. Lewis Post, of Rossmore; the oldest gentleman, Mr. Walter Post of Belleville; the youngest baby, Carl Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Reid of Stirling; the lady from the longest distance, Jean Pitman, of Toronto, who was also our guest of honour for the day. Jean has spent six years in California and is now returning to her duties there as supervisor in a hospital at San Diego.

During the afternoon the older ones felt that the day was such a successful one and they derived so much pleasure in meeting their relatives and friends that they decided to hold their reunion again next year on the second Wednesday in August at the old home of Mr. and Mrs. Post, the property now of the Fuller Gravel Co., and the Mrs. Dr. V. Allison Fuller station. George Post, one of those honored for the first a day spent on the old farms would bring back many happy memories of early childhood and elected the officers to arrange for next year's reunion as follows: President, Alger Post, Fuller; Sec.-Treas., Elmer Post, West Huntingdon; Press reporter, Mrs. E. Sharpe, Belleville; Sports Committee, Ruth Brough and Milton Reid; Ed Post and Lela Post. All the Posts are invited to attend and trust that next year will bring a much larger attendance.

You'll like this Powder, too...

Everyone knows what a good cleaner Bon Ami Cake is—how well it cleans windows, mirrors, metals, etc. And Bon Ami Powder is equally good. It contains the same scratchless ingredients as the Cake and comes in a sifter-top can.

Most women like to use the Powder form of Bon Ami for cleaning their bathtubs, kitchen sinks, pots and pans, linoleums, painted woodwork, etc.

Bon Ami doesn't scratch the many things it cleans so well, doesn't roughen your hands—and is odorless. In either Powder or Cake form, it cleans quickly and easily ... and polishes as it cleans.

BON AMI

... cleans thoroughly but doesn't scratch.

When the evening had been called to order, Mr. and Mrs. Beckhorn were asked to come forward, which Mrs. Fred Elliott read the following address:

Mrs. Elliot:

Agreeing with the poet that it is "a fortune and happy day, ... When a new household finds its place

Among the myriad homes of earth,"

We, friends and associates of your husband, have assembled this evening with the purpose of extending congratulations and by our presence acknowledging the tie we feel for one, who has decided to us as a bride.

We also extend heartiest congratulations to Mr. Beckhorn in having secured as a life companion a girl who grew up in our midst and whom we still claim as one of us. We feel sure of the fact that professional duties have taken her from us, but not from our minds and girlhood.

Your career Elliot, has been one followed with keen interest, and success, profits.

Having chosen a vocation which demanded both skill and a great best in relieving suffering humanity, you ever accepted the duties, responsibilities and obligations which it brought. And during those years of training and serving King and Country, as did our gallant soldier husbands, you, Gala as the experiences courage, unselfishness, were developed. You had already won for you a place in the hearts of those, who tonight will say Shining within when all without casts gloom.

A guardian angel o'er his life presides

Doubling his pleasures and his cares divides.

We would selfishly wish that your future of residence were near us, that we might enjoy the continuance of happy social intercourse, but realizing ourselves with having experienced the joys of married life, we feel sure and now willingly share that privilege with those who have just entered it. We extend to you both our sincere congratulations. It is our wish that your married life be one of fulfilment of every desire, and that there is a long life of happiness and prosperity before you, with the recollection of friends to cherish.

As a tangible expression of these sentiments, we have pleasure in asking you to accept it as a symbol of our best wishes for your future welfare, and we extend the presentation of a lovely gift of fine silver. Mrs. Fred Elliott replied in a few well chosen words, thanking the friends for their kind and best wishes.

"For they are Jolly Good Fellows" was sung after which cake dainty lunch of sandwiches, cake and coffee was served. Dancing was then enjoyed until the wee small hours.

BARGAIN BRIDE

By KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR © 1933 NEA SERVICE, INC.

Lida remembered her own marriage to Bentwell and how she had to remind herself not to show her scorn of him. She had thought of course, that Miss Sexton would immediately selling "moneylitting decorations" to Bentwell, her nephew. She had Lida knew, been a fool. She had, Lida knew, been an old woman had gone for cowsight. But of course now things would be different.

"I will—" Elinor whispered, head bent.

"I will," came strongly, if not quite steadily, from Harriett. That it was over! Lida unhooped in his his side. Arthur Palmer gave his cheek to an acolyte—and stepped from the chancel as a friend and not a clergyman.

Elinor, oddly dizzy, clung to Barrett. He felt her dependence, flushed more deeply.

"Of course we'll all have lunch together," said Lida.

Barrett smiled quite naturally. "Sorry to bear old Lida's stories of mothers and son-in-law", he said, "but of course we will. Where are going to dine? Aren't we?" he angled with a tenderness that was not unaccustomed, as he turned his head toward Elinor.

"I think—considering everything —" she answered with an effort— "we better not. I will run down—now, I'll look in to see father this afternoon," she added.

"And we'll make up for it by having a real party for you all some day when we can celebrate," Barrett added.

He put his hand over Elinor's and pressed it reassuringly. She was so very young, he realized with a rise of tenderness. Dimly he heard the good wishes that were theirs. With stole stiffened by gold embroidery Lida's dramatically delivered lists. And at last they were alone in the car, piloted by Hutten.

"Well!" Barrett murmured after a sigh, turning toward her. "Feeling better?"

"Yes, thirty. "Are you?"

"I'm a new man. Will you smoke?"

"Yes."

* * * *

He found cigarets and held his lighter to hers laughing suddenly to see how her hand shook. "Still badly knocked" he said. "You're trembling."

She nodded. "But I'm not uncomfortable," she stated. "I'm unusually at ease—considering."

He also was at ease, he realized. He said slowly, "Odd, isn't it? I feel the same way."

They were silent for a space. Then Barrett asked. "Your bags were sent to my—our home?"

"Yes. There are a few trunks on the way, too. I hope I won't be a great bother."

"Oh, no! And you'll remember my promise to make it as easy for you as possible?"

"Yes thank you."

The car came to a standstill. They were at home. Barrett opened the door before Hutten could reach it. Higgins admitted them, bowing low and trembling with excitement. Elinor smiled and, rather shyly, offered a few words to the butler. His eyes brightened as he murmured, "Thank you, Mrs. Colvin—"

He was going to be able to keep her, he saw, as he had hoped he might.

"We're home," said Barrett.

"Oh, I like it!" A sudden sweep of consciousness took Elinor speak in an undertone.

"Even that bad rack?"

"Yes," she insisted. "It makes me think of New Year's calls and people always ready to go to Reno slogan.

"That's exactly the reason I've kept it," he said, wondering at her understanding. He added quickly, "But anything," he added quickly, "that you don't like can be changed."

"But I think everything looks splendid," she answered, and to day she would tell him that it was a relief to get away from Lida's self-conscious "modern" furnishings into the coldness of the old place. Lida, she knew, secretly had lived happily among things they knew.

* * * *

"I think," Barrett said now, "that Higgins had had your bags taken upstairs. May I show you the way?"

"I think you'd better, don't you?" Elinor answered, as she smiled at Higgins who was well down the long hall.

"There's a landing and an extra step at the head of the stairs. I want you to be careful to remember it. I can't have my balustrade all chipping up by your falling against it."

He couldn't remember when he had felt so young, so inclined to foolish jest, so happy.

She laughed. He had the power, she was learning, to take from her all feeling of restraint.

"I do like the house," she said over shoulder, mounting upward.

"It's rather nice, else," he reminded her. "Your room opens into the one I've used all my life—he told her stiffly as they reached the upper hall. "The door has a key on your side—but there's one day I think it would be best to keep it open. I've had a door between variants—"

"I understand. I—I don't need the key—"

"Thank you," he answered low, he pushed the door open and she stepped into the room—the pretties room, she thought, that she had ever seen. It was gay with soft, rose chintzes and comfortable with deep chairs. There was no old casacious empty book-shelves on either side of a fire-place, a paddle topped English fire guard around the hearth, small tables, a desk, telephones guarded by a Florentine cabinet, long mirrors, one set in the windows, a chaise longue.

"When did you do this?" she asked wonderingly. "Or have it done?" It was obviously new, extraincingly fresh. The rug was so soft beneath her feet. There were pillows, many pillows and all so pretty.

"Last night," he answered. "Or rather since yesterday noon. It was a rush order so you may—I suppose you smile—find many things missing."

She said with chilling, wonder and pleasure, "It's lovely!"

He had not meant to but he could not help taking her hand to hold between his. "I want you to be as happy as you can be—here with me," he said soberly.

CHAPTER 25

Elinor said firmly, "The most important thing is this: I don't want to bother you. Not in the least!"

"You won't!" Barrett answered. Lord how he wanted to kiss her, to say, "Don't be afraid of me. We will do our best to make a go of this as long as we must!"

Instead he patted her hands, "Powder your nose," he said briskly, "and come down to lunch. I suppose it's to be a hang-up affair. The cook will want to show you just how skilful she is. And I heard Higgins ordering enough flowers for a hothouse. By the way the bath is behind the door to the right," he turned to survey the room with critical eyes. "I left those shelves empty so you can fill them with the books you really want. Meantime there is a selection in my room from which you may be able to choose something that will send you to sleep. Is that right light working, I wonder?"

He moved toward the head of the narrow, four-posted mahogany bed to pull the small chain. "Yes, it's all right," he said with satisfaction. He was at the doorway when she hailed him. "Barrett—"

He wheeled, again moved toward her. "Yes?"

"—I can't thank you enough or for all this—" Her face, lifted to his, was infinitely appealing in its gratitude.

"I'm awfully glad you like it," he said. "I had a suspicion (smiling) that you might be rather fed-up with Chinese red and modernistic furnishings in general."

"I was," she agreed.

"I'll telephone to ask how your father's been," he said, "any report at luncheon. It's to be served in a half past one if that suits you."

"Perfectly. And thank you so much for everything!"

He smiled at her from the doorway leading to his room, gave her an airy salute and was gone, closing the door after him.

* * * *

For a moment she stood staring at the closed door. Then once more she turned and looked around her. It was a lovely room. Lovely!

Her travelling bags had been placed in the adjoining dressing room. Elinor opened them, and, looking over her frocks, suddenly wished she had something that was very, very pretty to wear down to luncheon. She finally selected a soft tan silk frock which brought out the warmth of her hair. Celeste had said it was becoming. She must remember to tell Celeste. Quick handkerchief into her sleeve in order to show it to Barrett.

She groaned her hair in a roll at the back of her neck. She had worn it that way during those falsely happy days when Barrett had spent so much time with her. He had admired it that way.

Then, looking at the small clock on the mantelpiece, she hesitated. It was only one o'clock. It seemed impossible that her watch would could have changed as it had in the course of an hour. She would wait down but she did not want to intrude upon Barrett's privacy. If he would not want her to come down before she must. As she hesitated there was a knock at the door. She opened it to find Hiwstna, the stenographer of the perfectly lovely Harriett's face erased by the smile he tried to conceal.

Mr. Colvin, said the butler, had sent word that he wished to speak to Mrs. Colvin. Would she John him down stairs whenever she was ready?

"Thank you, Higgins," Elinor said. She waited until after a short deep breath she stepped into the upper hall. Barrett's head stared up at the foot of the stairs, one hand on a newel post, looking up at her.

"Look out for that treacherous step," he warned. Nevertheless he found he could not keep his eyes from her face. Lord, how lovely she had never seen her looking more beautiful.

"I've good news for you!" he announced. At his words she hesitated two steps up, her face level with his. "Your father's nurse Miss Hemmingway—I think I've answered my call and said that for the first time your father has shown a real improvement."

"Oh!" she whispered on a deep intake of breath. "I am so glad—"

"I wanted you to know right away—I understand what it means to you."

"It means everything," she stalled in a hush.

* * * *

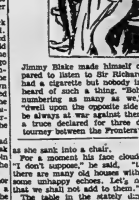
He smiled gently at her. "Suppose we go into the library," he suggested. "You haven't seen it, have you? Odd how old houses intrigue one. Mine always has done. Remember the bushed, important way Miss Ella always spoke of her library?"

The girl laughed, nodding.

She liked this cool room to which he led her. Its solidity spoke of all she had missed without knowing it. The room had a look of plenty and of peace. She could not imagine her mother writhing for money in that room or anyone planning to retrieve a bad bargain. "It seems a comfortable place," he added across the table.

"I think you must have been thoughtful" she murmured. Suddenly she was shy.

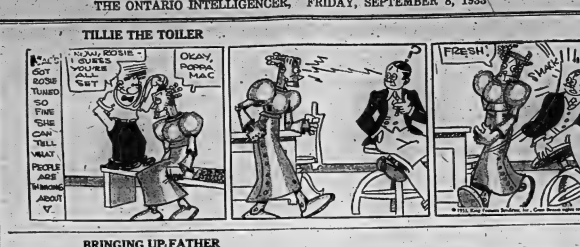
Jimmy Blake made himself considerable as he prepared to fight for his friend's honor. He wished he had a cigarette but nobody in all Nimmy had even heard of such a thing. "Schun and his followers, numbering as many as we," began Sir Richard, "dwell upon the opposite side of the valley and we shall have to fight against them. Only once a year is a truce declared for three days, when is held the tourney between the Frontiers and the Backers."



"What the heck are the Frontiers and the Backers?" demanded Blake, sitting up with sudden interest in his new surroundings.

"Thou art a Knight of Nimmr and know not their names?" exclaimed Sir Richard. "What I mean about knighting, would rattle around in a peanut shell!" laughed Blake. "Hark well, then," said Richard, "while I explain, for I must go back to the very beginning."

Pouring two goblets of wine from a flagon, Richard took a long quaff and proceeded with the tale.



"Richard the 1st, my ancestor," said Blake's friend proudly, "sailed from Sicily in the spring of 1191 with his army following to meet the King of France at Acre. With him, they were to wrest the Holy Land from the infidels. It befell that two of the ships were wrecked upon the shore of their native country. Blown from their course, they were wrecked upon the African shore. One of these companies was commanded by a knight named Bohun. The other by one Gobred.

"Searching for Jerusalem, they became rivals and enemies. They came upon this valley which Bohun's followers declared was the Vale of the Sepulcher, a was customary when Crusaders reached their goal. They were so pleased that they set up camps for many years returning noone. But Gobred insisted that this was not the Holy Land. Therefore the crusade was not accomplished and his followers retained their crosses upon their breasts."

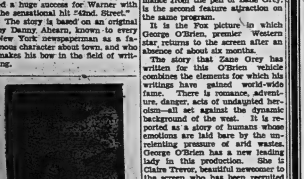
What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

According to Hollywood preview critics, "Picture Snatcher," which opens Saturday for three days at the Capitol Theatre, provides James Cagney with the most exciting story of his entire motion picture career, with comedy drama and romance in profusion.



This comedy-drama is said to have every element that makes for pure entertainment of the kind that fits the fast moving, hard hitting Cagney personality. The socking young Irishman is placed in this story in the field of yellow journalism. As an ex-gangster who wants to go straight, he gets a job on a lurid tabloid on which no self-respecting reporter will work. This job consists of getting news pictures somehow when legitimate methods fail. If he can't get them with a camera, then stealing is not frowned upon by his employers. This small and rare phase of yellow journalism was chosen as providing a more vivid background for James Cagney than would the large field of legitimate journalism.

This picture is also said to be a triumph for Patricia Ellis, the young actress who came to the front for the first time recently with George Arliss in "The King's Vacation," and who is now rapidly building her way up to stardom.

Wyndham Alice White is cast in a prominent role as the tabloid's sob sister, and is said to be on the receiving end of Cagney's ungentleness when she tries to "muzz" him.

The direction was in the hands of Lloyd Bacon, who recently scored a huge success for Warner with the sensational hit "42nd. Street."

The story is based on an original by Danny Ahearn, known to every New York newspaperman as a famous character about town, and who makes his bow in the field of writing.

JAMES CAGNEY, as the daring resourceful tabloid photographer in "Picture Snatcher," opening Saturday at the Capitol Theatre.

Devil's Playground

Harpooning a Giant Ray—twenty-five feet across the flippers and weighing 2,000 lbs.—and subduing it after an exciting battle.

A fight-to-the-death between a Tiger-Shark and a deadly Barracuda, the lone sentinel of the sea, Barracuda fits jail or shark out of water and kills it.

Snagging the man-eating Shark with hand-lines from a tripod and landing him after a desperate battle.

Taken for a wild ride by a monster Whale after harpooning him from a small boat. Three men in the boat being whirled through the water at a dizzy pace in the wake of the monster. Pumping the whale full of hot lead to make him say "Uncle."

Catching the Sailfish, one of the games fish that swims, by flying a kite attached to the line. When the Sailfish takes the bait, the kite is released in a split second.

Picturesque primitive life and around the San Blas Indian village, thru the Panama Canal on the East Coast.

These pars, give some idea of what is expect from "Devil's Playground" the second feature at the Capitol on Saturday.

Monday and Tuesday are dinner-ware gift days for ladies.

Hamish Monroe in "The Barber Ian" ends tonight.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—(CP)—Six times the Rev. Keene Ryan's motor car was stolen and six times he said nothing to the police but recovered it himself. When it was stolen for the seventh time, he lost patience, called the police and said:

"If the car is not returned by mid-night Thursday I'll send the chief to the penitentiary."

Thursday afternoon he got it back. Police found it about 'dressed and undamaged.

AT THE BELLE

Good News for Screen Fans in Belleville and Vicinity

Slim Summerville and Zazu Pitts the screen's funniest comedy team, return to the Belle Theatre Saturday and Monday, matinee daily. In the starring roles of "Her First Mate," most hilarious of the famous pair's popular series of feature comedies. As husband and wife they are the centre of a side-splitting tale which is filled with laugh-able incidents, and complications which will keep you in a continual roar of laughter. Slim catches with excitement when he sees the dapped Ella ferry, boat blow up at the dock of their little town on Long Island Sound, but he doesn't know that the agitated Zazu has bought it with her life savings as a present for him! "Her First Mate" is taken from a famous story. It was a successful Broadway play entitled "Salt Water" by Dan Jarrett, John Golden and Frank Craven. It enjoyed a run at the John Golden Theatre with Frank Craven, Dan Merkel, Claude Cooper, Alan Goode, Edith Elliott and Patricia O'Hearn.

Supporting Summerville and Miss Pitts are Una Merkel, who played in the stage version, Berton Churchill, Warren Hymer, Henry Armetta, George Marion and many other screen favorites, all of whom add to the hilarious fun of the picture. Don't miss "Her First Mate." It is as fresh as the tang of the sea—and a lot funnier.

Zane Grey Classic

"Life in the Raw," the latest romance from the pen of Zane Grey, is the second feature attraction on the same program.

It is the first picture in which George O'Brien, premier Western star, returns to the screen after an absence of about six months.

The story that Zane Grey has written for this picture, which combines the elements for which his writings have gained world-wide fame. There is romance, adventure, danger, acts of undaunted heroism—all set against the dramatic background of the west. It is reported as a story of human whose emotions are laid bare by the unrelenting pressure of arid wastes. Georgia O'Brien has a new leading lady in this production. She is Claire Trevor, beautiful newcomer to the screen who has been recruited from the dramatic stage. Her last appearance was in the leading role of "The Party's Over," the Broadway success which recently completed a successful engagement in New York. But she will perhaps be best remembered for her part opposite Ernest Truex in the stage presentation of "Whistling in the Dark."

Greta Nissen heads the supporting cast, and has a much longer-for sympathetic role. An original dance composition, performed by Miss Nissen, is said to be an important feature of the screen play.

Sammy Lee is responsible for the dance ensembles.

Hannah Williams (Mrs. Jack Dempsey) is appearing on the same program in a smart musical revue entitled "Audition," featuring a host of night club and vaudeville stars. A clever novelette will be shown on the same program.

A special added attraction at the Saturday matinee only, will be the exhibition of the opening chapter of the daring Western adventure story "Clancy of the Mounted," featuring Tom Tyler and his horse "Ramasang."

FALL OUT OF TREE FATAL

John Horner of Black Creek, P. E. County Fractured Skull

Falling from an apple tree, John Horner, Black Creek, Prince Edward County, sustained a fractured skull early Tuesday morning and later died at his home on Wednesday after all available medical attention had failed to rally the injured man.

Mr. Horner, who is the father-in-law of Constable Constable Fred Isard, of the local police department, was pruning apples from his orchard when he fell from a tree, striking his head on the ground. A severe fracture was found at the base of the skull and Mr. Horner never rallied from the first shock.

The accident was well known in the Black Creek vicinity, having lived there a number of years. His injuries were of such a nature that it was impossible to move him to a hospital following the accident.

Kidnapped Officers Released By Pirates

Tokyo, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Liberation of W. E. Hargraves, A. B. Blue and Charles Johnson, British officers, who were kidnapped by Chinese pirates from the Merchantman Newchwan on March 29, was announced by the Foreign Office today.

The authorities did not disclose the amount of the ransom paid for the officers nor the methods of settlement used.

BELLEVILLE MAN ARRESTED NEAR TWEED

Farmer Loosens Wires of Automobile to Hold Up Pair Would-Be Robbers

Recent Robberies Make Thomasburg Folk Alert

SECOND CAR USED

Trail Through Swamp At Early Morning In Search of Men

A wild mid-night chase across the countryside and swamps northeast of Thomasburg resulted in the arrest of Frank "Sally" Wilson of this city by the Provincial Police early Saturday morning following the unsuccessful attempt made by two men to rob Ray Oliver's general store at Thomasburg about 3 a.m. Saturday.

The man it is alleged after the stolen car in which they were travelling had been disabled by villagers stole another car, the property of Robert Cole, Hungerford, in which they made a successful getaway from the scene of their attempted robbery. The gasoline in the Cole automobile had been previously shut off by Mr. Cole, however, and with the Provincial Police close on their heels the two robbers took to their cars and made across the fields towards a swamp near Tweed. Wilson was captured as a suspect by the police.

Swamp Surrounded

The swamp was immediately surrounded by the police and an organized posse of farmers from the nearby community.

No trace of a second man the police were looking for had been uncovered up to noon Saturday.

Discovers Wires

The robbers broke into the Oliver store by two men via frustrating by the quick action of Herman Elliott of Thomasburg. Elliott heard a car stop in front of his home at approximately 3:00 a.m. Saturday and as there have been numerous robberies and burglries in that city of late he arose to investigate. Mr. Elliott saw two men go to the rear of the Oliver store, immediately pulling on a few clothes he went to the car disregarding some wires so that starting it for means of an escape would be impossible. He then telephoned Provincial Police at Bellerville who rushed to the place.

In the meantime Mrs. Oliver, the wife of the owner of the store, heard a noise in the rear of the place and at once gave the alarm and the robbers made a quick exit through the rear window which they had previously entered by breaking the glass. Returning to their car the men found that it would not start and started to run in a northeasterly direction from the village. By this time many residents had been aroused and gave chase. Later the two men with the posse close on their heels, broke into the garage of Robert Cole, Hungerford and took his car and soon had the machine going. Their escape by this method was short lived, however, as Mr. Cole had shut off the gasoline line and in the night nervous. When the car was apparently out of gas the men were closely followed by the police and abandoning the machine they started running across the fields.

Wilson was caught as he was about to enter the swamp police stated.

Trenton Car Found

The car in which the men had travelled to Thomasburg was the same car that had been stolen from Trenton last Wednesday night bearing license plates 2-9004. Previous to the Thomasburg break-in it is alleged by police that a gas station at Roslin had been broken into by these men. A large quantity of gas and oil were taken.

Following the arrest of Wilson the Provincial Police are of the opinion that with his arrest the chat of his partner they have cleared up the source of many robberies that have terrified that part of the county of late.

Assisting the Provincial men during the hunting of the two men were county constables and a posse composed from around the Thomasburg community.

Oliver's store was entered and robbed one week ago.

BODY OF KING HOMEBOUND

Feisal's Son Ghazi First Begins Rule In Gloom

Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 9 (AP) —The body of King Feisal of Iraq, dressed in white silk robes and a purple turban, left Berne today for Brindisi, Italy there to be transferred to a British destroyer bound for Bagdad.

He died yesterday from a heart attack that came so suddenly that some circles entertained suspicions he had been poisoned. This was speculation he denied by doctors who said an investigation proved the cause was natural.

His private doctor, who assured questioners that there had been no foul play, said, "now the other day I warned the King he must take a complete rest, but he replied 'I pledged myself to Great Britain and the League of Nations, and I prefer to die rather than break my word.'"

"This apparently was a reference to recent reports of trouble between Assyrian Christians and Kurds in Iraq, and to the mandate England held over his kingdom until he received recognition by the League of Nations.

Bagdad, Iraq, Sept. 9 (AP)— In an atmosphere of deepest mourning, 22 year old Ghazi I. began ruling this young kingdom today in succession to his father, King Feisal, who died in Berne yesterday.

A seven-day period of mourning was ordered, business and all work will be no further ceremonies attending the ascension to the throne, other than the brief induction before the cabinet yesterday and the proclamation to parliament, subjects and cabinet members.

NEW CASTLE, Sept. 9.—(CP)— Frank Meier, chief bootlegger at the Ritz Bar in Penn Twp. is here with a new one making a barkinder. He says it requires a dash of peppermint and a drop or two of ari added to a lot of knowledge.

"A good bartender has got to know everything," he said. "He's got to know how to get things, what's good for this and that. He's got to be kind and treat customers to say it."

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—(CP)— Tavern keepers on either side of the Illinois-Indiana border line, are fighting a beer war. One Illinois price was posted as 10 beers for $1.35.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—(AP)— A mere matter of 72 years means nothing to James Perdue, an inmate of the Warren County Farm near Monmouth, Ill. The 73-year-old man hitch-hiked his way to Chicago to see the World's Fair. Police supplied him with a place to sleep and then took him to the Fair.

LOUISA, Ky., Sept. 9.—(AP)— Members of the Hembby Falls Church elected Uncle Nicholas County, shy of cash, have been "laying their dues on the line," but the treasurer, W. D. H. Harvey reports he received $60 dozen eggs his congregation during the past year.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—(AP)— It was all right when a robber took Miss Gladys Raymond's purse at the point of a pistol yesterday.

And she never objected when he removed a $250 diamond ring from her finger.

But when the same armed gunman asked for a kiss, she slapped him down.

He escaped.

WIFE KILLED BY HUSBAND WHO SUICIDES

All-Night Search For Husband Ends With Discovery

QUARREL SEQUEL

Eric McGillivray Was Member of Well Known Family

Trenton, Ont, Sept. 9—(CP)—Eric McGillivray, about 45, shot and killed his wife during a quarrel on the grounds of their summer cottage at Inverhurst, resort near here on Lake Ontario, and later committed suicide. His body was found by searchers and Provincial Police shortly after Mrs. McGillivray was shot.

Police said McGillivray and his wife returned from a dance hall to their cottage at about two o'clock this morning and quarrelled bitterly on the veranda. They said the husband pulled a revolver from his pocket and fired one bullet into his wife's body.

The couple, prominent residents of Fort Rigin, had been spending the summer at Inverhurst.

Body Found Near House

Police searched throughout the night for McGillivray who left the cottage after shooting his wife. It was thought he had fled to nearby woods. His body was found beside a cottage about 7:30 this morning.

Russell McKellar and R. G. McKenna carried Mrs. McGillivray to a doctor's office but she was dead on arrival there. It was thought Mc-Gillivray shot himself a few minutes after the murder.

Member of one of the best known families in Bruce County, McGillivray moved to Trenton two years ago. His father, the late Neil McGillivray was a prominent business man of Wiarton and owned large properties in several parts of the county. His mother died in 1931.

The McGillivrays had a five-year-old daughter. She is survived by her mother. Her father was a lake captain.

McGillivray served overseas with the Canadian Cavalry.

BODY OF GREY IS CREMATED

Few Passers-by See Remains Start Last Journey

Christon Bank, England, Sept. 9. —(AP)—Accompanied only by close relatives and household employees, the body of Viscount Grey, who died Thursday, was taken from the castle here today to Darlington for cremation.

A simple bouquet of white flowers, the last tribute of the former Secretary for Foreign Affairs, lay on the coffin as the 75-mile journey started.

Only a few passers-by saw the remains of the distinguished statesman leave the castle. Being taken the route emerged from their houses to pay their respects.

Viscount Grey, the veteran statesman presented to Germany the ultimatum by which Great Britain entered the war. He was 71 when he died."

ARGENTINE CONSUL DIES

Menton, France, Sept. 9.—(AP)— Prince Andrew Nikita Lvoff, Argentine Consul at Lausane, Switzerland, and nephew of the Russian Czar's last Prime Minister, died here Friday after a heart attack.

He was imprisoned in Russia during the revolution and was said to have been under the death sentence 14 times, the charges of which injured his health.

He died at the home of Mme. Vicente Blasco Ibanez, where he was a guest.

Black Pussycat Directs Rider of Bicycle Off Road Into Iron Fence

A black cat which crossed the road in front was held to blame last evening for a slight accident on West Moira street, which caused considerable damage to a bicycle, although the rider escaped unhurt.

It was getting dusk then but early in the evening, Harold Wood, Front street, on the bike was riding along stop when the cat darted in front of him. In an effort to turn the machine it skidded on the road, mounted the walk and crashed into the iron fence. As it struck the walk the youth fell off into the soft earth, but the bike continued the journey to the fence, wrecking the front wheel. The rider is not believed to be seriously hurt.

He merely tried to avoid a spill.

SHOWS WAYSHOOTING IN WORLD TRADE HOTEL PROBED

Growth In Trade Over 20 Year Period Is Phenomenal

Ottawa, Sept. 9 (CP)—A study of statistics over the past 20 years show that Canada's penetration of world markets, to have been most marked in spite of varying conditions, is a statistical review issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce.

Statistics of the trade of the forty most important trading nations of the world show that whereas there has been a drop of $1,000,000,000 in their import trade since immediate pre-war years, Canada's percentage of their aggregate foreign purchases has risen from 1.95 to 2.59 per cent. In monetary values the rise was from $353,222,000 out of total imports of $18,257,000,000 in 1913 to $617,490,000 out of $17,266,620,000 in the last year for which aggregate figures are obtainable. On the other hand Canada's share of the exports of these 40 countries has increased only from 3.29 to 3.86 per cent, although their total exports decreased to $15,349,184,000.

"Charles Nash" Arrest Leads To Tracing of Clues In Belleville

Following investigations by Deputy Sheriff John P. Daisell of Jefferson, County, N.Y., regarding the identity of one Charles Nash it was discovered through the assistance of the local police department, that Nash was none other than Charles Lester Kidd, city, who is being held in Watertown, N.Y., on two charges of petit larceny.

Armed with this information Deputy Sheriff Daisell motored to Watertown earlier this week and after questioning Simpson was convinced that Charles Child Kidd today by letter that Nash had admitted participating in the robbery of the Belleville district this summer, of the theft of automobiles and of robbery in Belleville is thought by Daisell, that he was implicated in the theft, being the Walker Hardware interrupted robbery of Sidney Street store when Provincial Sergeant Booth in company with Constables Ward and Wright frustrated an attempt to rob the Walker store. Entrance was gained by the intruder over the roofs. Deputy Sheriff Daisell was in this city early in this week and accompanied by Chief Kidd and Sergeant Booth paid a visit to the premises and observed burglaries in and about the city. A few articles reported stolen in the immediate vicinity were found in a shed in the possession of Simpson, (alias Nash), when he was arrested in Watertown.

Cooler Weather Over Weekend Follows Phenomenal Heat Wave

What appeared to be a record heat base which covered the cities on Friday, bringing the city in a blanket of perspiration, and causing considerable discomfort on the part of its residents, was not due to unnatural high temperatures reported from other cities in Ontario Weather experts explained it is being due to just too much humidity in the air. Official temperatures were not higher, than other days which appeared much cooler. On Friday the highest point that has been reached was 76 degrees, with a low point of 56. Content of humidity, that oft talked of heavy, muggy mist in the atmosphere, was responsible for the uncomfortable feeling accompanying heavy showers of

U. S. Dirigible Cannot Aid In Search For Balloon

(By the Canadian Press)

Governments of two Canadian provinces today marshalled their resources in search for three balloonists, two American and two Poles, missing a week out of Chicago in the Gordon Bennett International Race, and believed down in Ontario and Quebec.

Six hundred men were ready in the Sudbury, Ont., district, to comb the territory around Silver Lake, north of there, where three fishermen said they saw a balloon there by last Monday. Eight aeroplanes were available at Sault Ste. Marie if the Ontario Forestry Department decided to send them on search flights.

Search at Lookout

The Government of Quebec ordered all agents of its streams commission to be on the lookout for the missing balloonists. One agent reported seeing one of the bags floating over the territory around Lakes Baulac and Wilbridge, only 13 miles from the Provincial Council headquarters at Riviere A. Pierre. The anglers, Quebec business men, saw the balloon from different points and said it was drifting not more than 25 feet above the water. They said its marking were red, green and blue. Poland's Valiend Oskork, a report that led authorities to believe the balloon contained Captain Frandciek Rynek and his aid.

WATERWAYS RECORD SET BY NORONIC

Waterways Development Steamer Sport in Navigation

Prescott, Ont., Sept. 9.—(CP)— Nosing her way carefully into Prescott harbor after her first trip, the Noronic largest liner on the great lakes-St. Lawrence route of Canada Steamship Lines Northern Fleet created a new record in the history of Prescott waterfront. It was the first time such a large ship ever came under the city's lee.

Opening of the new Welland Ship Canal has made it possible for the 6,905 ton lake liner to enter Lake Ontario for the first time. Until last year she came down the St. Lawrence as far as Brockville, Windsor, Ont., but Prescott pel has now made it possible for her to reach Prescott.

PROBABLY BE WET OVER THE WEEK END

One third of an inch of rainfall drenched the city and district early Saturday morning, accompanied by light electrical storm which did little other damage than wake up light sleepers. Skies cleared with the coming of the morning Saturday, while temperatures again commenced to rise. According to reports from the weatherman, however, none was still probable to recover over the week end, while possibilities of more electrical storms are also forecast.

Stepping From Jail, Herbert Peterson is Tried with Charge and Pleads Guilty

As he stepped from the Hastings County jail a free man, after serving a sentence for intoxication, Herbert Peterson, Picton, was again arrested by the R.C.M.P., on a charge of selling illicit liquor on Friday.

Peterson was then taken to Picton, where it was alleged he sold illicit liquor, and faced the charge before Magistrate A. E. Calnan. The accused man pleaded guilty and was fined $300.00 and costs or in default of payment serve two months in the common jail. Peterson took the jail term.

The case created quite a lengthy investigation by the R.C.M.P. regarding the selling of illicit liquor in Prince Edward County some time ago.

NORMANS RISE IN PROTEST

Two Dozen Families Trace Origin To Normans

London, Sept. 9.—(CP Cable)— Lord Ragland's attack on the man called the myths of Norman ancestry has the anthropological section of the British Association for the advancement of science at Leicester has brought some spirited rejoinders.

Admiral Sir Drury St. Aubyn Wake stands firmly by the Wake family, about which he says, "that Lord Ragian was talking through his hat."

In fact Lord Ragian declared the Wake family had no traceable connection with Normandy the character famous for his resistance to William the Conqueror. He suggested Hereward himself might be a mythical hero.

Dr. Bloomfield Russell of the College of Heralds said: "I am afraid Lord Ragian is right in rather wildly. There are at least a couple of dozen families who can trace descent to Norman days and a few still further back to Saxon times."

Montreal, Sept. 9.—(CP)—Constable James Mackie, 43, of the Canadian Pacific Railway police, died in the hospital last night as a result of bullet wounds received Friday while attempting to arrest two men in the railway yards at Lanoraie, Que.

Meanwhile Paul Thouin, 36, was in custody at Joliette as a result of the shooting. After the police arrested one Gaston Bouchard in connection with the attempted robbery, the Montreal police refused to confirm a report published in a local newspaper that Thouin had attempted to negotiate for the return of paintings stolen from the Montreal Art Association. Some weeks ago the city edition of two Montreal newspapers each received one-half of one of the paintings. With a letter advising that the others would be returned if ransom were paid.

City and District News

Slight Improvement In Unemployment

Some pickup of employment has been noticed in the city during the past few weeks, according to a statement today by Mr. L. Green in charge of the Employment Service of Canada office on Campbell st.

During the latter part of this week a local warehousing concern placed an order for five girls, all of the five were given work by a local advertising agency. Several vacancies for girls in the local household work were also filled by the local office.

LARGE CARGO FLOUR DOCKS HERE TODAY

Thirty-four men and eight trucks with drivers, recruited at the office of the Employment Service of Canada, together with dozens of other unemployed men of the city, waited patiently on the government dock this morning for the expected arrival of the steamship Trosdoc bound from Montreal to Belleville with a consignment of 200 tons of flour for local distribution. It is reported the Harbor master Rob. Gourly that the huge boat would dock some time during the early afternoon. The size cargo is one of the largest to enter the local port this season according to Mr. Gillespie, agent of the Robin Hood Flour Mills. Future cargoes which will arrive in the city before the season is over will assist the unemployment problem.

CROWDS JAM CITY MARKET

Prices Are Well Maintained In Saturday's Trading

Belleville Saturday market was over-crowded this morning, with both purchasers and vendors—one of the largest markets of the season. From ten o'clock until after eleven it took some time to make passage through the main thoroughfare of the outside market in the City Hall.

Plums—Damsons and Lombard and Egg—sold at 25, 30 and 35 cents a 4 qt basket. Apples—Duchess 15 cents a peck, Black Detroit, Alexanders and Gravenstein 20 cents for the measure and St. Lawrence 25 and 30 cents a peck. Melons with a big offering from 5 cents to 35 cents.

Eggs

—17 and 18 cents a dozen; butter, 26 cents per pound; honey at 10 cents a section. Chickens and roasting roasting size from $1.25 to $1.50 a pair. Fryers and broilers 75 cents and 80 cents a pair. Fowl 75 cents to $1.00 each and geese sold 60 and 65 cents each with not many offered for sale.

There was a profusion show of cut flowers on the outside market. Gladioli selling at 15 cents a dozen with some choice at 25 cents a dozen. Asters were sold at 15 cents a dozen and variety of late summer flowers sold from 5 to 15 cents a bunch.

MARKETS DULL AND WAVERING

First Week After Labor Day Finds Rumors Afloat

BY JOHN L. COOLEY.

Associated Press Financial Writer

New York, Sept. 9.—The first week after Labor Day has found financial markets dull and wavering.

For stocks it has been a period of slow downward drift characterized by light transactions and interspersed with rumors as to what the United States government planned to do or not to do with the inflationary powers for inflation. Stocks had a moderate rebound yesterday on the rail road category, but their market was very quiet. Commodities also slanted toward lower levels.

Retail trade volume, mercantile experts said, was beginning to feel the impetus of fall buying and had experienced an early week reaction to such higher prices as have appeared; in general quarters it was suggested that purchase of goods were being quickened by the wide publicity given to prospects of higher costs. Chain store sales for August were substantially higher than many of these systems, which handle low-priced goods, reported increases of 11 to 13 percent while a large majority enjoyed better volume than in July of this year.

The credit expansion programme was also along at accelerated pace in recent pace. Federal reserve banks added $37,500,000 in "governmentals" to their aggregate portfolio, slightly more than in the previous two weeks, but on small a gain stirred little attention.

LOCAL BIRDS WIN AWARDS

R. J. Messervey Captures Coveted Trophies With Fowl

Mr. R. J. Messervey was the only one this year to represent Belleville with entries and had good success with wins apart from his birds receiving keener competition than has been there in the last ten years. One of his entries, a five string of birds, only to lose to R. J. Messervey, who won 1st cockerel, 1st and 2nd pullet and 3rd hen. Special for best shaped Brahma male and special for best colored Brahma male.

Special mention was made by officials and others of Messervey's 1st cockerel being the best light Brahma cockerel ever shown at the C.N.E. Toronto.

There are more good breeders about Belleville, but for some reason or other have failed to show this year at the C.N.E. Belleville has always had quite a few real good poultry breeders, and today has a couple of prominent poultry judges residing here in the name of R. J. Messervey and Mr. Wm. Thompson.

CONCORDAT WITH GERMANY

Vatican City, Sept. 9 (AP)—Cardinal Pacelli, the Papal Secretary of State, will start his vacation next week, and until he returns it is unlikely that anything will be done about ratifying the recently drafted concordat between Germany and the Holy See.

Vatican prelates said today that there has been no failure to ratify, as reported in Canada.

EX-MAYOR IS BEHIND PLAN

Mr. George A. Reid Endorses Trade Expansion Efforts

Ex-Mayor George A. Reid is whole-heartedly favourable to the expansion of British Trade with Ontario in coal. He told a reporter who questioned him:—

"Under the much discussed caption of "Boost Empire trade", wider markets in England for farm products and extended market in Ontario for British coal, I would say that I am behind the scheme 100 percent.

"It is economically sound and a practical and common sense way of developing trade.

"I noticed a very nice editorial in the Mail and Empire, Sept. 6th and a recent article in the Globe. When both the Provincial leading newspapers and colleges endorse developed in Belleville, it means success.

The Mail and Empire recently said:

"An intensive campaign is being carried on in Belleville with the slogan, 'Boost Empire trade, Help the Bay of Quinte Route to the Sea.' Belleville is a magnificent concrete structure, with a rail connection the whole length of the dock for C.N.R. and C.P.R. traffic.

Soon you will see tan gallon hats, boots, food signs on the streets of Belleville. Why? Because Ken Hackley and his Oklahoma Cowboys will appear in person with their stage show at the Belle Theatre.

OKLAHOMA COWBOYS OF RADIO FAME TO APPEAR IN PERSON AT BELLE

Soon you will see tan gallon hats, boots, food signs on the streets of Belleville. Why? Because Ken Hackley and his Oklahoma Cowboys will appear in person with their stage show at the Belle Theatre.

Famous Radio Artists

Ken Hackley and his Oklahoma Cowboys are famous radio artists from which they have been featured, or on the network of the National Broadcasting Company.

They have made themselves very popular by just being natural in offering the public their ideas of entertainment, which are different, unique, a bit novel and comical. They have and are leasing many new friends to their many radio and personal followers, with quaint philosophy, music and songs.

Their great knack of entertainment is the same kind of fun enjoyed among themselves on the ranch. Their instrumental and vocal versions of the folk songs and ballads of the West is a romance that is woven around the lives of pioneer western plainsmen.

Manager Forhan of the Belle Theatre, is sparing no expense to present this exceptional stage attraction, and announces these talented artists will make their attraction in each theatre in which they appear on their present tour of Famous Players Canadian Corporation theatres in Canada. He expects large crowds when they appear at the Belle Theatre in addition to exceptional photoplay programs on Tuesday and Wednesday, September 19th and 20th, matinee and evening.

S. A. CONGRESS MEETING HERE

Salvation Army Officers Guests of Local Corps

A district gathering of Salvation Army officers will be held in Belleville on Monday, next, over which Major F. J. Richea, Divisional Commander of Toronto Red Division will preside. About 22 officers, from Campbellford, Trenton, Kingston, Lindsay, Napanee, Peterborough, Picton, Port Hope, Trenton and Tweed will be present.

A private session will be held in the afternoon, after which the visiting delegates will be guests of the Citadel Hong League for tea and reception.

This occasion will be the initial visit of Major Richea to Belleville, who succeeded Brigadier A. D. MacDonald, Divisional Commander.

The day's proceedings will conclude with a monster open-air rally and united public meeting at the Citadel in the evening.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM RATFIELD

Many former friends assembled at the Belleville Burial Co. Funeral Chapel, Friday afternoon to pay their last outward tribute of respect to the memory of the late William Ratfield, who passed away in the home of the Hallowy United Church conductor, Rev. Bruce Acheson and at the place of interment in the Belleville cemetery.

Acting as bearers were Messrs. W. Osborne, A. Diamond, O. Moynes, J. Stanton, C. Wallace and W. Hart.

Floral tributes:

Pillow—Family.

Wreath—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Eastson, Morrisown, N. Jersey.

Basket—Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Davidson.

Sprays—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hart; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wiggins; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Symons; A. H. Hotway and family; Mr. Jas. Eaton and family; Mrs. Fisher and family; Mr. and Mrs. Percy Bowden; Mrs. Asselstine and Helen; Mr. and Mrs. Sidwell Liddle; Mr. and Mrs. J. Norris.

MRS. H. B. ROWE

Ivanhoe (Special)—Word was received here this morning announcing the sudden death of Mrs. H. B. Rowe at her home, 152 First Ave., Toronto. Mrs. Rowe was the sister of the Ottawa Public School and widow of Rev. H. B. Rowe.

Mrs. Rowe had been in ill health for the past four months, but was believed to be making satisfactory recovery and was able to be up. She collapsed suddenly at her home. Her death was a shock to her family and friends.

Besides Miss Harriett Amelia Bishop, Mrs. Rowe was born at Bishop Mills, and was married here in early life. Following her marriage to Rev. Mr. Rowe she had lived in various charges where her husband had charges, Ivanhoe, Norham and Brighton.

Mrs. Rowe died about 18 years ago and Mrs. Rowe went to Ottawa 9 years ago from Toronto, where she joined the staff of the Public Schools in Ottawa, teaching for five years at Carey Street and Sherbrooke for the past four years at York St. school. Ill health forced her to retire from active work last Easter and since that time she had lived quietly at her home.

Mrs. Rowe specialized in geography and during her long and lasting career in Ottawa.

She was last year president of the Ottawa Women's Teachers' Association and the news of her passing will occasion sincere regret among former associates and friends.

Surviving are two daughters, the Misses Edith and Norma Rowe, both of Ottawa, three sisters, Miss Alice Bishop, Bishop Mills; Mrs. W. J. Keegan, Portland, Ore.; and Mrs. J. D. Keegan, Kemptville; two brothers, Fred Bishop of Fargo, N.D., and Frank Bishop of Altamont, Man.

The funeral was held from Hole Bros. Funeral Home, McLeod Street, at 3 o'clock on Thursday morning and interment at Bishop Mills cemetery.

The late Mrs. Rowe was a former P. S. teacher at Ivanhoe, after her marriage her husband was pastor here for a number of years and after her husband's death she resided here with her daughters, remaining teaching in Ivanhoe Public School for a number of years.

The news of her passing was learned with sincere regret among former friends in this district.

SERGEANT'S WORK PRAISED

Finds Travelling Parents And Sends Them Back To Injured Child

Time and distance in a race with death were materially shortened from Belleville to Toronto on Friday through the alertness of Sergt. A. Harman of the local police force, and the assistance of other police officers from Toronto to Kingston, the latter to meet a distracted Toronto mother and father who raced from this city to Toronto ahead of roaring police motorcycles to the bedside of their dying son.

Little four year old Billy Stevens, of 561 Parliament Street, Toronto, was left in the care of a neighbor on Thursday while Mr. and Mrs. Stevens left by truck for Brockville. They were not expected back until late Friday night.

Billy, left unattended momentarily, while playing in front of the home where he was being cared for, according to the police ran from behind a parked car directly into the path of a moving auto being driven by Mr. Frank McDonald, Concord Avenue. Knocked to the cold by the impact the little fellow was picked up with a fractured skull and other injuries and rushed to the Hospital for Sick Children. His condition was reported critical.

The distracted neighbor attempted to get in touch with his parents. Police were appealed to and as a last resort a Toronto paper was also called but to no avail.

By long distance telephone communication, the paper got in touch with Sergt. Harman, who answered the phone at the local office. Interested in the description of the truck Mr. and Mrs. Stevens were riding in and immediately realized Sergt. Harman filled the description perfectly with one he had seen some few moments previously parked in front of a downtown restaurant. A few moments afterward the parents were found and the distressing news was given them. Overcome with anxiety for their son whom they believed to be dying the parents appealed for assistance to the police to assist them in their trip back to Toronto. Sergt. Harman immediately made arrangements for a police escort on the part of Provincial Police stationed in this city.

Through the night the heavy truck bearing the stricken mother and father rushed behind the screaming siren of police motorcycles which at times slipped slowly into hours, and finally the outskirts of Toronto loomed in the early morning. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens reached their still unconscious son's beside at five o'clock.

"I can remember little of the trip," she stated to hospital attendants who had been in charge of the early haired little boy "All I know is that I prayed and prayed as we went along. I thought all the time that we would be too late."

One of her first enquiries was about the driver of the car which struck her son. There was no bitterness in her heart. "There are times," she said simply "when such accidents can't be avoided."

Doctors are holding out hope for the recovery of little Billy.

Checkers at the "Y"

A country post yesterday, to escape the city's noise
Dropped in the Y. for a friendly call on all the Checker-boys.
And being one o' them, himself a lover of the game
His ventures now to be so bold as to ask a few by name.
There's Harris, Matthews, Cook and Kroch,
Derbyshire, Coughlin, Shorey and Roach,
Stenson, Grant, some Johns and Rankin,
Thompson, Sherry, White and Hankin,
Nicolson, Nobes, Bartlett and Boyd,
Peacock, Trumpour, Fry and Hyde,
And last only because I've come beside.
Daily I watch them one by one
Wend their way to the Y. "to do" or "be done."
Of some of their ways that attract my attention,
I think it no harm to put make mention.
Now there's George Harris, he's true to name
For he'll harass you all through the game,
When you try from him a game to win
You never know, how, or where to begin;
For when he starts in, let me tell you my friend,
It'll not be long till you come to the end.
There's a player who corners are what he don't badge,
His name I'll not mention, but just call him Judge.
Mr. Sherry's an improvement on checkers, I guess,
For they tell me his forte lies in playing Chess.
The Fifteen-Man comes in with a smile
And watches the players once in a while;
Though I never have seen him playing a game
He can tell all the moves you should make just the same.
The problems he solves are a real good name
By keeping strictly from playing the game.
I observe that or all the fun-loving crew
Kroch and Boyd are the most faithful two.
They always come and play together,
At all kinds of time and in all kinds of weather.
And as the game progresses along,
Friend Kroch is frumished with song:
While Boyd to keep up his spirits too,
Is telling of what he intends to do:
And when his chances look mighty slim
His stiff lower he is going to win.
Each teaches a lesson in his turn,
One that we all will do well to learn:
That whether things go right or wrong
There's always room for being a cheerful song.
Or when the game of Life looks blue,
A spirit that says: I'll see the thing through.
And with Grace, this moral my poem I'll end,
With the hope it contains no word to offend.

Happy Scholars Compete at Thurlow School Fair in Exhibits, Music, Drills and Games

Nine School Sections Take Part In Friday's Program

PUBLIC SPEAKING

Scholars of thirteen school sections in Thurlow competed in the annual school fair for that township held at Consecon yesterday and the exhibits in the various contests were of a high standard, in keeping with the fine competitions of recent years.

An interesting sports program was arranged during the morning while judging of exhibits and contests were held in the afternoon.

Schools of sections 1, 7, 9, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19 and 23, took part in the smart parade and Strathcona demonstration, each school receiving a Playground Ball as an award.

Scholars of schools competing in the Chorus Contest lined up in an orderly manner behind identifying banners and made a fine appearance. The results of the chorus competition were: First, S.S. No. 9; second, S.S. 18; third, S.S. 19; fourth S.S. 1; fifth, S.S. 23; sixth, S.S. 16. There were seven entries.

In the recitation contest four small competitors took part repeating "Somebody's Mother." The winners were: First, Irene Thom, S.S. 19; second, Garth Stine, S.S. 9; third, Bessie Walker, S.S. 7.

Reading

Interesting outdoor fair events were the Public Speaking Contest for boys and girls. The addresses were given from the steps of the school, and only a large number of parents were grouped about listening to the efforts of the young speakers. The judges awarded in favor of the following: Boys' first, Edgar Reynolds, S.S. 9; girls, first, Marion Waddell, S.S. 9; Ruby Johnson, S.S. 17; fifth, Ruth Bristnell.

The schools made a fine showing in each event and their teachers are to be highly complimented for the splendid showing. The teachers of the various schools competing were: S.S. 1, Retha M. Coons; 2, Rhoda Hunt; 4, Queena Allen; 7, Ruth Farnham; 9, Mary Cavanah and Ethel Fleming; 15, Mary Stanley; 9, Mabel Cemmings; 11, Helen Jones; 16, Helen Clarke; 17, Mary Marshall; 18, Cora Hall; 19, Mildred Broadworth; 23, Olive Rutherford; 24, Gertrude Paul.

Mr. James Wilger, B.S.A., Agricultural Representative, was in charge of the arrangements and among the interested visitors was E. J. Clarke, B.A., Belleville public speaker for South Hastings.

Mr. J.D. Bankier is Paid Honor

John St. Church Friends Voice Appreciation of Musical Services

At the lovely spacious home of Mr. R. J. Graham, Trent Road, Mr. James Bankier of this city was on Wednesday evening, the honored guest of Mr. Graham and Miss Graham, the pastor, the Board of Sessions, the Board of Managers and their wives and the choir of the John Street United Church. Mr. Bankier is serving his connection with the John St. Church choir after eleven years of faithful and appreciated work in its upbuilding. Ever willing to give of his time and talents in all the church's activities, the gathering of fifty congregational friends Wednesday evening, was a mark of appreciation of Mr. Bankier's services.

A delightful evening was spent by all privileged to be present. The beautiful home was made more lovely with profuse floral arrangements and the charm of the hostess who met the guests at her father's door, added much to the agreeableness of the affair. The evening was informal throughout with a pleasantly remembered program of vocal and instrumental selections, Mrs. Helen Hunt Allen contributing several violin numbers with her customary finesse and technique.

The appreciation of the courteous and genial James Bankier by the members of the congregation of the John St. United Church, was voiced by Mr. Jamieson Bone, in a happily worded little address, laudatory of what Mr. Bankier had so willingly rendered his friends in the church. It was expressive also of the regret of all connected with the church at his departure from the choir, and was followed with the sincerest of best wishes for Mr. Bankier's future welfare. It was Mr. Bone's pleasurable duty to present to Mr. Bankier with the presentation of a substantial cheque as a tangible evidence of the congregation's appreciation of all Mr. Bankier had done in its behalf.

A delicious lunch was later served by Mrs. Jamieson Bone and Mrs. J. W. Kinnear presiding.

DR. PARKHURST TAMMANY FOE

Militant Minister Dies Today At Age of 91 Years

Ventnor, N.J., Sept. 9.—(AP)—The Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, militant minister, who attained wide fame in the 90's as a Bible and victorious foe of Tammany Hall in New York City, died Friday an hour after he fell from the roof of his home.

Mrs. Grace Moore Parkhurst, his niece, said he had been walking in his sleep of late, but that his health had been excellent. He was 91 years old.

The aged minister stepped out of a window to the porch roof of the home of his nephew, Wilmop Parkhurst, with whom he lived here. He was taken to Atlantic City Hospital, where he died at 4 a.m.

A terrific attack he launched from the pulpit of his Madison Square Presbyterian Church in 1892 against what he termed a "despicable pack of administrative bloodhounds," starting a campaign which resulted in the unseating of Tammany in New York.

MINERS SAVED BUT ONE LOSES LIFE

Schumacher, Sept. 9.—One man was killed and three injured in the collapse of a mine at the foot of the slopes at the McIntyre Mine here this morning. The rock fell shortly after eight o'clock in the morning, trapping Robert Copps, Arthur Blake, Archie Cooper and Edmond Parent. Rescue had to be carried on through a small hole. Copps, Jack-son, who was partly buried, was rescued after about 11 a.m. He was only slightly injured.

Blake, Parent and Copps were completely buried, and the first named was not released until 4 p.m. Parent was also injured shortly afterward, and both men are now in St. Mary's Hospital, Timmins, making satisfactory progress. Blake's legs are badly bruised and Parent suffers considerably from muscle bruises in the stomach, but Dr. Gillespie, who is in charge, says Blake will probably be able to leave the hospital in a few days.

Copps, dead, was located about 7 o'clock last evening. He had been buried so that the body free of the rock and the doctor stated that he must have died almost at once. The news was carried to his widowed mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Copps, at Mimo. He was the oldest son, the rest of the family still being at home. Arthur was a well-known player on the McIntyre soccer team and Parent was also a member. He was catcher on the McIntyre baseball tea three years ago.

BRITISH AUTO DRIVERS ARE COMMENDED HERE

Canadian Have Fine Example in Them Says Highways Minister

Toronto, Sept. 9.—Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways in the Ontario Government, recently returned from Europe, spoke over a local radio station last night in the sixteenth address of the department's campaign to promote highway safety.

Mr. Macaulay travelled extensively in Europe in the Old Country, and had nothing but praise for British motorists. "Our greatest slogan in Ontario," he said, "for many years has been care, courtesy and common sense. In Great Britain it is not a slogan, it's a practice."

Mr. Macaulay expressed the opinion that Ontario motorists have not been spoiled by too much accommodation. "When you consider the long stretches of highway, miles on end without a curve, and the good surface on the smoothest and safest surface possible, and then study the Ontario accident record in comparison with that shown by figures of Great Britain, it becomes apparent that road conditions are not the most important factor in the causation of accidents. The difference lies with the driver, and I have come to believe that the greatest factor is a lack of a spirit of sportsmanship of fair play on the part of many Ontario drivers."

Mr. Picabac Attends a Montreal Cabaret

The head waiter led the way to a table at the edge of the shiny dance floor, beckoning to the Master of Ceremonies as he did so. Coming over, the latter greeted Mr. Picabac with a hearty handshake and led him out on the floor, where the chorus immediately engulfed him.

"Ladies and gentlemen," announced he; "we are honored in having with us this evening our old friend Mr. Picabac, the lovable philosopher of Essex County, Ontario, who will now say a few words.

Caught thus entirely by surprise, and embarrassed by the proximity of so many beautiful girls, Mr. Picabac was for the moment at a loss.

"I did not expect—nor do I intend at this time—to make a speech," he began amidst applause. "I just want to call your attention to one thing."

"Picabac," suggested an enthusistic listener.

A twinkle came into Mr. Picabac's eye. "It's a mild . . . cool : : : sweet smoke," admitted he, taking his seat.

BUSH FIRES BREAK OUT

Bush fire fighters were back in action today at two Ontario points, following a respite of more than a day from the outbreaks which raged throughout the Province during the early part of the week.

The thoughtless action of a wood cutter who threw away a lighted match was blamed for the fire which late last night was raging half a mile north and two miles east of Windham Centre, near Simcoe. The outbreak occurred on the farm of James Elliott where wood-chopping operations were in progress and in a short space of time flames were shooting skyward while dense smoke rolled over the tree tops. Two or three small houses are situated in the 400-acre area where the fire is.

Fifty farmers were standing by to prevent the spread of a fire which yesterday covered approximately 50 acres of bushland in the Sarnia area. Advance of the flames was controlled somewhat by plowing of wide furrows. No men were believed to have caused the fire when they tried to smoke out a hive of bees in a hollow tree on the farm of Joseph Hancock.

VISCOUNT GREY

A man by nature loving peace, simplicity, and scholarship was, by a world out of joint, forced, in 1914, into the most undesirable position a man of his temperament could have thought of—that of forwarding the ultimatum which launched at one another the two mightiest Empires in the world. A Grey could do this only for an ideal, and in the strength of this he did what he did not desire to do. The war began.

Before it opened he did everything that was humanly possible to avert the crisis of a world at war. What the burden of those days meant to him must be imagined for not even Grey could have explained in their fullness the agonies of that time.

All eyes were focussed on Grey in 1914 and well they might look to him. His swing of Britain into the war indicated his sense of the justice of the British cause. With Grey determined that German aggression must be resisted, Britain felt safe.

It is not every nation which has so deeply honest a public man as Grey to whom is entrusted so great a responsibility.

Over against the clash of armies and navies and air squadrons in the war for the end of war, could be set the peace-lover Grey, the man who loved nature and books, even to the extent as to prompt his old associate, David Lloyd George to refer to him as a recluse. He was the man who left open the windows of his home in his declining years so that the sounds of birds in the sanctuary he had set apart for them might come through to him. Surely this man was no warlike figure, but one who when the call came did yet do the disagreeable task for duty's sake.

HAM AND EGGS FOR ALL

"To many Americans and the so-called 'rest of the world,' the prodigious effort the United States is making to rout the depression is still a hazy picture," remarks a writer in the Rotarian Magazine. "That is not surprising, for news of the National Recovery Act must be boiled to bottle-necked through cable and radio, telescoped by pressure of more localized news, and, in many cases, blurred by translation."

It is essential, therefore, that he who would understand must hold fast to the fundamentals of the underlying philosophy. They are quite simple. The opening sentences by Administrator Johnson sum them up in a way that he who reads as he runs may understand.

"The aim," he said, "do not buy $40 worth of ham and eggs for breakfast. If we want to keep this country going we have got to find a way for everybody buy half a dollar's worth of ham and eggs."

Economists and social workers, decrying concentration of wealth in the hands of the few, are no longer voices in the wilderness. The NRA is, in effect, notice to the world that the American business man is awakening to the logical implications of a civilization built around a machine. He reasons something like this:

Twentieth century economics are predicated on science. Science means machines. Machines mean mass production. Mass production requires mass consumption. But mass consumption is impossible unless the masses have money. If large groups are unemployed, if wages are paid which do not permit families to buy ham and eggs and clothes and shelter, business will wane. Therefore, means must be devised to employ men and put in their pockets the wherewithal to buy.

The National Recovery Act is, of course, the answer of the moment to the challenge of this logic. It simply seeks a planned readjustment of economic processes, whereby, to quote Administrator Johnson again, all the employers in the United States "do about the same thing at about the same time"—cut hours to employ more men and pay a living wage. It is a corollary of that proposition that price-cutting and bribery and child-labor must be dropped overboard along with the other pirates that have preyed on legitimate commerce. In the past we have called these practices unethical; in the future we shall more frequently use the word uneconomic.

It is a vast and unique experiment upon which the United States is launched. Unlike many recorded in the pages of social history, this one is not a coercive edict from an oligarchic minority; rather it issues from and will be worked out by the people themselves. If they are courageous, industrious, and, when necessary, self-sacrificing, it will not fail. On the other hand, the past four miserable years and a universal break-down of commercial intercourse suggest what is in store if it does not succeed.

The minister is to be a real man, a live man, a true man, a simple man, great in his love, in his life, in his work, in his simplicity, in his gentleness.—John Hall.

He that may kinder mischief, yet permits it is an accessory.—T. A. Freeman.

And the, dark sea
With bright flame burns,
When rose and lily
(Not so dim)
Are filled with scarlet
To the brim,
You will be glad
And brave again,
Forgetting night's

With hope and joy
So brimming up.

Take courage, soul;
At midnight say;
"Dawn even now
Is on the way!"

THE MYSTERIES OF BOTANY

Aid for persons perplexed by the mysterious sounding botanical names of various plants is offered by The Bulletin of the Arnold Arboretum, Harvard University. Some of the names indicate the habit of the plant, others its origin; the great majority refer to the peculiarities of that particular genus and species. The Bulletin points out. Some of the terms that occur most frequently and which are useful in that they tell something about the plant are: scandens, climbing; repens, creeping; fruticans or frutescens, shrubby; palustris, marsh loving; rupestris, rock loving; arenarius, of sandy places.

THINGS CANADA HAS DONE

The following partial list of Canadian achievements is given by the News Letter of Canadian Events:

Canada built and demonstrated the first railways sleeping cars. Built and sent the first steamboat across Atlantic. Gave to the world the idea of the all-electric radio. Originated the idea of making paper from pulpwood. First isolated helium gas in commercial quantities. Originated the idea of electric-heating. Built the world's first electric stove. Originated Marquis and other more recent wheat, which helped to build up the commerce of the west, both in Canada and the United States. The idea of the telephone originated in Canada and the first long-distance trials of the instruments were made in Ontario between Paris, Ont., and Brantford. Canada pioneered in the field of electro-chemistry with the discovery of calcium-carbide by Tom Willson, of Hamilton. Canada originated the idea of standard time, which has since been adopted by every civilized country in the world. Canada built and demonstrated the first submarine telegraph in the history of the world. A Canadian physician, Dr. F. G. Banting, of Toronto, discovered insulin, a serum for the treatment of diabetes. Canada built and demonstrated the first compound steam engine in the history of the world. The effect of this invention was the doom of the sailing ship as a factor in ocean commerce."

ONLY CHILD, IS IT MENACE TO SOCIETY?

Only Child of Ten Regrets Lack of Brothers and Sisters

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc., World Rights Reserved.)

Men and women who are "only" children invariably regret that their childhood was not blessed with brothers and sisters.

The same may be said of the parents of an "only" child. Although they may not have realized it at the time, they cannot fail to notice the peculiarities that every only child develops and the handicap to success and happiness that those differences inevitably entail.

Nor can such "only child differences" as psychologists like to designate them, vary much. All "only" children are, one might say, alike in the possession of certain traits by which one is able to recognize them. Indeed, one would think that all "only" children had been fashioned from the same mould.

One may note, for example, that all youngsters without a brother or sister soon become markedly egotistic. Being a mere fraction or member of the family than if the parents had only children upon whom to shower affection, it does not take them long to realize that the pursuit of self-interest, can, as the saying goes, be "got away" with.

Such children of course, receive too much and shake or give too little. Dr[illegible] selfishness is bound to result.

Conceit is another quality common to the "only" child. Being the little king or queen, as the case may be, in his own home, it is natural that he should try to force his convictions or superiority upon others.

An "only" child suffers. That is, finding himself more or less in a class by himself he is ever wanting full best what he considers the envy of others will prompt them to gain an advantage over him or in some way worst him. A habit of oversensitiveness therefore develops and such a child is continually having the feelings hurt. In fact he may become a veritable "cry baby."

Well and good, perhaps you say. Suppose being an "only" child is bad for the child himself.

Does that, of itself, make him a menace to society?

Consider, however, the traits I have enumerated; egotism, pursuit of self-interest, selfishness, conceit, convictions of superiority and over-sensitiveness.

Surely these are decidedly not the qualities that make for good citizenship.

As a matter of fact, every "only" child finds it extremely difficult after he grows up to adjust himself to social standards and reality in general because these are so different from the environment of the narrow and protected family circle within which he was raised.

After all the world is harsh. It either accepts or rejects a candidate for admission into its precincts. And when it rejects him it often does so ruthlessly.

"Only" children who as adults, are not accepted by the world at large who find they are unable to make themselves acceptable, probably become resentful. Indeed the basis for many an antisocial or even criminal act is a feeling of resentment.

Now the bringing-up that an "only" child is bound to receive naturally gives him an individualist who is more likely to rebel against existing conditions than to accept them and harmonize with them.

Should his intelligence be above average this difference in viewpoint may readily make him a pioneer, a leader or a dictator.

On the other hand, if such an only child is merely average—and the great majority of them are—then his resentment, with it all the possibilities of a threat, or a real danger, antagonism and rebellion.

Thus it would seem that the "only" child, from the standpoint of society, is more likely to become a menace than an asset.

That the 15th Regimental Band made a decided hit at the Toronto Fair comes to us direct from that city which under the circumstances is to credit to our boys. Despite the fact that their three programmes were given at the time other and more famous bands were in action, the Fifteenth held its own large crowd and was heartily encored on every occasion, personal commendation most heartily given and especially appreciated were congratulations from Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Col. W. H. Hunter and Major Pope who gave Bandmaster R. H. Rinaldo and his musicians praise for their fine work. The personnel of the band is: Bandmaster Bandmaster R. H. Rinaldo; Solo Cornetists, A. Mr. Stanley Carman, manager of the Carman Opera House, has had that place of entertainment decorated, embellished and made strictly up-to-date. Lovers of things theatrical are assured of many evenings of rare enjoyment at the Carman during the coming theatrical season.

Our old friend Mr. Rosenal called at the office this morning and brought good news from the Melrose oil well. Oil but they have had hard luck. No scent says. Never in all his experience has he seen such a combination of accidents happen. What with breaking tools and losing them down the hole and sending others after them to be sad lost, there was at one time no less than 4,000 pounds of said steel and fish of every description at the bottom of that expensive hole in the ground. It is feet below the surface. It is now trying time for Mr. Rosenal truly, and his genial face has lost some of its heartiness. But the last tale shadows have been driven away. After strenuous exertions the broken tools have been recovered, the well cleared and on Monday next drilling operations will be resumed. Mr. Rosenal's hopes still run high. He says they have gilt-edge indications, plenty of the sinews of war and the formation they are now in "Devonian formation"—is an almost certain forerunner of oil in paying quantities. Good luck to them, anyhow.

Christ Church will hold its annual harvest festival on Sunday, Sept. 17th. The rector, Rev. H. Daw, in a pastoral letter calls on the congregation to observe the festival. The organ in the church has been removed from the gallery to the west end of the church adjoining the chancel and a vestry room has been installed to supply the power.

Mr. J. B. Rogers of the firm of Berger and Belque, water works builders, arrived here last evening at the city hall made brief explanations to members of the Council in reference to the water works question. The cause, he said to look over the ground and to ascertain from inspection the kind of water supply which is liable to the city. He has not been able to make a thorough investigation and would therefore return in a few days to go over the ground again. His firm has built water works systems in a number of places in Quebec and is now completing the installing of a system in Brockville. Mr. Belque will probably submit his scheme to the council in a short time.

There will be a church parade of the 15th Battalion to-morrow the parade to be formed at the armory at the hour named at 3 p.m. The service will be held in St. Andrew's church and will be conducted by the Rev. M. W. Maclean, M.A., the Chaplain of the Regiment.

The schooner Enterprise has been dismantled and the hull will probably be broken up by the storms of the coming fall and winter.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating breakfast and pop said to me, It's just 4 months ago today that we had a wedding anniversary and I remembered it and you didn't, Benny, so you home a big bunch of roses as expensive as they were bewtiful, and all you had for me was a blank stare.

Bounding and as anything, and ma said, Now William let the passed derry lie passed, my lands aint even ever forgot anything!

There are some things I wish I could forget, but alas life isn't as simple as that, pop said, and ma said, Well you're simple, the idear, anybody as forgetful as you to go digging down into ancient history at this time in the morning when I always feel low spirited anyway. The fact is, that's utterly uncalled for, you never remember anything and important dates are a hunt non existent nothings to you. While that was the sole and only anniversity that ever somebody slipped my memory, she said.

That was enough to cast a permanent shadow over a sensitive nature like mine, pop said, and ma said, What's got into you this morning, you're acting perfectly Russian.

O well, what's a difference, life is short and our troubles are soon over, pop said, Still, if you care to shoot a few rays of sunshine through the clouds, you invite have liver and onions for supper tonite, he said, and ma said, Why William Potts how ridiculous, we had liver and onions our yestiday.

Never mind, I dont insist, it seemed like a very simple modest request but I'm used to that and I've learnt to take them in silence, pop said, and ma said, O all rite, all rite, you'll have your liver and onions my goodness.

Then I can live through the day and think kind thawts about everybody, pop said. And he kissed me good by and went down to the office, this saying, Such a man, I wonder if that was all nothing but put up job.

Me knowing without wondering.

PIRATES' HOPE IS WIPED OUT BY HUBBELL

Famed Pitcher Comes Back With Superb Performance

FOURTH LOST

Giants Outlook Dark For Time In Yesterday's Play

By Hugh S. Fullerton Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

Carl Hubbell's already famous ability to pitch his best when the setting gets tough once more enthroned him as New York's baseball idol today and had virtually wiped out the pennant hopes of Pittsburgh Pirates.

Driven to cover and beaten in the first inning of the important series between the Pirates and the league leading Giants, Hubbell came back with a superb mound performance yesterday to hold the Bucs 2-1 in the fifth and final game and send the Giants on to Cincinnati with a 6-1-3 game lead.

The Pirates won three of the five games, but Hubbell's victory in the final clash left them with only their hopes of the league title in the race and installed Chicago Cubs as the next big threat to the Giants' dominance of the circuit. While the Pirates lost the Cubs beat Boston Braves again 5-3 and moved into a virtual tie for second place. And next week the Giants close their season in a six-game series at Chicago.

The prospect looked bad for the Giants yesterday after Cincinnati Reds had pounded Carl Hubbell out of the box in the second inning. Only one run lead in the third. With that margin to work on, Hubbell pitched five straight hitless innings. He ran into trouble in the eighth when singles by Tommy Thevenow and Earl Grace gave the Pirates their first two runs. It went on to load the bases, but he pulled himself out of that difficulty and came through to the finish, giving only six hits in all for his 21st victory of the season.

The Cubs obtained their second chance in the battering Ben Cantwell, Leo Mangum and Guy Bush seemed to have a field day while Guy Bush pitched steadily. It was their fifth straight victory and left them 4½ in 62 home games so far.

Cardinals Win

The fourth place St. Louis Cardinals swept their series with the Phillies by scores of 6-5 despite Chuck Klein's homer. Silas Simmons, Cincinnati pitcher, finally found the victory he had been seeking since May 27 by holding Brooklyn to six hits to win 13-0.

Washington's Senators avenged Thursday's defeat and maintained their 3 1-2 game lead in the American League by walloping the hapless Chicago White Sox 11-2 to give Al Crowder his 22nd mound victory of the year.

BETWEEN INNINGS

THIS BILL MYERCHINE, pilot of the Boston Braves, realizes the rate a position on any one's All-American managerial staff. He does not know next One of these days perhaps not this year, though, will win a pennant for the third team he has managed—and it will be his third pennant.

LIKE JOE MCCARTHY, Bill McKechnie was never a major league star. Bill was just a ball player and was used as utility during the greater part of his career in the big time.

HOWEVER, as a pilot McKechnie need bow to no one. There, again, he resembles McCarthy. Joe and Bill know, never made the majors as a player, but is the only man to have piloted championship teams in both big leagues.

MCKECHNIE FIRST swung into the black realelines when he piloted the Pittsburgh Pirates to the National league pennant and the world's championship in 1925. The next season his club suffered a reaction and Bill was fired.

THE ST. LOUIS CARDINALS took on Bill and he turned in a pennant for the Red Birds in 1928. However, the Yanks mopped up on the Cards four straight in the world series and Bill was fired for that.

FIRED TWICE after winning pennants, McKechnie got a bit fed up with baseball and began thinking about retiring to his beloved Wilkinsburg, Pa., and devoting his time to politics.

THE BOSTON BRAVES came forward and offered McKechnie a four year contract. That saved Bill for baseball. He immediately began rebuilding the tail end Braves—and look at them today.

THE BRAVES probably will not win the National league pennant but they are, with the possible exception of the New York Giants, the most improved ball club in the National League. And unless rumor mongers are right, the Braves will be even better next year.

IT WAS a smart move on the part of the Boston ownership when McKechnie was given a five year contract. Hotel Bill know that with no less than 75 per cent. of the club for [illegible] which is more or

OUST LEGION IN PLAY-OFF

Imperials Give Bad Licking To Ruin Chances

Trenton, Sept. 9—(Special)—Geo. LaBrash's Imperial softballers spoiled the Trenton Legion's chances of a playoff position in the Central Park League on Saturday evening when they whitewashed the lads from the big paper city 7-0 and moved into a tie with Coleman Platt, Manager Lelieux of the Legion pitched well but was hit behind the pitching duties while Sager handled the mound duties for the gamblin boys allowing only four scattered hits with no runner crossing the plate.

The Imperials scored two in the upper and went scoreless till the fifth when Jack Douglas, veteran baseball player dropped Seglus for the first allowing the runs to score, later Sero threw wild to home and two more crossed the plate.

"Klieb" Jones' homer and triple led the batters.

Tonight's battle between the Firemen and Cubs will decide the play-offs. A win for the fire-fighters will leave the Cubs, Grills and Imperials a tie providing the Legion lose to Grills. If the Cubs win first all three will be in the running. Should the Cubs be the top wrung.

REDWINGS PUT MAPLE LEAFS BACK ON TOP

Toronto Takes Care of Montreal; Rochester Defeats Buffalo

FRAZIER'S WORK

Rochester Concentrates Attack In Two Frames

(By Herbert Baker, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Given valuable assistance by Rochester Red Wings, Dan Howley's Toronto Maple Leafs has regained the lead in the hot three cornered struggle for the fourth International League playoff position today.

The Leafs themselves took care of one of their chief rivals, Montreal, yesterday, by downing the Canadiens behind Rochester beat the other, Buffalo 15-5, in a night game. The standings of the clubs today, with only two more days to go was:

Club	Won	Lost	Pct.
Toronto	81	63	.563
Buffalo	81	63	.4870
Montreal	79	65	.4877

Toronto's triumph could be credited chiefly to young Keith Frazier who limited the Royals to six hits, two of which were bunched with a run in the second inning.

Brubaker's homer off Curly Odgen tied the game in the second and the Boone's triple after Nolen Richardson had beaten out an infield hit, netted Pepper the winning run in the fifth.

Toronto concentrated its attack in two big frames to wallop Buffalo and all but ruin the Bisons's chances of landing in the play off's. Chick Fullerton led off in the second, the Red Wings scored nine in the sixth. In that frame Ken Wingo hit a long triple and base before anyone was retired and by the time Wingo had scored the Boone's triple after Nolen Richardson had beaten out an infield hit, netted Pepper the winning run in the fifth.

ChineryAgain is Junior Champion

Toronto, Sept. 9 (CP) — Jack Chinery, youthful Humber Valley shotmaker, was back on the throne as junior champion of golf king, while David Henderson of Chatham, runner up in the junior championship tourney, had been relieved of his title through a disqualification.

Chinery, champion in 1931 and 1932, and runner-up this year, was given the title when the error was discovered in the Chatham golfer's card.

Although the mistake made a difference in the championship, Henderson's margin at the end of Wednesday's six holes, the title was his, disqualification and subsequent moving-up of the competitors.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

"I stand low in the air."

For the past week the sport columnists throughout Ontario have been editing their tradewinds grievances spicily. Kingston, Peterborough, Lee Marsh, of Toronto Daily Star fame, St. Thomas and numerous sport editors have been flaying right and left.

Up in St. Thomas they are bewailing the fact that their seniors have been called upon to face the Moodie Tigers of Hamilton while the Riverdale Greats of Toronto are given a bye. The St. Thomas sport scribe goes so far as to claim that the O.R.A.A. are trying to cram a Toronto club down the throats of the O.R.F.U. and that the "Hog Town" moguls owed $9 further and say that Andy Grad and New Toronto met for the finals last that owned to be spreading the jam on both sides of the bread.

Lee Marsh took a firm stand relative to the welcoming of outside clubs into the O.R.F.U. when the Toronto champions are left out in the cold. Lee pointed out that the Queen City Salbers of "Toronto the good" think nothing of piling up outside sportsman, like Scottsdales, of who boasts of millions while men like Percy Wyer, etc. who win major sport events in Ontario constitute relief cases, as heralded. "It was ever thus, Lord God by".

Up in Trenton they have dubbed the eliminated Dalaney Bearcats, the "Federals" since they resemble the Ottawa. The lads from along the Trent seem to want to "rah it in". Well, we handed out a fine exhibition coming to a pinning here in this quiet community and today is another day and we hereby give fair warning to all concerned — keep your eyes on the Belleville team that wins the local men's softball loop next year." It's even betting that they won't be disappointed quite so easily.

Now that the softball season has practically ended we understand that a new organization will foster men's softball in this city next season. If the concern referred to fails to decide to enter the field of softball well, the fans of Belleville can rest assured that a team worthy of bearing the name Belleville will be placed on the field.

Just what will the Toronto Maple Leaf Hockey Club do for a goalkeeper in the N.H.A. this coming season?

Yesterday's meeting never referred to the retirement of Lorne Chabot some like a bolt from the blue. Lorne, it will be remembered, ended the goal tending business at the end of the three years back at a cost of some $1,250.00 apparently a little more than "Chaboleby" was willing to accept.

Lorne Chabot was never a sensational net minder but he was a consistent one. He was a little better than the average N.H.L. goalie for the simple reason he was consistent. When he received his new contract yesterday he gloated over it, saw the decreases placed it between the lines and bade fingers and well you know what happens when such procedures happen—you've guessed it—"grateful sensation." That's exactly what happened to Chabot's contract. It was placed in two and cast among the rubbish."

All in all we say the less said is get another goalie—(some job).

Bright and early this morning, six a.m. to be exact, Connie Mack's pride of the east for Tyrannus where they meet the St. Cyprians in the Baseball Temple of the ivy pladoems at Willowdale Park this afternoon at three o'clock p.m. The Young-managed crew were full of pep and ginger to go when the local senior-caravan pulled out for the "big city". Editor "Gerry" Gerrard, the local fast breaking drop or "Wild Bill" Hammell, will hurl for the locals. About the same time today Jack Yaconey led Picton interlocutors to the Bank of the Peterboro "Cogs" in the Prince Edward County. Jack Wilkinson and Ted Fowler will try and made it "one apiece" at Goodyear Field versus the Kingston Frontenac Rockets. Eastern Ontario seems to be on the well known spot in baseball today.

Spying on Sports

BY William Ritt
Central Press Canadian

BACK IN 1915 a slender, unsmiling lad of 17 made his first semi-pro uniform and donned the flannel armor which proclaimed it the baseball team that was a member of the Cleveland American association team. That was Alex under Boyd McColl.

That same season a round-faced left-handed hurler named George Ruth was given his first real chance with the Boston Americans and a handsome kid named Rogers Hornsby was worrying himself sick because he feared the Demilcer, Okla., West association team would not have room for him—he had been such a poor batter and infielder the year before.

Alex, that spring a youthful flinger who was alternately wild and wonderful was having the jitters as he realized that he was to get a chance with the New York Yankees. Ed Barrow was at Vance. And still another youth was proudly looking at his picture in all the New York papers. He was Wallie Hoyt, 18-year-old high school pitcher, just signed by the Giants.

Alex McColl knew nothing about baseball these amateurish ambitious youths. All he knew was that he was going to get into the big leagues or else—

* * *

BACK IN Eagleville, O., where he was born and in Geneva, O., where he was a schoolboy also the folks never bothered to read the baseball dope. The sport pages told these fellows Ruth, Hornsby, Vance and Hoyt.

They were interested in Alex who was in a big league town if not with a big league club. Anyway they knew it wouldn't be long before Alex would be sewing 'em all down in either the National or American.

Somehow it didn't come off. The Cleveland American Association club ceased to be and Alex said goodbye to his big league town. But he didn't lose heart. Every season he toiled for one of the 11 bush loop teams which gave him employment for the next 17 years, always in hopes of some big league scout grabbing him.

Meanwhile, unconscious of the existence of Alex McColl, you and I read and thrilled to the glamorous feats of that great quartet—Babe Ruth, Rogers Hornsby, Dazzy Vance and Waite Hoyt.

CAME THE season of 1923 and with it the passing of the great baseball as an active player. Shortly after Ruth, himself, was quoted as saying his day as a regular was about gone. Vance and Hoyt are ending their great careers.

But—and can you believe it?—"ex" and his prize of a championship. these lean pugilistic days is low enough. "Ezzy" are almost a dime a dozen unless they become champs again—which few do.

And don't forget—the way the fight shapes up now, Tony has at least a 50-50 chance to top Barney that good one.

BARNEY ROSS and Tony Canzoneri should put up a good fight.

The Chicago scribe in which Tony lost the decision and the title was so close that even the boys who thought Barney got a hometown decision had to admit it was a close one anyway. Tony is plenty ever see.

If it was a home-town verdict the Canzoneri folk have no kick. Barney has given Tony a chance in Barney's home town and in New York, which is Canzoneri's home town, too.

So this—perhaps Ross believes in keeping the champ he does possess or other lightweight champion has a chance with the title after losing ever won the title twice after losing it. And a lot of great fighters have held that little. a number of them have won it when they least expected it, good.

Tony thinks he is tickled to be the first ex-king of the light ones to turn the trick. Maybe he'll be he'll need to dodge a sharpshooter and break through one of Barney's lefts to keep the lightweight ranks have developed in years.

Trade between Russia and China is reported to be increasing.

Rev. I. B. Naylor Inducted as Minister of Tabernacle Church

Rev. Dr. Semple Addresses Congregation And Minister

Rev. I. B. Naylor, minister of Tabernacle United Church, was inducted into the pastoral charge of an impressive service on Friday evening. Rev. Harold B. Neal of Holloway United Church, moderator, conducted the induction ceremony. Rev. Dr. Semple of John Street United Church read the lesson and offered prayer.

Twenty-five years ago this month a very young man arrived in the western field of the Methodist Church. That youth was Rev. James Semple, Rev. Dr. Semple of Bridge Street United Church, and his superintendent in the district was no older than Rev. I. B. Naylor.

Again the two are in the same field, in Belleville, and it was fitting that the address to the congregation and to the new minister should be delivered by the young man who has risen to fame in Portland, loaned by the Irish Methodist Church to the Canadian mission field where he met Mr. Naylor.

First Induction

After the call to worship the hymn "Holy Spirit Truth Divine" was sung by the congregation, followed by the Scripture reading and prayer, the congregation was addressed by "The Breath of God," after which the induction ceremony took place. The impressive induction ceremony which was brought into the United Church from the Presbyterian. It was the first occasion on which this ceremony took place in the Tabernacle as a few months ago it was the first induction in Bridge Street United Church was the scene of an induction with the arrival of Dr. Semple. Dr. Semple read the official board call, testifying to the call to the pastorate of the minister and putting the interrogations of the inductor according to the prescribed form. Following this Rev. Mr. Neal thereby inducted him into the pastoral charge of the church for the cure of souls. The charge being duly delivered, was extended by the three ministers.

The large board of the church was represented by Messrs. Wm. Walmsley, C. Sharpe, G. P. Lent, Frank Sprague, Frank Spratt, John Maidens, Clinton Shorey, and A. H. Wallace.

Rev. Dr. Semple speaking to congregation and minister, referred to the "Breath of God" sermon which Mr. Naylor had given him on his arrival in the western field.

Congratulation Tabernacle

"I congratulate the congregation on obtaining Mr. Naylor as its pastor and pray that his work here will be the best of all his in the service of the church," said Dr. Semple.

Speaking particularly to the congregation Dr. Semple was strong that a new congregation is just as important as a new minister. "Your minister must be committed to the work of a minister. He is not the instrument, he is the man. A radio inspector, he is not even an automobile expert. He is your leader in the things of God," he said. Preaching today is no less difficult than it ever was and the minister must have time to study, in order to do the work of a minister effectively.

Speaking of sects, to which the term of religious tramps had been applied, Dr. Semple commented, "When these people come to your doors, when you hear of them and are sometimes tempted to go and hear them, I say 'Go to your minister.' He is your teacher in the things of God."

Minister Is Shepherd

"He is your shepherd. You will remember that in the pre-resurrection story, Peter is always the fisherman but afterwards he is the shepherd. You must approach your minister with a new set of attitudes to him. Some persons have a set attitude of hostility. Then we hear sometimes of those who do not like the preaching of a minister. People sometimes says they do not like certain things which ought not to be said from the pulpit. But if they were not spoken from the pulpit I should like to know from where they should be spoken.

"Have sympathy, love and appreciation for the efforts of your minister as he seeks to fulfil his office. Be enthusiastic to your minister. It is not your business to be a spectator in the church but a helper with the Kingdom of God."

What Minister Needs

Addressing the minister, Dr. Semple said, "If I were a layman I would look for certain things in a minister. I would want him to be a manly man. No minister can be truly great if he is not great in manhood. I would want a minister if I could laugh with and I would want a minister to whom I could confide my sorrows and difficulties.

"In the second place, I would want my minister to be intellectually awake. I would want him to know the high figures of human experience. I believe every minister ought to know. Homer, Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, the philosophers and the great writers in the field of literature. The minister must be up with the times because he is dealing with the eternities. Science, education, art and commerce, all these things are up with the times and the minister must be.

"Your minister is an expert in spiritual things. He needs time to be alone with God.

STARS OF RADIOLAND

LEON BELASCO

Sophisticated is the word used by many critics to describe the musical monologs of Leon Belasco and his orchestra, who have regular spots on the weekly radio bill.

"I believe the day is here in the Protestant Church, when we ought to have a confessional, not a sit confessional, but I believe there ought to be a place to which men and women can come with their troubles. All the great preachers of the past have been spiritual experts. We must all be experts.

"There is a call today for fearless and a sacrificial ministry in the church of Jesus Christ."

While the congregation stood, the new minister stepped from the front pew to the pulpit and announced the final hymn, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord."

Ministers in the induction were: Rev. W. D. Hartsoe, Rev. Mr. Evenson, Rev. W. R. Merrick, Rev. Dr. Semple, Rev. Harold B. Neal, Rev. I. B. Naylor.

In the church parlors, following induction, Mr. G. F. Lent, second steward, presided at a program. Numbers being:

Musical selection by Mr. J. D. Sackett; Address by Dr. E. N. Baker of welcome, representing the sister churches of the city; Address of welcome from Mr. J. E. Walmsley, representing the Tabernacle Church; Reply from Rev. I. B. Naylor.

Ministers Mrs. Naylor and Mrs. G. S. Sharpe were invited to the platform and Mrs. Sharpe welcomed Mrs. Naylor to the church and city and Mrs. Lent presented her with a bouquet of flowers.

A musical selection was given by the Girls' Quartette after which was sung God Save the King. Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee followed.

Style Show for 2 Nights Only

It was announced today by the Kiwanis Karnival Committee that the Style Show would last two nights only at the Karnival this year. This fact was accompanied by the cooperation of the merchants showing their garments—and that there were available some super attractions after the end of the Carnival week. Manager Hale Miller will have complete charge of Style Show for the two nights. .

Weddings

PINKSTON—LUSCOMBE

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Luscombe, Holloway street, was the scene of an interesting August wedding at four o'clock this afternoon, when their daughter, Pauline Esther, became the bride of Mr. Orland A. Pinkston, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Pinkston, also of the city. Rev. Robert Hall, pastor of John Street United Church, officiated.

As the Wedding March from Lohengrin was played, the bride who was given in marriage by her father, took her place before the fireplace which was banked with white asters and ferns. She made a charming picture in her quaint frock of white striped lace and organdy with full skirt widely banked, and which was finished with an old-fashioned cape, also deeply tucked. She wore a corsage, gloves and slippers of white satin and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Helen Luscombe of Toronto, twin sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore a lovely frock of palest sea green lace with hat, shoes and gloves of shell pink. Her bouquet was of Opehia roses.

Mr. Wilfred Farrell acted as groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. Mrs. Luscombe mother of the bride, wore a pretty frock of Holland blue triple sheer with a corsage of pink roses while Mrs. Pinkston, mother of the groom was smartly gowned in claret triple sheer with a corsage of Talisman roses.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome silver fitted dressing case, to the bridesmaid silver bracelet watch, to the groomsman gold cuff links and to the flower girl, a compact.

Mr. and Mrs. Pinkston left on a motor trip to Chicago, the bride travelling in a handsome two piece ensemble of putty brown travel tweed in three-piece style, with hat and accessories in shades to match. On their return they will reside in Belleville where they will be at home later. The bride, a charming member of the Holloway set, has been the guest of honour at many delightful pre-nuptial affairs during the past few weeks.

BUSHLOW—SEDORE

There was a quiet wedding at Moodie College, Friday evening, when Miss Louie Lavina Sedore and Dora Maudie Bedore were united in Holy Matrimony by Rev. A. L. Geen. The witnesses were Mr. Percy Bushlow and Matilda Bushlow.

New Cassock is Worn at Wedding

The Reverend Mr. Geen was presented with a handsome cassock which he wore for the first time at the Marshall-Gillon marriage, yesterday in St. Thomas' Church.

Letters to The Editor

WATERFRONT AND ISLAND

To the Editor of the Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir:—

As there is a discussion going on in Belleville about the water front at a few remarks. There is no use crying over spilt milk also crying are useless but at the time our bay bridge was built they should be putting a large portion of the island into it and I tried to get our council to cut the island down and put it in the marsh which would make the island twice the size and prepare it for the future I had visioned for Belleville, one of the finest health and summer resorts anywhere, which is as it is only a few minutes walk from Front Street. Had we got busy on these lines at that time we would have today a population doubled and with the enormous land filling made to advantage Belleville would have a reputation away up in the clouds in every corner of this continent. When I went to our Saturday market and saw the quantity of fruit and vegetables and other produce brought to it from the fertile agricultural belt of Hastings and Prince Edward counties enough to feed a city twice or thrice the size and realized that half or more could not be sold I then fully realized how stupid and inactive it was how little vision we did either or had to allow such a sad state of affairs to exist. We have certainly been asleep at the switch and instead of keeping pace with the farmers, the gardener and fruit grower we have been dreaming of you sweetheart I am dreaming. Well for pity sake let us quit dreaming and wake up like the real men and women of the town of Preston, Ont., a few years ago was only a country village same as. It has no bay Sagnokee river, nor lakes, nor are there any hills, valleys to make scenery, the whole country is as flat as a pancake, neither has it any historic background as we have, only one thing a miners spring but look what they did capitalized on that one thing and look at to-day they have 3rd large hotels and population more than half our number.

Yours truly,
D. H. Ackerill, V.S.

EXPORT TRADE IN EGGS

Ottawa, Sept. 9 (CP)—Steadily increasing activity in the export trade furnished practically the only item of interest on the egg market during the present week, states the Weekly Market Report of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

WATER SOUGHT IN OIL WELL

Slicker of Forgotten Name Robbed Farmers Years Ago

Lindsay, Ont., Sept. 9 (CP)—A smooth-tongued stranger, who took hundreds of dollars out of Carnbray, small village northwest of here 20 years ago, was located today by a few of the oldest residents remaining in the village, and word in the district that a search is being made for a new water supply, and that he is now living in Toronto, was famous well of all.

No one even remembers the names of the flashy individual who strolled into the village one summer morning, sporting a 30 carat gem and remarking to a few friends of the similarity or Cambray soil and formation to that of the state, Pennsylvania. The stranger was so sure that there to be the same oil as to a few, other farmers came with their hard-earned money, begging that it be taken and put to work.

This the stranger did reluctantly, it is said, for all the man really thought there was oil in Cambray, but in due course a rickety drilling outfit arrived, and a well on the old farm now occupied by Peter Wilkinson, abandoned by the village. Then money came to the promoter as the drilling continued, until time drew near for the "first-time" discovery of oil and the inevitable "I-told-you-so" got to work.

Long Values Climb

Then, one night, the well promoter disappeared into the outer darkness and when he returned next morning he had with him a new car!

The village ancients, hardbitten farmers, and even school children, came, sniffed and admitted that it was so. For a few days the promoter was simply swamped with money, which he still accepted reluctantly, and then he disappeared for good, to be heard of as a heard-of peaks.

Rumours that he had poured a quantity of oil down the well as bait proved correct but no trace of him was ever found. The whole rickety drilling machine fell down and rotted away.

About 40 years ago the hole was again discovered and was found to contain more than enough for water. Surplus water was, or no use at the time so a wooden plug was inserted in the hole, the plug piled on top of it, and in time it was forgotten.

Well of Fresh Water

But now Cambray is badly in need of water and the villagers believe that if they can locate this well once more their trouble will be over. The main difficulty is that no one remembers the exact place, and friendships of many year's standing are threatened as the oldtimers search above ground over their shoulders and stamp off to various places on the farm trying to prove that they know where the fabulous, and possibly entirely imaginary, water supply is situated.

Rumour has it that many side bets have been put up on the energetic diggers, almost spading mad in each other's faces as they try to locate the lost oil and a big pool some distance from the hundreds of dollars spent years ago by the promoter, and still flashy raiment for the smooth-tongued stranger.

Even mother may not suspect the trouble

the laxative made especially for children.

TISTLESS, no appetite, she doesn't want to play . . . these, Mother, are the telltale symptoms of constipation. Symptoms that tell you your child needs a good laxative.

But . . . careful, Mother! Laxatives made for grown-ups are often too harsh for the sensitive system of a child. Even in "reduced doses" they may do more harm than good.

To be absolutely safe — give your child Castoria

1933 Kiwanis Karnival Opens on Monday Night Banner Event of Series

The 1933 edition of the annual Kiwanis Karnival will start with a bang on Monday night and no effort has been spared by the Karnival Committee to make this the banner event for the week. The programme announced on another page of this issue bears out this prediction. This is to be a year of variety, great variety as the Style Show of Monday night and Tuesday night will be a complete change of scene and arrangements. Madame Miller comes direct from the Toronto Exhibition with a complete line of ladies' Style Show that created a most favorable impression and brings her a complete line of ladies' lingerie as shown at the exhibition and these will be modelled in conjunction with the Style Show. To take full advantage of the Style Show Monday night it will be necessary to attend both Monday and Tuesday nights. So start Monday for two day style feast. In conjunction with the Style Show Madame Miller is bringing the sean Hemsworth and partner dancing act direct from the Pantages Theatre, Toronto. Jean was at the Karnival about five years ago and created a very favorable impression in Belleville's mind at that time and she should be a welcome addition to the 1933 show.

On Wednesday night the feature attraction will be the sensational Gold Diggers of 1933 direct from the Gold Diggers. There are 20 members.

A beautiful stage has been constructed and those who are participating at the Fashion Show are as follows:

Garments by Westons Limited, J. A. McHale Co. Ltd., Kresh Bros. Ltd.; furs by Delsey's; hats by Woodbury's; jewellery by McFee's; lingerie by Wotiens Ltd.

Madame Hale Miller is well-known as the leading stylist in Canada at least ang her advice and comments on new styles is always illuminative and entertaining.

In this cast that produce a 3-hour stage program of musical comedy and vaudeville skits are for the usual admission price.

For Thursday and Friday, the Kiddies' Revue of 1933 direct from the Uptown Theatre will fill a two night engagement . The whole troupe will be here and they will dramatize the entire stage show that delights Toronto audiences night after night.

Saturday night the program will be announced later .

All told it should be a great week and the Kiwanis Club are to be congratulated on their ambitious venture.

BAR GOLD

Montreal, Sept. 9 (CP)—The price of bar gold in London today was $34.75 per fine ounce in terms of the Canadian dollar, and the quotation of sterling in Montreal at 94.7½, Yesterday the Canadian equivalent was $31.22.

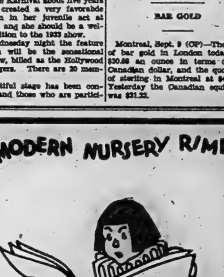
ALEX MORRISON SAYS:

Most of the difficulty you have in properly aiming the clubface for the ball is due to the way your hands are placed on the club.

You probably pick up the club and take your grip while the club is in the air.

This may enable you to arrange your hands in the right relation to each other, but it makes it almost impossible for you to have them in the right relation to the clubface.

You'll do a great deal toward straightening out your shots by having the clubhead resting on the ground when you take your grip.



To play any shot successfully your downswing must be absolutely simple.

This means that both mental and physical thinking must be simplified to a point where you can devote most of your attention to hitting the ball.

Hitting it clean is next to impossible with the amount of worry you generally go through during your downswing.

Once you've reached the end of your backswing you should think only of swinging directly downward toward the ball and keeping your chin back.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

Weston Common To New Market Quiet—Senior Prices At Minimum Low Level of Interest

High At 51 — Toronto Golds Steady—Wheat —New York Trading At

STANDARD EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 9—(CP)—Saturday sessions were resumed today as the Standard Mining Exchange but the patrons were still in a holiday mood of mind. Business was in low volume in all groups, only substantial buying of San Antonio, a volume in Siscoes and two or three penny issues striking the slender surface. Senior gold shares and most of the base metal and silver stocks were steady.

Advances of 25 cents were held by Dome and Bralorne and losses of the same amount were registered for Lake Shore and McIntyre. York Hughes and Wright Hargreaves weakened 8 cents each and Hollinger 10.

Trade in Noranda was limited to a few odd lots at unchanged prices and International Nickel fell about 16 cents in few wahmas.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept. 9.—(CP)—Demand continued lively for Western common in the Saturday session of the Toronto Stock Exchange and the price advanced 2 to 51, a new high for the year. The buying was stimulated by a report that an American firm were seeking control of the business. The turnover was fair also in Nickel but sales were reduced in the main by the run of Abe Beard. Prices held steady with a few additional fractional advances. Other food shares failed to perk up, while Standard Chemical was unchanged at 15 3-4. International Nickel showed a gain of 1-4 but other base metals were lower. Golds developed. British, American and Dipperell were off 1-8 each. Walker, common at 46 was up 1-4. Distillers Seagram fell back 1-4 and Canadian Breweries gained 1-4.

Banks generally showed little change except Nickel which moved up 6 points to 20.75. Brazilian sold at 3.90, C.P.R. 14 1-4.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 9—Resumption of Saturday trading in the securities market today failed to arouse to the usual degree of the year to date. Professionals passed a few equities back and forth on the exchange floor, but price fluctuations were unimportant and the closer was fairly steady. Trading approximated 800,000 shares.

Canadian stocks and bonds were almost riteless. Shares of McIntyre Porcupine and Dome were officially unchanged. Shares of International Nickel and Canadian Pacific were unchanged. Domestic government issues were down 3/4 of a point, but other long-term obligations held to their previous prices. The Canadian dollar maintained its yesterday's rate of 96.13⅛ cents.

WINNIPEG MARKET

Winnipeg, Sept. 9—(CP)—Trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange during the first hour today was a repetition of yesterday's dull trade and wheat priced by a few sendees were still at the minimum levels.

October wheat was pegged at 70 7-8, December at 73 3-8 and May at 78 3-4 cents. A small volume of movement was reported but it had no effect on prices. Hedges were being taken care of outside the market as they were few purchasers in the pit.

Liverpool wheat was 1-8d to 1-4d lower at the close.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Material setbacks in grain values early today followed advices of bumper yield forecasts. The rains were chiefly in Pampas Province, Santa Fe and Cordoba Provinces, where drought has been worst, were still coming 7-8-1 to 1 cent lower, wheat afterward held near the initial limits. Corn started at 3-4 1-2 decline, and subsequently sagged further.

CHEESE BOARD

At the Belleville Cheese Board, Saturday morning, 1,277 white cheese comprised the offering. All sold at 15 9-16 cents, an advance of 15-16 cents over the top price of last Saturday, and the same as the top price of a year ago today.

The corresponding day—Saturday in 1932, 1,894 cheese were sold; 350 brought 10-6-16 cents and the last since 10 1-2 cents.

A BEAUTIFUL SUMMER is followed by a beautiful Fall—everybody enjoying good health must have enjoyed the summer. Of course, some localities suffered for lack of rain, but on the whole, it can be said that the summer was a grand and glorious one, demonstrating again that the Grand Master Manager of the Universe never fails and never forgets. Good time and harvest come regularly, the seasons come and go, and always there is that evidence of masterly direction and loving care. So why worry. This is the tomorrow we worried about yesterday — the things we worry about most never happen — and So—

LET'S STRIKE UP A CHEERY NOTE and look into the future with brave hearts, unafraid, confident and courageous, with faith in our Guide and Director. Autumn brings in many needs which summertime did not insist upon. New clothes, for one thing, from the ground up — the home needs paint or the leak in the roof needs fixing, while the furnace should be cleaned out and worn pipes replaced, ready for the first cold weather, and protected against fire damage. Shoes need repairing, clothes need cleaning and pressing and repairing and many other wants suggest themselves at this season of the year. This page is intended as a quick reference directory of WHERE TO GET WHAT YOU WANT WHEN YOU WANT IT. Watch this page every Saturday, and keep the page handy for quick reference when things are needed which the businessmen listed herewith can supply. Prompt, courteous and entirely satisfactory service is guaranteed.

"NOTHING VENTURED, NOTHING GAINED" — so goes the old saying—it has been said times without number when a decision to do a certain thing has been finally made after much deliberation and a special instance of it having been used was when two enterprising young men decided to form a partnership and go into business for themselves in Belleville a few months ago. The young men referred to are Gordon Davies and Blake Weese and the business which they entered upon is called the CENTRAL Tire and Battery Service with store, garage and work shop situated at 366 Front Street, near the old Wire Foundry. Here the motorist will find a complete stock of Goodrich tires, Exide batteries and accessories and if vulcanizing is required they can do the job to your entire satisfaction at a reasonable charge. They are agents also for motorcycles and new or second hand machines may be purchased from them at right prices. They service motorcycles and do considerable work in this line. A SNAPPY ROAD SERVICE is maintained by this firm and if you require tires, tubes or accessories in a hurry get word to them and your requirements will be supplied quickly. This service is free within the city limits. Gordon Davies and Blake Weese are Belleville boys, they are well known and have many friends who wish them success in their business. They know their work and are right on the job at all times. Their phone number is 262.

GETTING VALUE FOR YOUR MONEY—Everyone expects to do that, but when in addition to full value pleasant service is given then the transaction whatever it may be is remembered and an influence set at work which may lead to further business dealing between the buyer and seller. It is the repeat business which counts and value and service are the means adopted to ensure it. In Belleville, if you drive a car and would like to see real pleasant service in action, pull your car into Quigley's Service Station at the corner of Pinnacle and Dundas streets, here you will receive from Mr. Quigley and his assistants service which will delight you. Not only will you regain full value for your money in high class gas or oil, but the comfort of your car will be improved by a "brush up"—it is all done with a smile and you will drive away satisfied and as a result you will accept the invitation "to call again." Mr. Quigley does also a large trade in Atlas tires, which are guaranteed unconditionally for one year and Atlas batteries which are guaranteed unconditionally for 18 months. If you desire your car greased or washed a satisfactory job will be done for you at the Quigley Service Station.

Mr. and Mrs. William Kyelnateuber of Kingston, have returned home after spending a few days with the latter's brother, Mr. E. M. Leavens.

NO MORE FISHING NOW THAN IN 1932

In spite of the numerous tales of unusual fishing and of record catches far beyond the angler's dream being made all through the province, and particularly in the County of Hastings this year, the number of non-resident anglers' licenses issued in the city during the season, does not bear out the assertion that every body and his brother grabbed a fish pole this year and hiked off to the nearest lakes. The sale of licenses, in fact, was reported at various offices to be "just about the same as last year." One issuer reported that the number had fallen off, while still another claimed that he had sold a few extras. The average, however, was about the same.

Baby Pheasants Visit Farmyards

Hatched in out of the way places under ideal conditions, and favored by perfect weather throughout the whole season, record numbers of sombre-hued baby pheasants have now developed into the brilliantly colored grown birds whose numbers have increased so noticeably lately throughout the whole country that reports from farmers in many sections state that the birds have invaded farm yards fearlessly. On the highways east and west of this city they have been noted in considerable numbers, while in the rural sections in many places where they had not been observed even last year they are comparatively common. The suggestion of a pheasant shoot in this section this year is frowned upon by the majority of residents.

SCHOOL PRINCIPAL STRUCK BY TRAIN

ALMA, Ont., Sept. 9.—(CP)—Fatally injured when struck by a train at a crossing near here, Robert Techans, principal of the local public school, is dead here.

Techans was crossing the track last night on the way to visit his sister at the time of the accident. An inquest has been ordered by Coroner Dr. Kerr of Elora.

Favors Abolition of Bank Directorates

TORONTO, Sept. 9.—(CP)—Abolition of Boards of Directors of Canadian banks was urged upon the Royal Commission on banking today. Their place should be taken by independent officials who would be responsible to the boards of the Central Bank or the National Investment Commission to be created. Existing bank shareholders should be put in the position of preferred shareholders and not by far limited to exercise any control over banking policy or administration.

Air Manoeuvers Over Toronto

During aerial manoeuvers over the city of Toronto, given by the Royal Canadian Air Force Station planes from the Airport on the Trent Road, piloted by Flying Officers, L. R. Wray, of this city, and J. H. Hurley, are expected to give Toronto residents a thrill today when the two planes will participate in the annual air pageant of the Toronto Flying Club. Wray and Hurley are known as two of the fastest flyers in Canada, and at a recent meet in Cleveland swept the skies clean with the daring stunts. Also guests of the Toronto Flying Club will be the No. 1 Pursuit Group of Michigan flyers from Selfridge Field.

RETURN FROM BRITAIN

QUEBEC, Sept. 8.—(CP)—W. S. Davies, President of the Kingston, Ont., Whig-Standard, and Mrs. Davies, have returned to Canada, from a trip to the British Isles. They landed from the Liner Montclare and left immediately for Kingston.

The general assembly of the Church of Scotland has given unqualified approval to the admission of women to church offices.

BARGAIN BRIDE

By Russ Westover.

No, they didn't have to if Barrett never told anyone. But if he told anyone they might have to, she had been wakeful the whole night, trying to decide whether to be happy for Barrett; but failing knowing only fear.

Barrett said bluntly, "It's about 116 in here, Marcia. It's no wonder you feel ill."

How well he remembered Marcia's mother's last days. The overheated room in which she preferred to gasp, the stuffiness, odor of flowers.

"Marcia," he went on gently, "you should have some window open. Have you been out at all today?"

"I'm not well enough," she answered emotionly. "You don't realize how ill I am, Barrett. No man could—or would if he could!" she ended bitterly.

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

He sat down in a straight chair that was near her sofa. He hoped she was not going to set up the belief she did days. He had come there happily in spite of the belief that Gerald had given his life. He had come feeling that the tangled skein would straighten out on its own, at least, an assurance of peace to Elinor and Edmund.

He heard Marcia's voice again. She wailed her refrain, "I am very ill, Barrett!" she stated. He nodded her, frowning, sorry for the but nevertheless irritated. The world was full of women who felt as she did and who said nothing about it. But sort cushions and fine seams do not breed any sort of strength.

Marcia pushed the jet-black curling hair away from her moist forehead. "It is worry that is killing me!" she went on. "I ought not to be worried now—and Dick would never forgive me if I knew—but I know it!"

Barrett smiled. She was leading up to something that she meant to ask. He knew her ways all too well. "What particularly?" he inquired as gently as he could, "is worrying you, Marcia?"

She wiped the palms of her small hands on a handkerchief before she spoke. "The idea of your telling Elinor about—Gerald!" she stated.

He made no answer. Rather sluggishly he rumbled for his cigaret case, brought it forth and lit a cigaret. Then he puffed deeply, so stating absurdly as the small prick of heat from which the faint blue smoke rose, lastly into the heavy air. He had had no intention of telling Gerald's story to Elinor yet he did not want to promise Marcia that he would never tell her. A time might come when Elinor would ask questions and have every right to know the truth.

"She would—talk!" Marcia went on, her voice low and pulsing.

"No, Marcia. She wouldn't."

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

The woman laughed acidly. "No?" she murmured with lingering upward inflection. She lay back, "I hope I shall not be sick. But I think I can easily by not wanting to live. I do not want to live under this threat which you continue to hold over me!"

"Is that quite fair?" he asked, knowing he was acting a fool in trying to reason with her.

Again she sat upright. "Is it fair," demanded bitterly, "that I have to pay and pay and pay for the fact that I was a child—a trusting child —carried in and laid down by an old man who knew nothing of the needs of my nature? And I believed you," she ended with a change of tone, "when you said you would help me!"

"Haven't I tried to help you?" Barrett asked.

"Go! Go now and tell her!" Marcia went on. She began to tear at the small cushions with little strength in her hysterical frenzy. Wrenching ache shook her. She clutched at her hair, tore it and set tears on it. Barrett gently caught her hands and held them. It was a new job with the despondent struggling. "Hush!" he ordered her. "I don't want to hear what I'm going to say to you!"

"Not unless—unless—!" she wailed.

"You will!" he said loudly. Her wide, white "You are ill. I know it," he began, "but that doesn't change the matter. I have to give in to you. And I do. But you must keep that promise you that I will not tell Elinor the truth about Gerald no matter what she thinks of me. Does that satisfy you?"

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

He dropped her hands, stood away.

"Darling!" she murmured, smiling with her lips while the eyes threatened.

He shook his head. She had forced him to make a promise that he might do away with any possibility of understanding and sympathy from Elinor. He had wanted, above all things, that Elinor should respect him. She might have misunderstanding, learn to loathe him, to think of him as a weakling—but not

"It is most unfair of you, Marcia," he said slowly. He moved toward the hall.

"Barry!" she called, appealing. For the first time in his life he did not answer that call. She rose as quickly as he. "I will follow him.

"Where are you going?" she exclaimed.

"To my wife," he answered sternly.

"I haven't said one word about your happiness—" she murmured. He smiled grimly. She had, perhaps, said several words about his happiness. Time would prove that.

Marcia was weeping when Dick arrived. She had felt very ill all day, she confessed. She looked frightened. He drew her into his arms. Somehow, she added, voice trembling, Barrett's coming had upset her.

Dick Radnor muttered his consent. He had, indeed, moved over Marcia's hair. "I understand that, dearest," he confided. "We have heard the Stafford family's dishonesty paraded in the way they tried to deceive old Miss Ella Sexton in order to get her money, haven't we?" He added cheerily that he held her by closer. "We don't understand that sort of thing, do we?" he ended.

Her "No!" was hysterical; too loud. Then suddenly she smiled, relaxed. Barrett, Barrett broke a promise and Barrett paid promised her that he would never tell Elinor the truth about Gerald.

CHAPTER 27

When Barrett arrived home that afternoon he heard music. Someone was playing the piano beautifully. Elinor, of course. Listening, he forgot the promise Marcia had just wrung from him—a vow which, it boyd, might cause untold difficulties. Barrett knew that and yet he knew that he would keep it.

What was Elinor playing? Something lilting, haunting. He slipped from his coat in the slow, familiar manner of the preoccupied. From the rear of the hall Higgins came forward, his voice reduced to a whisper. "Mr. Barrett, the cook and the maids wanted to hear the music, so I let the doors open to the rear of the house. I hope it was all right?"

"Perfectly all right. I'm sure Mrs. Colvin would be glad to have them listen if they enjoy it."

"Thank you, sir. And, Mr. Barrett, if it isn't too presuming for me to ask it, would you tell Mrs. Colvin how much we have enjoyed her playing?"

"I certainly will, Higgins."

"Thank you, sir."

Higgins took Barrett's hat and coat and Barrett pushed open the door leading to the parlor. Elinor saw him. She flushed slightly, "I wasn't expecting you so soon," she confessed.

He crossed the room quickly. "It's been years," he said, "since there has been any music in this house." The tone of his voice told her that he had missed it.

"What was that you were playing as I came in?" he asked. He was so absorbed that she forgot to be self-conscious.

"Oh, that? Something by Nevin. I've forgotten what its called." She seated herself again and began to finger the melody. He leaned his arm on the piano, looking down at her as she repeated the strain that had captured him.

"That's it," he murmured.

"It is sweet."

"Very!"

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

Her hands grew still and he said quickly, "Please don't stop."

"What do you want me to play?"

"Anything you like," he told her. Higgins entered silently with the tea tray to the strains of Victor Herbert's "Gypsy Sweetheart." Higgins thought the young couple made a charming picture—she at looking up, smiling, and the man,listening eagerly.

At length Barrett said. "Come! The tea's been here a long while, and you must be tired!"

"But I'm not, truly!" she assured him. "I love to play."

"I haven't realized how much I've missed hearing it," he said. He commented as he moved across the room. She sat in the chair behind the tea table and he took his place near her in a low chair that showered the fire.

Marcia makes you forget your troubles," he went on.

"Yes, if they aren't too deep. That was the first time I've played since father was hurt," it was true that she had not, "but an hour ago, touched that old piano and I believed you," she ended with a change of tone, "when you said you would help me!"

"Haven't I tried to help you?" Barrett asked.

"Go! Go now and tell her!" Marcia cried. "You see, she began to tear at the small cushions with little strength in her hysterical frenzy. Wrenching aches shook her. She clutched at her hair, tore it and set tears on it. Barrett gently caught her hands and held them. It was a new job with the despondent struggling. "Hush!" he ordered her. "Then Gobred built here a city and a strong castle"Gobred took the title of Prince and Bohun that of King. Those titles have been handed down from father to son. Gobred's men still wear their crosses upon their breasts and so are called 'Frontiers.' The followers of Bohun wear crosses upon their backs, hence are called 'Backers.' But long since both sides have given up hope of going on or turning back, for we be surrounded by a vast army of Barsoens."

Blake, amazed at such a strange state of affairs "Anyway, we know no other country and are content." For a while both men were silent. Blake was the first to speak. "This big nurse interests me," he said. "When does it take place? Do you think I could take part in it? I'm getting better with my knife every day." Sir Richard looked at him and shook his head. "Tomorrow then will be dad." he said. "Today you're as cheerful as a bustard," exclaimed Blake. "I am only telling thee the truth," replied Sir Richard.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts are back in town.

This delightful comedy pair are at the Belle today and Monday, in "Her First Mate", their latest co-starring vehicle, and to say they have outdone their previous efforts is to put it mildly. The picture is a positive riot of merriment.

Summerville and Miss Pitts are presented as a married couple living in a small town on the shore of Long Island Sound, with the husband dreaming of a career as Captain of an ocean-going freighter—and working in a menial position on an Albany River night boat. The fun begins in real earnest when his wife, in an attempt to satisfy his longing, secretly spends their entire joint savings to buy for him the ferry boat which operates out to their town, notwithstanding the fact that the ambitious Slim regards the ram shackle tub with lofty contempt.

Never before have Summerville and Miss Pitts been as aptly cast as in "Her First Mate", and never before have they appeared together in a picture so plentifully supplied with funny situations and dialogue. The same degree of excellence, is noticeable in the cast which has made the most of every situation.

New Zane Grey Classic

George O'Brien comes back to the screen after a six-month tour of Europe in "Life in the Raw", the new Romkrex, and the second feature attraction on the same program. It is a Zane Grey story that once again unites the foremost writer and the premier player of Western film stories.

"Life in the Raw" is reported as a combination of the outstanding elements in popular adventure romances. It depicts the arrival of an inexperienced Eastern girl into the midst of frontier hazards and intrigues. And it reveals the true emotions of a group of people who, impressed by the wide-openness of Western territory, feel that they no longer hide their true feelings.

The film has a number of hair-raising features, not the least of which are the riding and the fighting of O'Brien himself. A number of the finest horsemen in the film colony has been recruited for some of the most exciting riding ever witnessed on the screen.

Claire Trevor, a newcomer to the screen is the new leading lady introduced by O'Brien in this picture.

AT THE CAPITOL

James Cagney, the bad boy of the screen, comes to the Capitol theatre today in his latest Warner Bros. production, "Picture Snatcher," in a thoroughly hard boiled role, although a delightfully entertaining one.

"Picture Snatcher" is based on a newspaper story by Danny Ahearn, which treats of a little known phase of the work on a crime beat and of the most sensational type. Jimmy, in the title role, is the popular picture man who gets photographs of people and news events by hook or crook, regardless of stikes or common decency.

He is particularly fitted for the job, having served a term in Sing Sing for robbery just before he enters upon his new vocation. He decides to go straight and become the most resourceful and daring picture snatcher on the paper.

Patricia Ellis, a seventeen year old Broadway ingenue, plays opposite Cagney in a picture which marks her first leading role in pictures. She was cast for the part after her notable work as the ingenue in "The King's Vacation", starring George Arliss.

Others in the cast include such notable players as Ralph Bellamy, Alice White, Ralf Harolds, Robert Emmet O'Connor and George Pat Collins. This is Miss White's second picture since leaving the screen two years ago to make personal appearances throughout the country. She has the vamp role and is roughhoused by Jimmy in his usual Devil-may-care style.

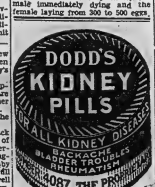
The screen play is by Allen Rivkin and P. J. Wolfson while the direction is by Lowe Bacon, who directed the sensational musical hit "2nd Street."

The old days when iron men in wooden ships sailed the seven seas have been the inspiration of many exciting tales of adventure. During sea-dogs of those days harpooned whales by hand and recounted many a thrilling saga of their battles with the monsters of the deep.

It must have been the glamor of these stories that prompted young Georgs Vanderbilt to emulate the sea-heroes of others days when he ventured into the southern seas in a small boat and went a-hunting for the man-eating shark, the savage barracuda, the giant ray or devil-fish and the monster whale, taking with him a motion picture camera to record the exploits of the expedition.

Visual evidence that the tiger-fish and monsters of the deep held no terrors for this youthful adventurer, is shown in "Devil's Playground," which opened at the Capitol theatre today, (Saturday.)

Young Vanderbilt is seen actually harpooning a whale from a small boat. Naturally, the whale takes exception to such treatment and begins tearing around the ocean at mad speed. While this is happening, another giant humpback appears on the scene, blowing and diving, imperiling the boat with the harpooners in it.



This is just one of a series of exciting and hazardous scenes in this thrill-adventure in southern seas. It is packed full of nerve-tingling action, authentically recorded.

Monday and Tuesday are Dinner-ware Gift Days for ladies.

FIRE DESTROYS BARN

Brantford, Ont., Sept. 9.—(CP)—Fire of undetermined origin today razed the barns and stock owned by Percy Yeager, 10th Concession, Townsend. Destroyed in the barns were 2,500 bushels of grain, two horses, four calves and a Holstein bull. Loss was covered by insurance.

SKIPPER HAS NEW STRUGGLE

Bluenose Captain Offers Indignant Denial To Charges

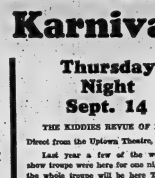
Chicago, Sept. 9.—(CP)—Captain Angus Walters had a new kind of fight on his hands today.

The Doughty Captain of the Lunenburg Champion Bluenose, who has triumphed over the vagaries of sailing weather and of fish runs, as a racing-man and as a fisherman, found himself in a court battle with $5,000, the prize.

That sum was asked in a Federal Court suit filed yesterday by Adgidon Stillwell, wealthy Chicagoan, on the grounds that he and his guests were subjected to indignities from Walters and the Bluenose crew during a chartered cruise of the Great Lakes. The captain quickly entered a general denial.

Meantime the proud Bluenose was under libel bond.

In the suit, Stillwell alleged members of his party, as well as himself, were called abusive names during the cruise that cost him $2,500. Food provided aboard was unpalatable, he charged, saltcrmen scrubbing the decks, and the crew paid guests too early in the morning; they were confined to a restricted area aboard because parts of the Bluenose were unsafe. Finally, Stillwell contended, berths weren't made up.



In the answer he filed with the court, Captain Angus said there was never a complaint as the Stillwell party disembarked at Mitrurupee. Everybody shook hands and some of the guests had remarked it had been a wonderful cruise.

Walters denied there had been any agreement that the Chicago host and his guests were to occupy officers' quarters. He said Stillwell had been offered the boatmaster's quarters but he declined.

CODE SIGNING NOT IMPORTANT FORD VIEW

Detroit, Sept. 9.—(AP)—On the eve of Henry Ford's return to his office from a three weeks' vacation, there were strong indications today that the Ford Motor Company policy on the NRA would be that signing of a code is unimportant if there is compliance with its terms.

Ford, represented here as the man who is "dealing with the matter", was getting ready to leave his Huron Mountain Camp, near Big Bay, Mich., as it was doubtful if his return would bring any change in the situation.

Claire Trevor newcomer to the screen from the dramatic stage, has the leading feminine role opposite George O'Brien in "Life in the Raw" from a romance by Zane Grey, now at the Belle.

DEPUTY MINISTER WILL STAND TRIAL

Charged With Criminal Negligence in Driving Car While Intoxicated

Brantford, Ont. Sept. 9.—(CP)—Charges against Harry M. Robbins, Deputy Minister of Hospitals for Ontario, arising out of the injury in an automobile accident of Jack Newitt, Brantford, will be heard here, Sept. 20. Robbins is charged with criminal negligence, driving while intoxicated and having liquor illegally in his possession.

Magistrate F. B. Blake heard Crown Attorney W. M. Cherton report the Crown's witness would not be ready before Sept. 20th. Newitt, allegedly struck by Robbins' car, is still in the hospital.

Little Benny's Note Book

My sister Gladdis and Harvey was at our house for supper last nite, being special stuff chicken and gravey, and we was just getting reddy to start and Gladdis jumped up and looked out the dining room window saying, O that moon, did anybody ever see such a perfeck moon. Mother, you must come and look, she said.

With ma put down the carving knife and did saying, O isn't that divine, isn't that just too wonderful, I could just stay here looking at it forever, it's like a grate golden ball hung in the heavens.

It's just too poetic, look at it sailing through the clouds, it looks like a fairy ship on a magic ocean, Gladdis said. Who could think of sailing with the moon like that in mersel at? she said, and Harvey said, I could for one, I'm so hungry I could eat the moon and everything.

And the motion, when do we eat? pop said, and ma said, Willyum Potts have you no sentelick sense whatever? and Gladdis said, Men are all stummick, my stars Harvey, I'm ashamed of you.

And her and ma sat down again, and pop said, All stummick heh, I'll show you I can admire the moon as soldfully as anybody else, one on Harvey, where's your poetry?

It's on the way, Harvey said. And him and pop got up and looked out the winder, pop saying, My gollies now that's what I call a moon, it looks like a lost pawnbroker's ball looking for the other 3.

And they kept on making happy sounds up at the sky, pop saying It's adorable, it's almost delicious and Harvey saying, It's too cute for words. I'm here for the nite.

Now Harvey sit down, mother wants to serve, have a little sense for once, Gladdis said. Sounding hungry, and ma said, Willyum If this nice chicken gets cold you'll hear from me and you'll hear plenty.

O well if you wimmin cant think about nothing but eating, what can we poor poets do? pop said, and Harvey said, That's rite, stiffle our soles with giblet sauce, we're helpless.

And they sat down and started to be looking glad of it.

SAVES WOMAN WHO DOESN'T THANK HIM

"Climb Aboard — I'll Hit You Over the Head With This Oar," He Said

Carpinteria, Calif. Sept. 9.—(CP)—R. W. Waycott, retired Pasadena capitalist, is not a man to bandy words.

He heard a young man shout that his sweetheart had quarrelled with him and was trying to drown herself.

Waycott got into a boat and told her to climb in. She said, "Go away".

"Climb aboard at once or I'll hit you over the head with this oar and drag you in," said Waycott.

She did and Waycott took her ashore, where she resumed the quarrel and departed without a "thank you" to her rescuer.

WEARY, SICK, BALLOONISTS ARE LOCATED

Cut Down Telephone Pole And Leave Note For Linemen

FOUND IN CAMP

Van Orman and Trotter Are Suffering From Ptomaine Poison

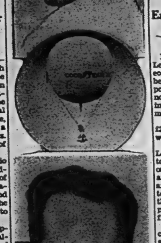
Sudbury, Ont., Sept. 11 (CP)—Word came out of the northern bush this morning at 11.50 a.m. that the two American balloonists, Ward Van Orman and Frank A. Trotter, piloting the lost Goodyear XI in the James Gordon Bennett international race from Chicago, were safe, although sick and sore after a week's tramp through the wilds. They were found 30 miles north of Sudbury.

Yesterday afternoon, the Ontario Hydro telephone line between Sudbury and Algold Canyon was out of commission, and this morning Patrolman Jim Barrett set out to find the trouble. At Tower 830 he found the following note pinned to the broken telephone:

"This telephone pole was cut September 10th, at 11 S. Goodyear balloon team of W. T. Van Orman and Frank Trotter in the hope that repair men would aid us in getting civilization from here. We will continue south along the high tension line. Please come after us.

"We have a gun and some food, but are both sick evidently from ptomaine poisoning. Five your gun, three times and we will answer. Please hurry and signed, F. A. Trotter."

Found Miles Away



Without stopping to repair the damage line, Patrolman Barrett proceeded in search for the missing balloonists. At 12.30 a.m. this morning he located them in camp at Tower 728 which is approximately five miles from where he came upon the note. He gave them such food as he had and immediately returned to repair the telephone line.

Finding of the American balloonists ended a four-day quest for four missing starters in the Bennett race. The Poles, Captain Francisky Hynek and Lieut. Joseph Jerzmanowski, apparently winners of the race, were found near Riviere a Pierre, Quebec, late Saturday.

Barrett provided Van Orman and Trotter with food and hopes to be able to bring them to Sudbury before night.

SAFE BUT ILL

WARD T. VAN ORMAN FRANK TROTTER

Goodyear Balloon crew of Ward Van Orman and Frank A. Trotter, trek through woods near Sudbury. News came when they cut telephone pole to attract attention of linemen in the hope of getting out to civilization. The men were found in a camp five miles away. The Goodyear XI, was one of the balloons in the James Gordon Bennett cup race.

AUTHOR FINED FOR ANNOYING GIRL IN TRAIN

Sir Leo Chiozza Money Denied Seizing Girl And Kissing Her

HAND-KISSING

English Girl Tells How She Was Forced To Leave Train

Epsom, Eng., Sept. 11 (AP)—Sir Leo Chiozza Money, distinguished economist, author and former member of parliament, was convicted in police court today on charges of annoying a young woman passenger in a southern railway ex compartment last month.

He was sentenced to pay a fine of £2 10s. He gave notice that he would appeal.

The prosecution asserted that Sir Leo followed the girl, Miss Ivy Rixton, into the compartment, insisted on making conversation with her and finally seized her in his arms and repeatedly kissed her. Miss Rixton was forced to leave the train at the next station, according to the prosecution, in order to get away from him.

The court was informed that, among other things, Sir Leo said to the girl: "I'm old enough to be your papa." He is 63.

It was testified that Miss Rixton said: "If you are a gentleman you will leave me alone."

Sir Leo strongly denied the allegations. He declared he did not kiss Miss Rixton's hand in a tunnel, as she had testified, but sat perfectly still as one usually did in tunnels.

Later, he continued, he kissed the back of her hand sympathetically after she had told him some of her troubles. On cross-examination he admitted kissing her hand within 20 minutes of meeting her for the first time in his life.

FISCAL YEAR ENDS DEC. 31ST

Hon. H. H. Stevens Explains Importance of Unity

Ottawa, Sept. 11 (CP)—The financial year for the Dominion, Provinces and Canadian municipalities will end on December 31, the close of the calendar year—if a proposal before the Dominion-Provincial conference is finally made effective. The suggestion came before the meeting today for consideration.

At present the end of the financial year for the Dominion is March 31.

The great fact which had emerged in recent years and particularly under the pressure of the depression, stated Hon. H. H. Stevens, that public finance was today, a unity in the sense that was never true before the Ottawa government was faced with that new situation. The government, he said, had no desire whatever to entrench on the prerogatives of provincial municipalities; but it remained true that the "repercussions" of what the provincial, federal or municipal field back upon the National government, which was responsible for trade and other relations with outside countries into which financial considerations entered at every turn.

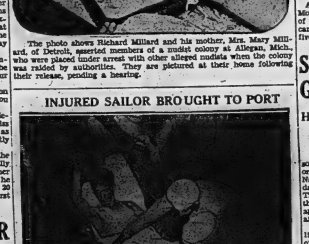
Bandit's Own Gun Used to Beat Him Down After Bitter Battle

Hamilton, Sept. 11.—In a desperate struggle on an isolated side road, northwest of the city, early Sunday, Harry Rymal of 370 Locke Street South, disarmed an alleged thug, rendering him unconscious, bundled him into his car and drove to the top of the Claremont Cut, where the man was turned over to Provincial Police.

The alleged thug gave his name as Charles F. Taylor, Apartment 8, 2261½ James Street North. He was removed to the General Hospital, said suffering from a possible fractured skull. Scores of deep wounds are said to have been inflicted on his head with the butt of his own revolver in the hands of Mr. Rymal.



Only an accidental advantage, it is said, saved Mr. Rymal from being shot, as the revolver Taylor is alleged to have carried contained blank shells, while the weapon had a centre-fire hammer. The gas-flame and letting it escape. She did not regain consciousness and Friday her condition became critical.

$100,000 HAUL BY 8 BANDITS AT ST. PAUL

Two Cash Boxes Seized At Door of Express Office

LARGE SEDAN USED

White Handkerchiefs Cover Lower Part of Thieves' Faces

St. Paul, Sept. 11 (AP) — Eight masked robbers held up two railway express company employes at the door of their office early today, escaping with two large cash boxes which police said contained between $90,000 and $100,000.

Cash boxes were on a hand truck outside the door of the express company office, near the union station, ready to be taken to Minneapolis.

The police said the night bandits backed a big sedan under the depot concourse, 100 far from the express company office.

As T. J. Mangan, a guard, and S. Minier, messenger, opened the door of the office to wheel out the truck carrying the safe containers, white five obbers surrounded them.

STORY ANNOYS GEO. BLAGDEN

Had Told Friends Not To Repeat His Suspicions About "Dope"

Toronto, Sept. 11. — (CP)—If someone dosed" George Blagden's orange drink before the Canadian National Exhibition 15-mile swim 10 days ago. It will never be known.

The Toronto man, who has said the bottle containing the drink disappeared from the boat immediately after he was taken from the water.

Blagden, winner of the event in 1932, was forced to quit at the end of the 12th mile in his defending effort. He said a painful attack of stomach cramps, that started shortly after he took a drink from the bottle, finally left him so weak he could not continue.

Blagden had the poison story brought to him by his father in Manitoba and despaish quoted Bruce Denham, also a starter in the swim, as saying Blagden had remained in Toronto to investigate a suspicious flip that had been injected with.

"The Southern swimmer said he had insisted his friends say nothing about the matter, "But in spite of that fact they have been all promise not to say a word about it, one of the friends has talked—now I guess—went home and shot off his face."

Blagden said he had mixed the same orange drink he always used in long distance swims. But a few minutes before the event started he left his boat to talk to photographers to snap him several times.

"After the first lap of the swim I asked for a drink and it was passed out to me. I drank a couple of mouthfuls and right away I sensed something. I spat out the last mouthful and threw the rest away.

"He said he drank fresh water after the 12th. "But I don't feel ill," he said. "I thought I could stick it out, but I got too painful in the beginning but the cramps became worse and the sickness grew. I was not hardly keen on my eyes open. I couldn't understand what was causing it. I had to come out."

Blagden said when he got back to his dressing room, he sent a friend to bring him the bottle of orange mixture from the boat. It was two miles away, and when the friend got to the boat the bottle was gone.

The swimmer's chief concern was that the story would be taken as an alibi for his defeat. Murvin Nelson, Fort Dodge, Iowa won the race.

Spread Sand and Gravel of Island on Bay Ice, Cheap Plan Suggested

A well-known citizen offers what believes to be a novel but workable scheme for the making of a beach on Zwick's Island, without going to the expense of hiring tugs and scows to convey the material dug from the top of the island to a point some distance from shore into the water.

The work will be done during the winter time when the ice has the summer's sand and gravel and extra work will be needed," he pointed out.

SEVEN FUGITIVES WALK BACK TO "SCHOOL"

Five Other Boys Are Found Walking On Street.

Mimico, Ont., Sept. 11 (CP) — Shivering from the chill of summer's first cool night, twelve youths who ran away from Victoria Industrial School here were back at the institution today, "not very pleased with themselves," in the words of superintendent W. G. Green. Nine boys were still at large.

Police and school officials discovered three of the lads walking along the highway before daybreak today and returned them to school. Green said they were glad to get back. As for the other nine he was continued by police and Mimico citizens. So far no citizen has collected a single $5 reward that goes with the capture of an escaped boy, seven of the twenty-one who ran out yesterday having returned voluntarily and two have been captured by either police or school attaches.

SNOWDEN BACKS UP PROTEST OVER RADIO

Says Arrangement of Broadcasts Crushes Independence

London, Sept. 11 (C.P. Cable)—Viscount Snowden, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, warmly supports the joint protest of Austen Chamberlain, Lloyd George and Winston Churchill against the policy of the British Broadcasting Corporation limiting political broadcasts to party nominees.

"It crushes out all independent political views," declares the former Labor leader, "and will give the public but the opinion of the official parties who will criticize each other and try to make out a case for themselves."

ARRESTED AS HE STEPS IN POLICE AUTO

Wilson Pleads Guilty And Is Remanded For Sentence

BAILEY ELECTS

Police Believe Arrests of Two May Clear Up Some Cases

But a few hours after the frustration of an alleged attempt to rob Oliver's general store at Thomasburg, Ont., Frank Wilson, Jumper, and George Bailey of Point Anne, were arraigned before Magistrate Mikel late Saturday afternoon and Wilson pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering and was remanded for sentence. Bailey, however, elected trial by Judge or jury and was remanded for preliminary hearing.

Bailey, who is alleged by the police to be the second man in the Thomasburg attempted robbery interrupted by strangers early Saturday morning, after Wilson was arrested by the Provincial Police, was arrested at the same organization after the police and armed posses had searched the entire countryside surrounding Thomasburg all day Saturday. Bailey, walking along the road about 4 pm. Saturday afternoon near Thrasher's Corners, hailed a passing car and asked for a ride. In the car were Provincial Police of the Provincial Police, in plain clothes, who had been diligently searching all day for him as a suspect. They immediately opened the car door and Bailey as he stepped into the car was immediately arrested and taken before Magistrate Mikel. Bailey claims he was in no way connected with Saturday's incident now with the stolen car that was found early Saturday morning at Thomasburg.

After searching from 3 a.m. Saturday morning until Bailey stopped the car in which the police were in the entire countryside was up in arms and searching for the alleged escaped two. Wilson was arrested earlier Saturday morning. The Provincial Police stated, following the arrests, that they felt the arrest or many of the unsolved robberies and breaking in the northern part of Hastings County would be forthcoming at the trial of the two men now in custody. Bailey recently was liberated from the Penitentiary at Portsmouth where he served a three year term for breaking and entering the Bellville where both men are now confined. Bailey and Wilson appeared together at Thomasburg on Saturday morning when the Provincial Police ascertained that Bailey had not been home the night previous, they stated.

Wilson named Wilson mentioned above, is not the Wilson who escaped from under the nose of "Sally" Wilson and who himself uses that name.

MERCURY NEARS MARK OF FROST

There was a hint in the air early Monday morning of approaching frost, the mercury hit the lowest level of the season. Official registration placed the lowest point at 41 degrees early in the morning—just five points above freezing. Until 10 o'clock in the morning when the sun came out the nippy temperature prevailed as in evidence. Highest point reached on Monday was 56 above. Over the week end, although cool weather prevailed, comparatively high registrations were noted with a high of 66 Sunday and a low of 42.

LARGE CARGOES HANDLED AT DOCK

Further activities were noted at the local dock today with the arrival of the steamer Kenosha on her regular weekly port of call. Over two thousand tons of wheat were loaded, together with a quantity of canned goods made up the shipment to Montreal.

Over nine thousand bags of flour the largest single shipment to reach port this season were taken from the hold of the steamer Kenosha during the afternoon Saturday and by into the morning on Sunday by sixty three local men who walked on the docks Saturday morning when the steamer arrived. The five hundred ton cargo was destined for the Tweed Milling Company of the city and was shipped from Montreal. The Tweedsmuir, one of the largest boats on the lakes had just recently undergone repairs during the recently dredged channel. She left again at dawn Sunday morning.

Young People Rally at Citadel

Sunday was Rally Day for the "Young People" of the local Salvation Army. The afternoon service was devoted to the children and members of the Sunday School while in the evening Adjutant A. W. Martin addressed the "teen" age young people and took as the basis for his remarks "What think ye of Christ". The special speaker was Miss Bamford of Peterboro, who is visiting in the city, and was a pioneer in Salvation Army work in Ivy in bygone years ago. Mrs. (Adjutant) Martin also addressed the meeting and spoke particularly to the young people's workers.

The services throughout the day were most inspiring and both young and those of more mature years found much enjoyment and enlightenment in them.

The following was the children's program of the afternoon.

Opening Exercises, Rally Day, Sunday School; Recitation "Daisies," Dorothy Gibson; Singing, "Jesus Loves Me," Grace Martin and D. Mitchell; Recitation "All Singing" June Wardle; Song, "I know how to Pray" Recitation "The Coming of the Missionaries" Ina Young, Trumpet obbligato John Mollinger; Recitation, Mary Bell, Grace Martin, Chosen, mens boys of Band of Love; reading, "Would you if you were me" Glenys Green; Cradle Roll names called by Mrs. Lemale.

POLICE COURT

Activities proved rather quiet over the week-end in local police circles. Clarence Cook, Church St., informed the police that night prowlers had broken and entered his garage, stealing practically all of the gasoline and oil from his car.

A slight accident was regried by a United States motorist on Saturday. The tourist was proceeding along Dundas Street when Hiddy Gerald Semark, aged 3 years, darted out from the curb. The lad was knocked to the pavement but sustained no injuries.

Following complaints from the humanitarian vicinity of West Bridge and Highland Ave., the police discovered four lads who were endeavoring to solicit automobile rides westward. The boys were causing a disturbance.

Late Saturday afternoon Constable Taylor was called to an island in the Moira River where a sick horse was found. The animal was suffering considerably. The officer shot it.

LOCAL RESIDENT PICKS BIG PEACH

A peach measuring eleven inches in circumference was shown to the editor today by Miss Lottie Grant, 30 Victoria Ave. While the yield this year is small the fruit is of splendid quality. Last year Miss Clark was fortunate in harvesting several large baskets of prime fruit from the same tree which has been bearing now for several years.

FOUR SEE BIG FAIR IN CITY

Boys and Girls From Belleville Guests of Wrigley's, Tell of Sights

Four happy Belleville children, Boys and Girls from Belleville, have returned to the city after a wonderful holiday in Toronto, the guests of the William Wrigley Jr. Co. Today friends and school chums have been properly awed and reduced to frank envy by the story of the thrills and entertainments arranged for the five hundred small visitors from all over the province who were chosen from various communities to enjoy their first visit to Toronto at the expense of Wrigley's. Mayor Stewart of Toronto in welcoming the boys and girls remarked that while he had assured many had been chosen, the "plum" baby, he could hardly believe that they hadn't been selected for their good looks. Certainly no group of more charming children could have been assembled. Belleville had they been handpicked than Bessie Hiles, Margaret Hodges, William Doyle and Walter Kokesh.

Interviewed by the Ontario Intelligencer, the boys and girls recounted in a joint and interesting way the various happenings from the moment they left Belleville on Thursday evening till their return Saturday evening. Walter Kokesh had a royal send-off from the chums of Dunnardon Street. He was escorted to the station in real style with a whole drag load of boys and girls in attendance. The girls had the honour of driving to the station with Mrs Worship, Mayor Worship, who was on hand to see that the children got away safely. On the train, the "four" began immediately for a representative of Wrigley's band demo of children from eastern points were there and the Wrigley man began passing treats to the children as soon as they found places on the coaches.

17 Busses Needed

The Belleville delegation stayed at the King Edward Hotel, while half of the "500" were at the Royal York. The reception began early on the morning after breakfast in the beautiful dining rooms of the hotels, when the children were divided into groups of twelve with a leader, a member of the Wrigley firm, in charge, a lady for the girls and a man for the boys. Seventeen busses were needed to transport the visitors and the visits during the trip included sightseeing about Toronto, a visit to the Parliament Buildings where Premier Henry met them, to the City Hall where a civic welcome was extended by Mayor Stewart. Greetings from the Wrigley Company had been delivered by Allan Ross, President, and at the Canadian Exhibition Col. F. J. Deacon, Vice-President of the Exhibition, welcomed the guests. Howard Meaney was in charge of arrangements. So the children feel that they have met all the really important people in Toronto, since Martin Nelson, the wrist watch man also met and had breakfast with them.

They were taken through the buildings at the "Ex" visited the midway, attended the night performance, inspected the Wrigley plant and the Palais Soires and in between had wonderful meals at exclusive places. For their final dinner party they were entertained at the Royal York by an orchestra and magicians.

Walter Gets Lost

Walter Kokesh, who discussed the trip at length, said that the visitors were looked after in great style all the time, but that two boys were lost for a few minutes at the Fair. "I'll be grinned," was one of them". But one could hardly imagine anything daunting this self possessed lad and getting lost was just another bit of fun at the "Ex". The midway was Walter's greatest interest in the whole trip.

Diminutive Bessie Kilbag had returned to daily routine immediately after her trip for the reporter's questions interrupted her music practice. Bessie was very much thrilled with the visit and was especially enthusiastic over the night performance at the "Ex". Wing shows and the ride on the busses were wonderful. "The busses were packed with boys and girls and as many as could had their heads out the window so it was hard to get a picture," she said. "What did you like best about the trip" she was asked, and the answer was prompt. "The Midway."

Pictures Taken

Margaret Hodges, Sinclair St., said she had a lovely and busy time and that what impressed her most would be impossible. It was all new to her and fine. On the trips about the city the bus drivers pointed out places of interest and were most entertaining to the children. She had moving pictures taken of us" said Margaret "and were on all the rides, in the Midway". "At the King Edward Hotel they treated us just as good as grown-ups and were all kind to us." "Our group of 12 girls in the Royal York with the lady who had charge of us told us of the various exhibits we saw." "It was a dandy and wonderful trip from the time we left home till we returned to Belleville," said Margaret.

Bill Has Big Time

"I had a time I ever had", was the summing of Willie Doyle, Albert Street, of his two-day trip to Toronto. Will said it would be pretty hard to say just what was the best thing he saw, it was all so fine. Nothing that the boy and girl visitors enjoyed was left out. They were those who were their guides were kindness itself and showed them everything.

As a lasting gift the Wrigley Company presented each child with a big box which proved to contain generous box of gum, chocolate bars, tea coffee and various other packages of goodies. Memories of their fine visit to Toronto will long be a source of delight to the four lucky Belleville children.

MAYOR TALKS OF HARBORAGE

Says Zwick's Island Plan Does Not Overlook Other Work

Mayor Geo. O. Tice today made it plain that while the Zwick's Island development was being strongly advocated by him, solely as a means toward putting the unemployed men of the city to work other necessary work in the city, was also being given due consideration.

"We must not forget," he stated, "that the city has other needs, such as an ocean-going dock and the Harbor Commission, of which I am a member is preparing no effort in that direction to push this scheme ahead. During the past several months we have been working on the harbor development project, and I am safe in saying that within the near future some developments may be expected."

"The work on Zwick's Island at present appears to afford the most labor for the unemployed without adding the tax payers of the city with increased debt for material costs, which might be necessary on any other scheme, and that is why it was advocated by me. However, that job will not occupy our whole attention. Where we can see a return for the money expended we assure you may be sure that we will give it every consideration," he promised.

Madame Hale Miller at Kiwanis Fashion Show Tonight

Tonight's the big night at the Armouries, when the 1933 Edition of the Kiwanis Carnival style show is under way and no effort has been spared by the Carnival Committee to make this the banner event of their career, and the programme announced on another page of this issue will bear out the prediction. This is to be a year of variety, great variety as the Style Show will be staged for Two Nights only with Madame Hale Miller in complete charge of these arrangements. Madame Miller comes direct from the Toronto Exhibition where she staged the Fashion Show that created a most favorable impression and brings with her a complete line of ladies' lingerie as shown at the exhibition and these will be modeled in conjunction with the Style Show. To take full advantage of this Two Night Fashion Show it will be necessary to attend both Monday and Tuesday nights, to start Monday for two day style feast. In connection with the Style Show Madame Miller is bringing the Jean Hemsworth and partner dancing act direct from the Fashion Parade in Toronto, Jean was at the Karnival about five years ago and created a very favorable impression in her juvenile act at that time and she should be a welcome addition to the 1933 show.

Madame Hale Miller is well known as the best staging stylist in Canada at least and her advice and comments on her styles is always illuminative and entertaining.

A beautiful new stage setting has been arranged for tonight's show, and nine Belleville girls will act as mannequins. Madame Miller is quite imperative that the fact be made well known that this show will be Bigger, Better and different than any other Fashion Show ever staged in Belleville inasmuch as it will have the added features of high class entertainment interspersed throughout the show.

All told it should be a great night for everybody.

Robert Coulson Hale at 81 Years

Mr. Robert Coulson, one time resident of Bert Coulson, now finishing his declining days with his son, Claire, of Fillmore, Sask., recently celebrated his 81st birthday. Mr. Coulson has spent a year in fairly good health, although of course it has become increasingly difficult for him to go around among his neighbours and friends. But on the whole he is surprising good shape for a man of his years. He has the kindliest memories of his friends down East and his days are brightened by the enjoyment of such memories.

ENJOY FIRST ANNUAL OUTING

St. Michael's Angels' Sodality Are Entertained At Picnic Ground

At St. Michael's picnic ground, the first annual outing of the Sodality of the Holy Angels of St. Michael's parish, was a very jolly one on Saturday afternoon. This Sodality was organized just before the closing of school and is composed of one hundred little girls between the ages of ten and fifteen.

The slides and swings with which the picnic ground is equipped, occupied the attention of the girls until the interesting sports program began. The results of the various races were:

Running races, 10 to 11—Bernice Nolan, Cornelia Hollins, Lillian Pointer.

13 to 15—Helen O'Brien, Muriel Channon, Jessie Tracy.

14 to 15—Dorothy Rich, Dorothy Morgan, Laura Bedard.

Three-Legged Race, 10 to 11—Maureen Cannon and Florence Doran, Jean Graham and Eileen Sheridan, Jessie Tracy and Lillian Bedard.

13 to 13—Mary McNab and Ruth Kelly, Viola Rich and Gertrude McNab, Thelma Amo and Doneleen Brenner.

14 to 15—Patricia Meagher and Mary Trusiach, Catherine Callaghan and Clara Lee, Jean Moher and Tony Forster.

Wheelbarrow Race — Theresa Meona and Jean Ross, Agnes Hiland and Mary Trusiach, Doneleen Brenner and Jean Graham.

Jumping Race—Jessie Treacy, Viola Rich and Mary Cullinan.

Refreshments of sandwiches, ice cream, fruit and soft drinks were served in the pavilion after the very enjoyable afternoon.

WORK FOR MEN IS EXTOLLED

Rev. G. G. Wright Stresses Supremacy of Man

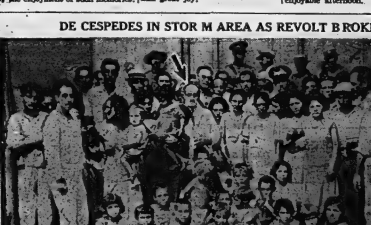
Man is more important than things, said the Rev. G. G. Wright of Christ Church on Sunday morning, noting with particular pleasure that in Belleville there was an evidence of this in the attention paid to the problem of finding work for those who need relief, remarking that direct relief or dole was not calculated to inspire its recipients or put them to the best and that the men and their families realized this. Work for pay was to be preferred for it brought out the stamina in them.

The rector of Christ Church was preaching on the subject of the supremacy of man over things and Christ's insistence upon the value of the individual human soul.

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. JOHN PITMAN

The funeral of the late Mrs. Emarcy Pitman was held Sunday afternoon from the residence of her son, Blake Pitman in the 13th concession of Thurlow to the Carmel United Church, where scores of friends and neighbors met to pay their last tribute of respect to the departed lady. Rev. Mr. Hunter, Rev. W. R. Merrick of Carmilton, conducted the service there, and at the close of interment in the church cemetery.



The bearers were Messrs W. Simmons, W. Myers, S. Shaw, H. Howes, F. Sullivan and F. Howes.

DE CESPEDES IN STOR M AREA AS REVOLT B ROKE

This photo, showing former President Manuel de Cespedes of Cuba with a group of children made homeless by the recent hurricane on the island republic, was snapped on the very day that he was deposed in the bloodless revolution staged by service men and radicals after the regime had been in power only twenty-two days. De Cespedes had been visiting the regions left devastated by the storm when the revolution occurred and it was several hours before he learned of the situation.

AS FLOODS TOOK TOLL IN TEXAS AT ST ORM

These scenes show the rising flood waters which inundated several Texas towns and cities in the wake of the fierce hurricane which swept the gulf states after striking Cuba. A hotel at Corpus Christi, Texas, partly submerged by the flood, is pictured at the top. At the bottom is a view of North Beach, a pleasure resort at Corpus Christi, showing the high water around the pavilion and tourists' cabins in the background. Property damage amounted to thousands of dollars.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

FIRST NIGHT IN FILMLAND

Fifty Films Shown at Capitol in Drama and in Nature Study

Two films which cannot fail to please the million opened at the Capitol Theatre on Saturday, one a most attractive story of deep sea fishing, probably the best that local film fans have ever seen, and the other the story of a youth who leaved the "pen," maker good on a tabloid sheet and then lands on a reputable newspaper staff. Incidentally winning a wife at the same time, the daughter of the police sergeant who saw him enter and leave the house of correction.

Take "The Picture Snatcher" first that is the one in which Cagney figures with a seventeen-year-old actress, Patricia Ellis, who has been seen in an Arliss production. The doings of the sordid tabloid sheet which demands of its staff that it secure pictures of an armed fireman whose mind gave way when his wife was burned to death and that it play up the electrocution of a woman by sneaking a camera into the electric chamber and the scenes about the tabloid office with members of the staff resting on the ground of decency are well done.

Cagney, in his loyalty to his employers does the "dirty" work, but the turn comes for even he sees the brutality of it and he and his old chum on the tabloid plan to get pictures of a man who had killed two policemen. The sequence of scenes here is very melodramatic, and it leads to the love episode which closes the story.

"Devil's Playground" is the nature study on film. Young George Vanderbilt emulates the sea heroes and figures in the most daring of captures of monsters of the deep even including the barracuda, the shark and a whale from a small boat along with a devil fish and other strange creatures.

Hazards in such fishing are great and Young Vanderbilt proves his skill to anyone. This is an authentic record worth the attention of every person.

AT THE BELLE

Ever so often a motion picture producer comes through with a new theme in cinema entertainment that at once sets a new "style" for other producers to follow. In this respect Warner Bros. have shown the way with such memorable films as "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang," "Silver Dollar," and the more recent successes which once again changed the style, namely, "42nd Street" and "Gold Diggers of 1933."

It is quite evident that Warner Bros. also to keep up this precedent. With their new production "Captured", coming to the Belle tomorrow and Wednesday, matinee daily. These modern pioneers of motion picture themes have given the screen another unusual production which contains all the elements of stark drama and pulsating action, topped only by a love story that springs from the lives of its tragedied characters right to the heart.

"Captured" is a big picture in every sense of the word, big from a viewpoint of being entirely different from anything you have seen, big because of its superb cast of four great stars, Leslie Howard, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paul Lukas and lovely Margaret Lindsay.

It is indeed absorbing entertainment—screen fare that will linger with you for a long, long time — a picture you'll live over and over again in your mind.

When you go to see "Captured" you may go expecting to see the usual. It is a adaptation from the story by Sir Phillip Gibbs, Britain's great war correspondent and author.

The thrilling climax to the picture should not be overlooked. Here is a fine example of expert directorship, however, lest we spoil your enjoyment, we will refrain from describing the action. Roy Del Ruth, the director has indeed excelled himself in the masterly handling of the big scenes as well as the numerous other intricate parts of "Captured!"

Excellent Shorts

The enjoyment of "Captured" is enhanced by the excellent varied array of junior features selected to precede the feature offering. Including "Wild People," a gorgeous all-color musical revue with a notable array of stars garnered from the stage, Radio and Night Club marts, the Toronto Flying Club.

These fliers held the 35,000 who attended almost breathless with their daring manoeuvres in the air.

Flight Lieut. Riddell, whose fame as a stunt flier is known throughout the continent had the flying fans gasping with his loops, rolls, dives and inverted flying in his solo act before the grandstand.

Flying Officers Wray and Hurley gave a masterly exhibition with their loops, rolling, tail spins and power dives in perfect formation.

Yesterday soon after the roar of the motors was heard over this town and the four ships loomed in sight, flying in close formation. After circling the downtown section they left for the air base where Flying Officer Hurley had the misfortune of turning his Siskin over in making the landing.

There was a gusty wind blowing plane down a gust lifted it a few feet in the air letting it down heavily causing the undercarriage to buckle with the result the plane went slowly over on its nose and came to rest on its back.

Attendants rushed on the field and found Hurley uninjured with only slight damage to the machine.

Three mechanics flew with the Siskins in a Fairchild cabin plane, with Flight Sgt. Elliott at the controls.

Farewell Party

Members of the Holy Name Society and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Chase gathered at the home of Mrs. Chase's mother, Mrs. M. O'Connor on Friday for a farewell party as Mr. and Mrs. Chase are taking up their residence in Kingston where Mr. Chase has been transferred by the Bank of Montreal.

Mr. I. A. McGaughey, president of the society, read an address and presented the couple with a lamp. Mr. Chase was a valued member of the H.N.S. and was second vice-president.

In reply Mr. Chase assured the friends assembling that it was with regret that he and Mrs. Chase were leaving Trenton, the birthplace of both.

Cards and music, climaxed with a dainty lunch made the evening most enjoyable.

POLICE AND GUNS

Police have been advised by the Ottawa chief of police not to use their guns except as an extreme measure. This attitude will be generally accepted.

Fortunately Belleville police have a fine record as to the use of guns. They do not have to discharge their firearms.

It has also been pointed out that English constables bring in their prisoners without the aid of weapons, and that Canadians ought to do likewise. Almost all of them do but there is the occasional case where a firearm may be necessary. Only the other night in a Quebec railway yard a railway constable lost his life while about to make an arrest. If the policeman is not armed, how is he going to face an armed criminal, for it must be admitted that there are a considerable number of persons carrying guns? Only the other day a chance pedestrian picked up on the road by a motorist was taken out of the automobile by police because he was armed. The driver of the automobile did not know it and was surprised at the incident.

A SOCIAL INSTITUTION

That season of the year is at hand where the great rural festival known as the chicken supper becomes one of the leading places in the thought of mankind in the cities as well as in the country. No autumn would be autumn without the slaughter of multitudes of young fowl to help in the harvest-tide feasting as well as in assisting in the maintenance of the church organizations for fowl suppers are peculiarly part and parcel of this means of raising funds.

Chicken suppers also attract the people to ponder over the blessings of the harvest when results of the season's work is done and nature is going to rest for the next few months to prepare for another spring-time and seeding.

These chicken are social gatherings and should not be allowed to fall away, even though they entail an immense amount of labor by the women and the men of the congregations.

What would an autumn be like without a supper for their own way the happy feasts in the castles of Merrie England as winter nights drew on in the long ago? Today the chicken supper is not an accompaniment to carousing for a religious setting generally is found associated with the fowl meal.

But we wonder how much real profit there is in one of these feasts. If you count the labor and effort there is none at all, but these are days and times when one must not be sticklish about a little extra work for work is needed and will be needed to pull civilization and civilized towns and communities out of the slough of despond of the brand of 1929-1933. But if one counts the pies, the cakes, the pickles, the scores of other factors which help to make up a full board for a supper on fowl, it would seem that the profit goes to the consumer, the man or the woman or child, who paying a small amount of money, has the privilege of eating all and sundry.

But the very holding of a supper, the appearance of the crowds about the tables, happy to eat and be fed, is in itself a satisfaction probably worth while. In fact today the world has gone too far away from the old past of doing things for the men on sociability. There should be more of the spontaneous happiness and overflow of spirits which such institutions as fowl suppers tend to create and keep alive.

So long live the chicken supper!

EVEN ROME NOISY

Oshawa Times points out that Mussolini is going to put a limit on the noise of the motor traffic which rumbles and rattles and roars through the streets of Rome. No one will object except the Italian motorist who drives in Rome and then he will not say much.

It would seem that in Canada a dictator would be needed to check the hideous sounds which rise from the streets of our modern cities.

Even if there were a dictator it is a question how the noises could be lessened. He might have to go about the inventing of devices himself for that purpose for no one else seems to have a single simple idea about noise reducing which is the destruction of modern nerves.

By struggling with misfortunes, we are sure to receive some wounds in the conflict; but a sure method to come off victorious is by running away.—Goldsmith.

Mankind in the gross is a gaping monster, that loves to be deceived, and has seldom been disappointed—Mackenzie.

BODY AND SOUL

The house is old, the house is frail,
Its stricken timbers quake and quail
At every gust and every gale,
At every breeze of life.
Like a defenseless city, laid
Open to pillage, sore afraid,
In all its parts aghast, dismayed,
It shrinks from thought of strife.

The house is old; but, ah, I see
The beauty that once used to be Within its shining walls for me
In days when it was new!
And now as then, I find it fair
Because the tenant dwelling there,
Untouched by weariness or care,
Is plain before my view.

The house is old; some never guess
The undiminished loveliness,
Enduring through all change, all stress,
Aglow within that place;
But I can see its gleam, and so
I hold it dear as long ago,
And more as then, I find it fair
Which through the years I trace!
—Aline Michaelis.

ONE CITY THAT HAS PAID ITS DEBTS and kept its tax rate down, despite unfavorable industrial conditions during the past few years, is Atchison, Kansas, population 15,000, which has kept on a cash basis throughout, and in the past twelve years has cut its bonded debt seventy per cent. and its tax rate thirty-five per cent. The reason, according to Ed. W. Howe, founder of the Atchison Daily Globe, writing in the Rotarian Magazine, is simply a determination by Atchison business men that their city be run like a business. This has led to the commission form of government with three business men as commissioners. They appoint a city manager as they would hire any general manager for their own businesses. The new plan was successful from the start; the commissioners inherited an old bonded indebtedness of $1,260,000, and paid it all off except $180,000.

WITH THE RETURN OF BEER, 3.2, New York City witnessed the inauguration of sidewalk cafes, a la Paris. Joykillers are always abroad —If the Yanks want to drink that innocuous brew why not drink it in the open. Parisians parade their virtues and vices with the result that the former shine brighter and the latter lack lustre from being toned down to suit the public gaze.

THE WOODEN RAILWAY COACH, thought a ghastly relic of the past, has again made a ten-strike in the casualty columns. In a recent railway accident in the United States in which fourteen persons were killed and over thirty injured, the bulk of the casualties occurred in a wooden coach sandwitched in between two steel coaches. When the crash came the steel coaches completely telescoped the wooden coach and the passengers therein met death quick and horrible. Old time coaches with modern speed and equipment just do not belong.

HOW "WHOOPEE" STARTED

Started in Montreal and caught up by the American press, there flourishes a lively discussion of "whoopee," the word.

What is slang? Not at all, the papers declare, pointing out that the good old word used, more than three centuries ago by Massinger and Dekker in their play "The Virgin Martyr," which contains the line, "Nay, lady, for my part, I'll cry whoopee."

Well, so it was. The very line is quoted in The Standard Dictionary. But no one in those ancient days ever spoke of "making whoopee," and the same authority defines it as originally "a cry of exultation or urging"—a little like our modern "wow" or "atta-boy," we assume, but, nevertheless, quite conventional. Reading on, however, we find it recognized as slang in its second meaning, when you speak of "making whoopee" you can no longer claim to be keeping within the bounds of seventeenth-century English.

Lexicographers are still wondering how the word got to America, but it seems clear that cowboys were the first to use it here, and that circus people took it up. But even then it remained for New York to transform "whoopee" into a noun and add it to our vocabulary of alcoholic slang.

4 FATALITIES OVER WEEKEND

Two Victims of Motor Car, One Drowning, One Gassing

Toronto, Sept. 11 (CP)—Two men and two women met sudden deaths in Ontario over the week end. Automobile accidents were responsible for two of the deaths while gas poisoning and a drowning caused the others.

Struck from behind by an automobile, David Smith, 24 year old Collingwood resident, was killed almost instantly near Wasaga Beach late Saturday. The car was driven by C. McEacher, Brantford bank accountant, who was arrested on a charge of reckless driving. Swain alone at the time, was on his way to meet his 16 year old son, employed at a Wasaga Beach riding academy.

The second motorcar fatality occurred at Toronto Saturday when Mrs. Kathleen Martha Finch, 60 was hit by a motor truck, driven by Albert Frazier, Oviedo, Ont. The driver was not held by police.

Miss Elsie Green died in a London hospital Saturday from gas fumes inhaled accidentally at her home on the Ridgeway. A gas valve was responsible for the leakage.

Lone drowning reported over the week end occurred at Ottawa where

STUDY EMPIRE RELATIONSHIP

Congress Opens Today As Result of Four Years' Effort

Toronto, Sept. 11 (CP)—The first British Commonwealth relations conference was opened here today by Sir Robert Borden, former Canadian Prime Minister, who welcomed delegates from the United Kingdom and every dominion in the Empire on behalf of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs of which he is Honorary President.

The conference, sitting until September 21, will debate in advance a three-fold problem—the system of communication, consultation and action between members of the Commonwealth—considering its adequacy under the existing constitution of the Empire and specific suggestions for its improvement.

While business of the conference is unofficial it is considered likely some of its conclusions will be made known to representatives in the various government of the Commonwealth for consideration and possible action.

The meeting, sitting at Hart House, University of Toronto, was called at the invitation of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs after four years of effort in formulation of an idea put forward at the Kyoto, Japan, conference of the Institute of Pacific relations.

Study groups of the Canadian Institute and the Royal Institute of International Affairs in the United Kingdom worked for a year preparing reports on numerous subjects that will be made the basis of debate during the next week and a half.

OLD CAPTAIN PASSES AWAY

John McCullough of Napanee Owned Katie Eccles

Napanee, Sept. 11.—A mariner for over forty years, and a builder of motor boats and smaller craft, Captain John McCullough passed away at his residence Sunday, after a long illness. His condition, however, did not assume a serious aspect until a few days ago. During the past few weeks there has been considerable controversy over the proposed destruction of the Lyman Eccles, which ship is now at Simnyside, Toronto, and letters have appeared in the press against the destruction of this boat, which is the last of the old sailing vessels which piled the Great Lakes and the Bay of Quinte.

Captain McCullough owned the Lyman Davis, which he operated for several years, and after disposing of her retired from marine work.

During his early years he was an employee on the sailing vessel the Retina, which sank in a storm off the Lake Ontario.

Among other boats owned from time to time by Captain McCullough were the Lyman Davis, Katie Eccles, Linda Wetener, John D. Newland and the William Jamieson.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, who before her marriage was Miss Hannah Hearns.

FOURTH CUBAN GOV'T RULING

Former Professor Chosen As Head But Unrest Continues

(By Edmund A. Chester)

Havana, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Cuba's fourth government in a month rode in the saddle today, with a 46-year-old former professor at the helm and the going was none too easy.

No sooner had Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin, chosen President by a Junta which assumed control only last Monday, pledged himself to "fulfil entirely the revolutionary programme" than 900 former army officers demanded he step aside in favor of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, whose brief regime began a month ago.

In Santiago there were disquieting reports that heavily armed bands roamed the countryside ready for revolution in behalf of former President Mario G. Menocal, that unrest led merchants to close their stores, and that army officers refused to return to their duties.

At American-owned Manganese Mines near Santiago one man was killed in a brush between strikers and miners.

Two men, one an army sergeant, were arrested for conspiracy in Marianao, near here. In Oriente Province rebels were reported in the field. They were said to be Menocal supporters.

POLISH ARMY BALLOONISTS ARE ALL SAFE

Men Who Lived on Dozen Oranges May Be Winners

SIX DAYS LOST

Have Long and Wearing Trek Through Quebec Forest

Rivere A Pierre, Que., Sept. 11—Refreshed after two sound night's sleep and a number of hearty meals Captain Franciszek Hynek and Lieut. Ignacy Zidgniew Brynzak, Polish balloonists who landed 100 miles north of here in the wilds of the Laurentian Mountains were today eager for news of the still unreported Ward Van Orman, rival in the James Gordon Bennett balloon race.

The two Polish officers suffered acutely from hunger and cold in their 80-mile tramp through the forest, mountain wilderness to the railway. With only 12 oranges between them for six days of arduous travel they were haggard and weak when they reached here but sleep and food worked wonders and today they are fit again.

The balloon settled down in the forest last Monday and Saturday night they reached the line of the Canadian National Railways and were picked up by section men at the log station of Lemieux, 10 miles north of Portneuf County Village.

A representative of the Polish consulate at Montreal met the adventurers here and conferred with them on plans for getting their balloon out of the wilds. They expect to go to Quebec today.

Having covered a distance of more than 800 miles the Polish balloonists are accorded an unofficial lead in the race. Until the whereabouts of the missing United States balloon, piloted by Van Orman is ascertained, however, they cannot be proclaimed the winners.

Their Story

Riviere A Pierre, Que., Sept. 11 — Two weary, bearded, unkempt Polish aviators arrived at the railway village on a railway hand-car and rested up last night after six days of hunger, cold and hardship in the wilds of Northern Quebec. Their arrival put an end to fears for the safety of one of the two missing balloons which soared aloft at Chicago a week ago Saturday in the James Gordon Bennett international balloon race.

Unless beaten out by Ward van Orman in a United States balloon, the Poles, Captain Franciszek Hynek and Lieutenant Zidgniew Brzynski, look like the winners of the race. They travelled a distance of approximately 810 miles from the starting point. Van Orman is still missing and is believed to have come down somewhere in Northern Ontario.

Last night an official of the Polish Consulate at Montreal arrived here and will accompany the fliers to Quebec today. After Polish arrangements will be made to make a search for the balloon and bring it out. As the fliers were attended with colored squares, came down some 100 miles south of here in the dense forests which cover the rugged Laurentian Mountains, the balloonists are considered the only way to find it is make a search by air.

Hynek and Brzynski drifted down into the woods at 10.46 a.m. Saturday last month, only a few hours after they had been sighted sailing over Lake Nonbin by two Quebec fishermen, who did not report the incident until they reached Quebec Friday night.

During the six days they were in the wild the fliers had only the wherewithal to eat but twelve oranges. The nights were bitterly cold, and they did their best to keep themselves warm as they slept in the open by the blazing fires which they built and turns in tending.

At the same time, guided only by their compass, they pushed their way southward, knowing that in that direction lay civilization, railway lines and the St. Lawrence River.

It was tough going through the dense bush. At times they were able to follow the paths beaten by moose and to walk easily along the shore line of some mountain lake. But much of the ninety-mile journey to the little log station of Lemieux, on the Canadian National Railways, was through wooded mountains which succeeded one another in tiresome regularity and hewing out a passage through it tracked forests.

They struck the railway at Lemieux, twelve miles north of here, they picked up a lift here from railway sectionmen and, despite their hardships the men were in good physical condition and, after a short, a bath, a good meal and a long night's rest, appeared none the worse for their six days' tramp on scanty rations.

They were 30 hours in the air, they said, and from their inspirements they calculated they had travelled 812 miles.

Sudbury, Ont., Sept. 11—Some where in Northern Ontario is the Goodyear XI, Ward van Orman's entry in the international Gordon Bennett balloon race from Chicago, but the northland is very hazy about it.

Except that the big bag was still in the air Monday, twenty-four hours after three fishermen claimed it had "disappeared" before their eyes over Meteor Lake, northwest of here, whereabouts of the balloon was uncertain.

Lionel Gaughier, Butler, Ont., saw the balloon near Rusel, northwest again of Meteor Lake.

It was thought possible the ship had continued on its straight northeast course and crossed the border into Quebec, possibly in the Rouyn district.

RATIFICATION OF CONCORDAT

Pope Reported Not Quite Satisfied With German Over Jews

Vatican City, Sept. 11 (AP)—Ratifications of a concordat between Germany and the Holy See were exchanged yesterday by Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State, and Dr. Eugene von Klee, counsellor in the German Embassy at Vatican City, it was announced today.

Following a cabinet meeting in Berlin Saturday, the final text of the pact was sent to Rome by aeroplane and arrived yesterday morning. Herr Klee hurried landing in Northern Italy.

After receiving it, Dr. Von Klee communicated with the Vatican and later came to the Vatican with First Secretary on Saurma of the Germany embassy. Ratifications were subsequently exchanged.

The concordat was signed a month and a half ago. Last week reports were published in Canada that the failure to ratify was likely, but Vatican prelates said concordats are in no frequently ratified before several months had passed.

The Pope was reported in Vatican circles as not altogether pleased with the situation in Germany, partly because of Chancellor Hitler's attitude towards Jews who have become Christians, but said there were no grounds for refusing to ratify the agreement.

The sudden ratifications, particularly on Sunday, came as a surprise to both the Vatican and the German Embassy.

Prelates were surprised at the short interval which has clapsed since the signing but believed that Cardinal Pacelli wanted to conclude the ratification before he left on a month's vacation in Switzerland for which he departed this morning.

The action ended rumors that fundamental difficulties had arisen between the Vatican and the Reich.

The instrument combines in substance the rights guaranteed to Catholics by accords with Prussia, Baden and Bavaria.

Crawford won by scores of 6-4, 6-3, 6-1.

FREE SPEECH BUT NO FORCE

Attorney - General Price Tells What British View Is

Newmarket, Sept. 11.—Deliberations of the first Liberal-Conservative Summer School ended here Saturday on the sharp, challenging, but roundly-acclaimed note of free speech, but no force.

"I believe," said Attorney-General William H. Price, voicing publicly a sentiment he has expressed for years, "that people should have the utmost freedom to express their views, on any subject. I favor free speech, any time, anywhere with just the one exception—the advocacy of force and violence. On general principle, I do not think that anyone should be interfered with until he breaks the law."

If, at any place throughout Ontario, freedom of speech was not exchanged yesterday by Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State, and Dr. Eugene von Klee, counsellor in the German Embassy at Vatican City, it was announced today.

Following a cabinet meeting in Berlin Saturday, the final text of the pact was sent to Rome by aeroplane and arrived yesterday morning. Herr Klee hurried landing in Northern Italy.

FAVORABLE TO ISLAND SCHEME

Mr. Chas. J. Symons, chairman, and members of the Board of Parks Commission have received the encouragement of Mayor Cowan regarding the Zwick's Island improvement scheme with considerable enthusiasm. "We are one hundred per cent for it," states Mr. Symons, when questioned. "It's an old proposition that has been hanging fire for some time, and I'm glad that at last some move has been made in that direction, as I believe the island fixed up. Every member of the Board is with the Mayor and the scheme, and we will assist the work in every way."

NIGHTSHIRTS ONLY GARB OF FLEEING BOYS

Eleven of 21 Youths Are Scantily Clad In Mimico Outbreak

VARIOUS BREAKS

Two Recaptured By Police, Pursuit Goes On

Toronto, Sept. 11.—Twenty-one youths and boys escaped Sunday from Victoria Industrial School at Mimico.

All police of Lake Shore municipalities, assisted by citizens, were combing the vicinity of Victoria Industrial School at Mimico at an early hour this morning in an effort to recapture 19 youths, 11 of whom were understood to have been in their nightshirts, who escaped from the institution at various periods during the day in a wholesale break.

A total of 21 youths escaped, starting at four o'clock yesterday morning until eight o'clock last night. Two were recaptured by C.N.R. police later in the evening.

Mimico and New Toronto police were confident that at least 11, of the 19 youths still at large, who were garbed only in thin night shirts would be forced to return to the school voluntarily because of the onset of cold weather.

Two of the youths escaped at 4 o'clock yesterday morning in what manner was not revealed by officials or the institution. Eight more thought to have been clothed in their usual clothing made good their departure at eight o'clock last evening.

While officials and police were searching for the first ten who escaped, 11 of the number were, it is only in their night shirts, broke a window and found freedom. Two of the nurses are later captured.

Spurred on by reports that a reward of $5 is paid by the institution for every youth recaptured by a private citizen, a number of citizens are reported to have engaged in the search. The hunt is being directed by Chief Percy Sanderson of Mimico and Chief Hedley Padgett of New Toronto.

Escapes from the school are periodic but the number who get away is nearly always recaptured sooner than those who vanished yesterday. In the majority of cases the youths are recaptured or return voluntarily when hunger and the need for warmer clothing moves them.

TESTIFY CAMP HERE OF BEST

Belleville Tourist Park Extolled By Visitors Who Stay

Verbal and written comment from the scores of tourists who have availed themselves of its privileges during the present summer indicate that the city tourist camp stands up well in the list when compared with other leading camps of the province.

Clean, well-kept and inviting the local camp has been an attractive spot for Burner-weary visitors, and has won considerable patronage. Visitors have also been quick to comment on the excellent facilities, the cleanliness of the camp and the courtesy of attendants.

Their comments have been entered in the visitors' registries of the visitors. The unusual written comment on the "Remarks side of the visitors book, however, has been "Magnificent" "the best camp we have stopped at". A few notations state that "the camp couldn't be better." The usual comment of "Every courtesy extended" is also well splashed through the book.

Entries show that nearly every State in the union south of the border has been represented at the local camp this year, while practically every province in this country has had one or more representatives. One particularly noted is that this year has produced a record crop of lost diamond drivers.

So far the attendance has been holding up well. During the past few weeks a lull in arrivals has been noted, but this is the usual annual unaccountable experience. Within the next few days, however, there is again assume heavier proportions. It is expected that before the end of the season the number who have registered will be somewhat behind the registration for the same period last year.

BOUQUET MATINEE BREAKS ALL RECORD

Eleven hundred happy children, who bore bouquets of flowers as their price of admission to the morning performance, were the outstanding guests at the Belle Theatre Saturday morning. This is the largest number of children ever to attend the annual Flower Bouquet Matinee. One large truck was necessary to transport the huge amount of flowers received by the management to the hospital for the benefit of the Aged, County House of Refuge and various other places where the cut blooms were given.

EINSTEIN NOW IN ENGLAND IS PROTECTED

May Seek Shelter In England From Nazis

POLICE GUARD

Host's Gamekeeper May Fire Upon Intruders On Estate

Cromer, Norfolk, England, Sept. 11 (AP)—Anybody attempting to molest Albert Einstein in his humble refuge on the Norfolk coast may get bullets from guns of his host's game keepers.

And if Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson himself is around, any intruder may have to face the revolver which the member of Parliament reputedly is carrying while the celebrated mathematician is under his protection.

Professor Einstein arrived from London yesterday, fleeing reported Nazi threats against his life, and set about at once in his quiet, tree-surrounded retreat to work on a new mathematical theory— the nature of which was not disclosed.

Seemingly content, Dr. Einstein said: "All I want is peace. Where could I find a more peaceful retreat than here in England?"

He said he was not responsible for the "brown book" which incensed Hitlerite wrath and which, Nazis alleged, was a compilation of victims of persecution.

Special Police Ready

It was understood today that no permanent police guard has been provided at the Locker-Lampson estate, but local police are aware of the position and can be summoned instantly if necessary to aid private guards which the member of Parliament employs to insure the safety of his famous guest.

Einstein's retreat has not been disclosed to the public although its exact location is known to a few intimates who describe is as a "hut" rather than a cottage.

London, Sept. 11—Albert Einstein who made an announced appearance in this country late Sunday night from Belgium, following a report that a secret Nazi organization had put a price upon his head, today was resting "somewhere in England."

Friends refused to reveal where the professor went. He was met at the station by Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson, and from there he went to a secret destination.

Locker-Lampson, who is a member of Parliament, came from his summer home at Cromer to meet the scientist. Last April it was announced Dr. Einstein accepted an offer to use Commander Lockers-Lampson's Westminster house (or part or the year.)

There was some confusion soon after the liners' arrival when he discovered the loss of a packet of books. An anxious search was made for it and inquiries were sent out along the route traversed.

No clue was found and it was thought possible the volumes had been picked up by someone at Dover, where Dr. Einstein entered England, and might be locked up in an office there over the week-end.

INSANE MAN RECAPTURED

Had Threatened To Take Lives of Wife and Seven Children

Brantford, Ont., Sept. 11 (CP)—An exciting hunt ended here in Tutela Heights Hospital for the insane, who caused uneasiness for more than a week in the Port Rowan district, was taken into custody, Monday afternoon. Residents said the man went to his former home at Tutela Heights Sunday and threatened to take the lives of his children. He was armed with nearby woods, armed with an axe.

ENTHUSIASM GROWS FOR STEEL CODE

CLEVELAND, Sept. 11.—(AP)—A growing enthusiasm for the United States Steel code under the National Recovery Act was noted today by the Magazine Steel in its weekly review of conditions in the industry.

"Some portions of the industry," the review said, "remain confident of good fall business; others—and they include many of the steelmakers of the four leading outlets . . . . But there is growing enthusiasm for the steel code."

BIG STICK IN COAL ARENA

Soft Coal Industry Troubles of N. R. A. At Height

(By Sam Robertson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Sept. 11 (AP)—The bituminous coal industry troubles of NRA were at a new high today.

Throughout a lengthy submission General Hugh Johnson, chief of the National Recovery Administration, received from coal operators Saturday, the working charter he suggested for the industry was roundly criticized. "Insensitive" and "visionary" were words used in condemning the charter.

But despite this, and the fact the operators hinted at a court fight, the General smiled wearily through his multiple problems and said confidently he saw ability to get a proper agreed code has not been shaken.

So strongly worded were the submissions by the Northern Coal Consumers Association and the Smokeless and Appalchian Coal Association, representing 70 per cent of the United States soft coal fields, that "big stick" imposition of the code appeared probable.

The operators' declaration that the proposed regulations infringed the constitutional rights of the employers gave birth to the belief that the coal charter and possibly the entire National Recovery Act would be hauled into the courts.

DROWNS TRYING TO SAVE 6 LIVES

Contrecoeur, Que., Sept. 11—When he failed in his heroic effort to save six companions from drowning in the St. Lawrence ship canal here, Normand Phillis, 17, and three companions lost their lives while three others were rescued. Caught in the rowboat, overturned by the swell of a passing steamer on the ship canal, they capsized.

According to the story as told by the survivors, the seven men were participating at a camp here and decided Saturday night to cross the river to Lanoraie.

While returning in a single rowboat at about 9 o'clock, Normand Phillis, middle of the channel just as the swell of a passing steamer was felt by the occupants. Realizing the craft to be heavily loaded and realizing the strength of the swell, Phillis volunteered to lighten the boat and he plunged into the swift current.

The other victims were unable to cling to the boat when it capsized and were carried away by the current.

CHEESEMAKERS TO MEET AT NAPANEE

The dates of the sixth annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, to be held in Napanee this year, have been changed from November 29th and 30th, to December 5th and 6th. The former dates clashed with the annual pre-Christmas poultry sale and sustained brushes and strains. The horse he was driving remained in the race and came in third place.

LIBRARY CORNER

In contrast to the picture Pearl Buck gave of the peasantry of China in her book "The Good Earth", a Nora Waln's canvas of a family, the members of which have been cosmopolitans for centuries, and whose background has been one of dignity. Brought up in a Quaker household of Philadelphia, which for generations traded with a Chinese family of high rank, Miss Waln developed a keen interest in China and Chinese affairs. As a result of the friendly relations between the two so different families, the author was a guest in the House of Lin for two years, living as a member of the family. She married an English man in the Chinese government and lived on in China seeing the life from a very different angle. "The House of Exile" is a convincing record of people and events in the China of today. The beauty of life lived by an ancient people built upon centuries of tradition—its culture, its discipline, its philosophy is interpreted by Nora Waln with a vivid understanding. The sharply defined difference between western and eastern civilization is best explained by the author in her paragraph: "Time in China has no immediacy as in America. Here, I find the swift passage of our earthly years accepted as naturally as the fall of flower and leaf. This philosophical acceptance of the individual life as just a part of the life of the race, which goes on as the life of the tree goes on, makes time limitless. A century past or a century in the future is not considered far off. In this volume we shall attempt to look over the wall into the life of a Chinese family and see the actual members of it in the homestead which they have occupied for thirty-six generations.

The Reference Department of the Library will be enriched this week by two volumes of art, both turned out by the publishers of the "Studio" magazine. The first is a collection of etchings by Francisco De Goya, principal painter to the court of Spain in the later part of the eighteenth century. Some of these etchings are satirical thrusts at the society of the time. The second consists of a number of horse studies in colour, and includes among many fine exhibits from the Royal Academy, one of Dame Laura Knight's famed circus scenes.

Charles Chapman, Roslin was united in marriage to Wesley Gladstone Reid, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Russel Reid, Coderich.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Munro B.A. D.D., pastor in charge.

The bride was attired in a travelling dress of brown with hat and accessories to match. The happy couple motored east to Belleville and other points to spend a few days before locating in their apartment at Carlton Park Hotel, Toronto.

Bridge Street W. M. Society

The first autumn meeting of the Bridge Street Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society was held in the church parlors on Friday Sept. 8th with a most encouraging attendance.

Mrs. Bishop, the president, presided and conducted the regular business of the session. She announced the Sectional meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial to take place at Mount Pleasant on Sept. 20th and requested that all supplies for the missionary box be brought in before the fifteenth of the month.

The program was provided by Mrs. Morgan and Miss Simmons's group, with Mrs. Morgan presiding.

The opening hymn was "Faith of Our Fathers" and following this Miss Yeoman's gave the Scripture lesson from the 45th Psalm and Mrs. Morgan led in prayer.

Mrs. Shortt read a paper—"A Call to Mission" prepared by Mrs. Davidson who could not be present on account of illness in the family. The word Mission is derived from a Latin word meaning sent. We are sent into this world to make a better place in which to live and by loving service help others. As men advanced in the scale of being, his conception of God enlarged but it took many centuries to develop the thought that God loved all his creatures. There was neither Jew nor Gentile; black or white; bond or free" in his purpose for humanity. We still have the race and social problems to face, and as followers of Jesus, we must see the divine image in every human being and endeavor to become brotherhood. The command of Jesus to preach the Gospel to every creature is as real and insistent today as it ever was. Dunstan, born at his height reaches out to the whole world. Jesus said "If I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me". This will become a fact, when men is lifted up in our lives.

At this point Mrs. Fred Sloniskin expanded the teaching of this by an admirable solo "Give and it shall be given to you".

A paper prepared and read by Miss Simmons dealt chiefly with the greatest missionary the world has known, Jesus Christ. In early youth he heard the Father's call to be a missionary. For all twenty years of age, he was in his Father's house learning from the doctors of the law that which would prepare him for his great task. In young manhood he was still endeavouring to learn and do the Father's will. For three years, he gave himself wholly to the task, of helping others in the Galilean ministry, with full and brought release to sin-sick souls. After life of unselfish ministering he came to the end of the road, and as a supreme test of love he died on the cross to redeem mankind and he challenges us to follow him.

In a gracious way Mrs. Morgan welcomed Dr. and Mrs. Semple and invited Dr. Semple to give a message.

Dr. Semple assured the Society that he was deeply interested in all phases of missionary endeavour that he had great confidence in a church that had such missionary in its spirit. Mrs. Morgan urged the ladies to remain for a social half-hour and Mrs. Bishop closed with prayer.

Weddings

LAZIER—BURNS

Oshawa, Sept. 11.—A charming autumn wedding was solemnized Saturday when Margaret Burns, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Burns, was united in marriage with Mr. Robert Bell Lazier, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lazier of Belleville. Rev. Canon C. L. Delworth of St. George's Anglican Church, conducted the ceremony at the family residence, 61 Alexandra street.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Wm. G. Burns of the city, the bride was attractively gowned in egg-shell satin with matching turban, and carried a bouquet of Rose Bill and Sweetheart roses. Her bridesmaid, Miss Joan Cameron of Woodstock, was becomingly dressed in deep blue transparent velvet with matching turban, while she carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. Mr. T. H. McDowell of Oshawa, supported the groom. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Mrs. J. A. McGibbon.

Following the ceremony Mrs. J. J. Burns, sister-in-law of the bride sang "Because". More than 80 guests attended the reception immediately following. Miss Grace Burns, sister of the bride, received. She was gowned in blue and white chiffon organdie with blue taffeta jacket and a corsage of Talisman roses. Later the couple left on a motor trip to Montreal and points east, the bride travelling in a navy blue ensemble with matching accessories. On returning from their wedding trip they will live in Toronto.

KEITH—CHAPMAN

A quiet wedding was solemnized at Jarvis Street United Church, Toronto, on Wednesday evening, at seven-thirty o'clock, August 31st, when Miss Edna Olivia, Chapman, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

Golds Firm In Sympathy With Higher Prices In New York. Base Metal Stocks Close With Small Gains—Liquor Stocks Strong, Walker's Gains $4.50 To Close $50.50, While Canadian Industrial Alcohol Rises $3.50—New York Prices Creep Upward.

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.— (AP)— Stocks moved upward today on rather dull but strong tone. Advances in the late dealings ranged from 1 to 3 points or so. Aircraft shares particularly buoyant while other firm groups included Motors, Rails, Utilities, National Distillers soared 7 points. Issues up 2 to around 5 included T. U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Chrysler, Case, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Public Service of New Jersey, American Commercial Alcohol, New York Central and finally Pa. Transactions approximated 1,650,000 shares

WINNIPEG WHEAT

Winnipeg, Sept. 11.—(CP)—Aside from a few buying orders in the May futures which were executed, trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, today was dead quiet and prices were off a trifle from the pegged levels.

Uncertainty from the previous close, October at mid-session was quoted at 39 1-8, December at 41 1-8 and May at 78 3-8 cents. Lacking any business, traders absented themselves from the floor for long intervals.

Some export business was worked but the quantity was small and it did not register on prices. Liverpool and Buenos Aires markets displayed weakness due to general sales in the Argentine. The Buenos Aires market near the close was 5-8 to 7-8d lower and Buenos Aires operated 1 3-8 cents lower.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept. 11.— (CP) Trading was boiling at close today on the Toronto Stock Exchange, heavy buying of gold shares and the morning's gains were all lost during the afternoon. The market feature was the sharp advance of distillery shares, the whole list touching the best prices of the month at the close.

Walker's common gained 4 1-2 closing at 50. Distillers Corporation 3 5-8 at 30 1-2, Industrial Alcohol 3 1-2 at 29 1-2 and Brewers and Distillers was up 20 cents at $2.65, in the late afternoon.

Interlaked leaders pulled ahead sharply when New York opened. Nickel closed 58 higher at $21.35, Smelters up 4 at 31, Bralorne gained 1-4 to 14, C.P.R. 1-8 to 16 1-2 and Port of Canada pulled up to 13. The turnover was heavy in Nickel and Smelters.

The market opened the new week with a sluggish tone but as the New York list continued to press slowly upward, volume picked up locally particularly in the Distillery group. In early afternoon, Walker's common had registered its best rise in 10 days. Other issues of the group were nearly as strong.

New York's creeping advance stimulated buying also in International Nickel which came through the Toronto tape in hundred share lots at a small net advance.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 11 (CP)—Mining stocks followed the New York Board to higher ground today in trading that was slow at the start. Just fair around noon and livery at the close. Gold issues, despite a lower quotation on bar metal in London, firmed up well, led by McIntyre, Dome and Bralorne. Base metal and silver stocks also closed with small gains to their credit.

McIntyre showed a gain of 15 at $38.90 at the close, Bralorne 10 cents at $11.10, Hollinger 10 at 10.30. Wright Hargreaves and Teck Hughes closed off about 5 cents each and Lake Shore was unchanged at $46. Dome gained 25.

The high priced base metal stocks had narrow gains at the close. Nickel finishing 50 higher at $21.25 and Noranda steady at $35.50.

Interest in the senior gold shares featured the early trading today. McIntyre developed early weakness when New York opened a little soft but the loss was recovered by mid-afternoon while gains were chalked up for Bralorne and Dome.

Secondary gold shares also came to the front, Sylvanite, Sylvan-Lake, Arno, Gunnar, Arnora and Wayside showing improvement.

Nickel had a slight sell-off but steadied later and then advanced. Noranda moved ahead 50c in the early afternoon.

CUBANS FIGHT U. S. INTERVENTION

While leaders of the new revolutionary government seek to prevent American intervention in the Cuban situation, protests against "Yankee imperialism" are being heard in Havana. The photo shows a group of Cuban residents on the waterfront in the capital city hearing speakers denounce the United States and criticize the dispatching of warships to Cuban waters after the government of President Carlos Manuel de Cespedes had been deposed.

SECRET FORTS GUARD FRANCE ON GERM AN BORDER

France's answer to Hitlerism, the threat of monarchical restoration in Germany, and the possibility of a new German invasion is a vast system of military defenses which is nearing completion along the Franco-German border after two years of labor and at a reported cost of more than $500,000,000. At the top is an artist's conception of the secret, underground forts being constructed in the Alsace-Lorraine sector, said by travelers to resemble great white ant hills. The forts are reported as strongly constructed as to resist the heaviest of air bombs. Map shows the frontier and on left are marching Germans, the reason for the forts.

LEAGUE RACE

Newark Meets Rochester, And Baltimore Buffalo

(By Herbert Barber, Associated Press Sports Writer)

The International League season had ended for four clubs today but for Newark Bears, Rochester Red Wings, Baltimore Orioles and Buffalo Bisons the important championship playoffs lay just ahead.

Having assured themselves of places along with his employer, Mr. Baltimore, the Rochester Americans will plunge into a pair of three-out-of-five series. The survivors then will clash over the four-out-of-seven route for the league pennant and the right to play the American Association winner in the Hills World series.

Newark, champion of the circuit last year and first-place holders as the end of the regular season yesterday, will represent the south while Baltimore leads the northern club which finished second.

Baltimore, the second southern representative, will battle Buffalo which emerged victorious in the playoff race by the narrow margin of a single point from Toronto Maple Leafs.

Newark and Baltimore, by piling up higher averages than Rochester and Buffalo respectively during the regular season, drew the right to take five percent of the gross receipts for each game. Under the playoff games, even those in which the Bears do not participate. Another five percent of each game's receipts will go to the league treasury and the remaining 90 percent will be split evenly between the two competing clubs.

Buffalo earned its playoff berth on the closing day, defeating Rochester 8-3 while Toronto took a 7-6 beating from Montreal. Baltimore's next result was to give Buffalo 4th place and the play-off place which Toronto took thirty-first fraction of a percentage point over Montreal.

Baltimore's Manager Jack Dunn and Buck Crowe helped Buffalo down the Red Wings as the Orioles were allowed only eight scattered hits. The Bisons fought from behind to score in 11 hits in 5 1-3 innings to win the ball game.

Baltimore Shepard

Montreal slugged Ostin Collier for eight hits and six runs in the first three innings and then coasted in to a 7-3 victory over Toronto. The Leafs drove Johnny Michael out of the box in a four run attack in the sixth but Art Smith stopped them there.

Myril Hoag's 22nd homer with the bases filled in the fifth inning featured a six-run rally and gave Newark a 6-5 decision over Baltimore. It was Hoag's 9th triple of the year. Newark shortstop responded by making three hits in four trips, the poorest fielding days of his career. He contributed a double and two singles to Newark's attack, however.

Albany closed its season with a pair of 2-1 victories over the last place Jersey City Skeeters and they finished seventh, a half game behind Montreal.

THE BIG SIX

(By The Canadian Press)

Julius Solters, of Baltimore, who was recently sold to the Chicago Red Sox, captured the International League batting crown for the 1933 unofficial averages compiled yesterday at the conclusion of the regular season.

Solters finished the regular playing schedule with a mark of .361, three points more than his nearest rival, Dan Taylor, Montreal first baseman who won the I. L. batting crown in 1931 with a mark of .356. Boone finished the season with a batting average of .353. Solters' mark of .361, however, was the best and high average of .391 with which George Puccinelli won last season.

The batting leaders:

Solters, Baltimore	523	122	189 .361
Boone, Toronto	546	134	193 .353
Mulleavy, Buffalo	609	127	207 .340
Arlett, Baltimore	500	113	170 .340

Calls On Old Teammate of L'Heureux, On His Way To Fishing Grounds of Northern Hasting's—Question of New Goal Tender For Leafs

"I am definitely through with professional hockey and the Toronto Maple Leafs, not only that, but I've promised to stay out," stated Mr. Daley that I'll continue in their employment in the meantime. I'm not sure," stated Lorne Chabot, ex-goal tender of the Toronto Maple Leafs to the Ontario-Intelligencer at the home of Wilf L'Heureux, his old Port Arthur teammate, during a week-end.

Lorne Chabot, who startled the professional hockey world late last week by tearing up the $7,000-$8 contract tendered him by the Toronto Maple Leaf Hockey Club and announced his permanent retirement to enter upon a business with his employer, Mr. Baltimore, the Rochester Americans will plunge into a pair of three-out-of-five series. PICTON WINS FIRST MATCH

Early Lead Saves Prince Edward Team From Cognawanas

Garnering three runs in the early stages of the game the Picton intermediates won the opening game in the third round of the intermediate O.B.A.A. play-downs when they defeated the Cognawana team by a 3-2 victory over the Peterboro Cognawanas at Picton on Saturday afternoon last before fully 1,000 Prince Edward County fans.

The Tanover-led clan pounced on the offerings of "Casey" Masterson, Peterboro hurler, before the Lily Lock hurler could get his bearings and had Ingalls batting in two runs in the first three frames. From then on the Peterboro hurler found the Picton Oats Town literally mowed the ball around the park and after the first inning Township League when they slugged their way to 11 to 4 victory over the Picton Red Sox at Picton here on Saturday afternoon before fully 1,000 fans from all parts of the township. After getting away to a flying start in the first inning the "Ox" were favourites but they failed miserably before the heavy hitting pitching of Masterson despite the fact that they forged to the front in the first inning and added counting one run per innings. The winners unleashed a terrific attack which saw nine hits in the latter part of the game to drive "Doll" Ketcheson, Red Sox hurler, to the battery mate, J. Crawford, stepped into the box and for a time stemmed the tide of Redneerville hits but without avail.

Lily Lock, slight centre fielder of the winners, was the big hitting star of the game, he being accounted for a triple and a home-run, with each hit contributing to the run scoring. Although Cook's two extra base hits were the only ones credited to him, the timely scoring the winners practically won the game for them. Masterson was when they"connected safely for six successive safe singles in the fifth inning to tie the score. The two big innings, the fourth and the seventh, when the Peterboro nine scored 9 runs, proved enough to overcome the lead the Picton team took them into camp by a 11 to 4 score. Ingalls was the outstanding star the Rawdon League had previous to his start in the game with the Peterboro League and later, the Tweed District champions, both teams being Intermediate "A" clubs.

The opposition with Napanee was a "Tale of Two Innings" Napanee had the lead by a 3 to 1 score up to the fourth inning when Bellingsly's disorganization broke loose and with the aid of a loose Springbrook outfield, succeeded in piling up six runs to put the games in the bag for the visitors.

The play was very even through-out and with slightly more favorable circumstances attended them. The Springbrook lads are confident that they will be able to reverse the score when they journey to Napanee on Wednesday for the second tilt. Charlie Burkitt veteran fielder for the northerners suffered an unfortunate accident when he injured his knee prior to the game on Friday but it is expected he will be in shape with his team mates on Wednesday when they take the field for the second game. Tom Ward, third baseman on the Springbrook team also suffered an injury to his hand in the sixth inning. Medical examination revealed that the third finger on his left hand had been fractured but Tom, despite this handicap, finished the game like a real sportsman.

Napanee played a real, air-tight game while Springbrook was not far behind the visitors in this respect. Errors were few and were confined mostly to the Springbrook outfield which was at a disadvantage due to the absence of Burkitt in centre.

Seleman and Rickmann on the mound for Springbrook turned in a good game with Rickmann finishing the receiving end in his usual good form. Bellingsly and Bowes performed well throughout the tilt and deserved a win. The batsmen of both teams gave some real exhibitions of snappy team work and a number of double batting the play. Walter Grove of Napanee, and former member of the Belleville Nationals, officiated behind the bat in the second game well in hand at all times.

Bowes was brought in as a pinch hitter in the seventh frame but was ineffective and the game ended with a 4 to 1 score for the visitors. After the game the Napanee team were entertained to a number of fine cyloyed a dinner party at the Tea Rooms.

Umpires—Walter Grove, Napanee. Major Fraser, bases.

Line-ups: Napanee — Miller, Gilliard, Waltz, Smith, Cook, Wilson, Bowes, Bellingsly, Ketcheson.

KINGSTON IS AGAIN WINNER

Ten-Inning Game Goes To Ponies Over New Toronto

Kingston, Sept. 11.—"Yammy" Jamieson's masterful pitching on a rainy night in the first of the tenth enabled Kingston Ponies to eke out a 2-1 victory over the local Cyclones with New Toronto in the first game of the Ontario Intermediate series for playdown 7 to 6 at the Goodyear Park Saturday afternoon.

The third and deciding game is slated to be played in Kingston Monday afternoon at three o'clock, standard time, the winner meeting the Toronto Balmy Beach club of Toronto the following Saturday for the championship.

As was the case in the first game, played in Kingston, there was little to choose between the teams, both executing errorless games in the field and batting and circling a total of 36 hits equally.

Jamieson had a night pitch during the entire game. Manager Ponies, caused plenty of excitement in the New Toronto camp strenuously objected to one of Umpire Joe Cowin's expert decisions during the game. In the play the game was temporarily halted while Cowin was threatened and cajoled to leave the bench after being fined $5 for his actions.

The Return of Daly

Howard Daly, who pitched Daly decided to make his exit.

Shortly after, however, the sight of Daly on the mound for the Ponies in the bench mingling with his stalwart mates, brought forth a cheer while he was being removed. Slim Jamieson, who had relieved Daly in the fifth, in turn went into a huddle with his club mates in the Ponies bench, amidst great rejoicing from the Kingston supporters.

The West Toronto League champions held the lead from the very first of the seventh, when the Kingstonians scored their first run, when Jamieson made it 4 all, Jamieson's single sending in Scrutton in the first of the seventh. Then came the 10th. The Queen City team came right back after the run in the first again when Norm Jennings shot a single to left and scampered to third on Ted Wellard's single to centre.

No scoring took place in the 9th, although New Toronto had the bases loaded when McMillon, who had singled and advanced to third on Jamieson's hit, was left stranded on Holdenby grounded to Scrutton, ending the inning.

There Is Goes

J. Arnold who had previously failed to secure a hit for the Ponies, finally managed to pound a single to left field to open the tenth inning. Scrutton then easily sacrificed to Jack Arnold, who replaced Quinn the best batter, raised a high fly to Jennings, scoring Arnold for the second out and it looked like the Kingstonians would run right out of a tough hole, but Jamieson crossed everyone up by smacking out a single to centre, which got the nose for the circuit. It was the first safety off the slim Ponies pitcher, at least 50 feet over Jennings head.

The West Toronto League representatives had the bases filled in the first man up in the tenth, singled and stole second, Wellard and Jennings were left and Tyrell, the next hitter, struck out. Jennings dashed in from across with a sharp single past first but in his over-anxiousness to stretch the hit into a double, he was nailed cold at the keystone sack on a snappy return throw by McQuaid, who incidentally turned in a flawless performance in right field for the visitors all through the game, as well as getting a single, a sacrifice and honner, a triple and a single in five attempts.

WEST'S HOPE WITH CHICAGO TO BEAT N. Y.

Giants Still Leading Cubs By Seven and Half Games

DOUBLE VICTORY

League Leaders Have Couple of Close Calls

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago Cubs, who are about as hard to beat as the Rock of Gibraltar as any team in the National League, looked more than ever like the sole remaining hope of the west to beat New York Giants out of the pennant today as Pittsburgh's lack of success against Brooklyn had virtually put the Cubs out of the running.

The Cubs, still 7 1-2 games behind the Giants moved into second place yesterday by defeating the Phillies twice while the Dodgers assisted their New York rivals in a friendly fashion for the second time in a row by dividing a doubleheader with the Pirates.

Playing the format of the conservative old teammate and host whom he had come to visit, Wilf L'Heureux, the ex-goalie was dubious regarding Chabot's retirement until he was personally assured Wilf that he was through with professional hockey. Chabot, Blackwood, his employer, corroborated Lorne's statement relating to his business connection with the by the Acme-Farmers Dairy in the city. Tuthing blanked the Phils with a 4-0 win in the first game with brilliant assistance from a home run by Hartnett in the fifth, followed by a four-hit performance and accurate control by Lon Warneke. Phils only got him up by walloping a homer for his first major league hit and bringing in his only run during the sixth.

Behind the double victory, Chicago couldn't gain a thing on the Giants. The New Yorkers won a couple of close calls in Cincinnati by 5-4 and 3-2 scores as Hubbell and Carl Hubbell were teammates on one of the greatest amateur hockey teams in Port Arthur but also roomed and boarded together. BARGAIN BRIDE

By KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

"When a man wants to be alone he's prowling restless that must be dead," he pointed out. "And when a woman wants to be alone, she hasn't she a headache?"

"Sometimes that's true," she admitted smiling.

"Well, have you a headache?"

"Have you any business you must attend?" They both laughed as he said he was not. "No." It was so easy to laugh. "Do you play checkers?" he asked inconsistently.

"Yes. Would you like to play?"

"I'd enjoy it if you would."

A moment later Regina brought the checkers and they started. Barrett knew he played a fair game but after a half hour of concentration and complete absence she knew his attack had begun to lag and by, "Now, now, Mr. Calvin and where do we go from here?" he couldn't advance to go. "I'll be damned!" Barrett said, frowning at the board. Then he smiled reluctantly. "I'll get you next time."

"You bet you, she said. "I'm awfully sorry," she added perversely, "and there really wasn't any reason for it."

CHAPTER 16

As Barrett made ready for the night he heard Elinor moving about in the next room. She had just turned the key in the lock, he realized and by that small omission Barrett felt he had been shut out, disliked long over his cigaret.

He would make her as comfortable in his home as she could be by vowed. She must know all the pretty things she had lacked. He would tell her next day that he had transferred to her account the exact sum that had been left him by Miss Ella Scranton's will. After that, he reflected, he would probably know nothing more about her. She might pay the bills for her father's illness, decide on $1,000 enough for the Thrupps and keep the rest for herself. This, however, was not his business. He had done all he could to return the fortune to Miss Ella's relatives.

And sure enough there was trouble about the money, but not the trouble he had expected. Three days later Barrett arrived home toward the close of the afternoon to find Elinor waiting for him in the hall.

She said, "Barrett, will you help me? I'm sorry to trouble you but I've worked and worked and nothing comes right. I'm so stupid!"

"What am I here for?" he questioned, slipping from his coat with unmanly haste.

"It's about Aunt Ella's money," she explained. She sighed, "I never was at all clever about figures."

"We won't worry over that," he comforted her. "We'll fix it in no time."

The gratitude in her glance made him look away.

"Barrett, you know," she said, "I don't think you will ever know how wonderful you've been about all this!"

"My dear child, that's ridiculous!"

"No it isn't. It would kill me if you fell in love with some girl and were hurt by —this. I don't know what I'd do!"

She was twisting a handkerchief, starting at him with eyes not yet world-wise enough to be able to veil any tragedy.

"You're an adorable child," he said, "and you're talking nonsense. Now suppose we go to the library and look over your problem?"

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

They settled side by side before his big desk. Humbly and with some embarrassment Elinor gave him a paper on which she had written very carefully the names of "Father," "Mother," "Father's" and "Mother's" debts. Barrett was very much frightened. "But you've nothing left for yourself!" he protested.

"Why, I don't need anything; I couldn't, really, take it. I'd feel as if I'd stolen it. Barrett, I'm terribly sorry for myself—"

He turned to face her. "Of course," he said slowly, "you'll have your allowance."

"Oh, no! I couldn't take —anything more from you!"

"Look here, child!" He moved, speaking to face her more fully. "We should have had this out before we were married but since we didn't, here we are. You think I would let any woman—or stubborn youngster—go my wife without trying to fit in that she was provided for adequately? Why time and my income makes her equal to be my wife!"

"I don't know". He had never seen her more feminine—maidenly, daringly shy. But I can't," Elinor went on, "I really can't take any money from you—as things are. Don't you see?"

"No, I don't see!"

"How are you planning to care for yourself in the future? Again he glanced at the page on which was sketched the gist of the give every cent of Miss Sexton's vast fortune.

"Well," she explained slowly, "I can give music lessons. I thought of going back when Father was first taken sick but I realized I could only earn enough to support myself. I can do that, though. I'm sure I can!"

"Yes?" he queried gently. He would see her doing it, he reflected pitifully.

"Yes, really. And at night I could play in a restaurant—"

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

He laughed and said, "But it happen," he pointed out, his lowered eyelids making his gaze a condensed slit, "that I won't have that! Your playing in some damned restaurant!"

"I could clerk or be a well secretary—if you preferred that," she offered meekly. "I could do office work, anything for which I'm suitable. I'm very strong."

"Oh!" God!" he flung out. "Excuse me, Elinor." He pushed his chair back, arose and crossed the room. He had not dreamed that she could be so unfeminine.

The girl sat still, cowed by his disapproval. "It's a year ahead," he controlled and thankfully, "and by then we can come to some arrangement that will satisfy us both."

He had been rather unnerved by dramatics, he reflected but the idea of her starving, wearing herself out and doing without had made him feel as if his head would burst.

"I won't do anything you don't want me to do!" she said quickly. There were tears in her eyes.

"Child," he answered, "if you promise me, that, all this is unnecessary!"

"I do promise it. I owe you too much to hurt you. But I can't take any of Aunt Ella's money, nor any from you—"

The thawing moment was gone. He laughed mirthlessly.

"I'm going to keep enough to support myself while I'm here," Elinor went on.

He flushed deeply. "That", he said, "is the first really unkind thing you've heard you said."

"But Barrett—"

"Silence!" Again he sat down beside her. "I am going to support you while you are in this house and you're going to be suitably garbed. You're not going to ride on horses." She smiled at that a little but his face did not change.

"Your allowance will be adequate and I don't want you to hoard it". "Oh, gee!" she murmured.

"And what's more, I can't see you give away all this Ella's fortune without a protest," he added.

"You aren't!" she stated with her first and last attempt at humor that day.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

An hour later their voices had grown a bit stiff from strain. She was nervous and thoroughly upset, Elinor realized, as she dressed for dinner. She had not dressed for could be so belligerent. He had insisted she must buy twice as many frocks as any woman could need. His spoke of her allowance and the amount staggered her.

"I don't want to be an expense," she had objected. "Can't you understand?"

To which he had replied with a frozen, "No!"

Higgins, serving their dinner, was depressed. They had been married less than a week and obviously they had had their first quarrel. They hardly spoke when he was in the room but when he was out of it they went on with their discussion. Entering softly, Higgins heard her saying, "I'm not a mule. I only—" and Barrett's response, "If you're not a mule just what do you think you are?"

After dinner Barrett sat in the library and Elinor, in the drawing room, played wistful tunes. At 11 she went upstairs without saying good night.

Barrett called for a whisky and soda and a Bible later by another whisky and soda. He mounted the stairs wearily at 11. But in his room he felt no weariness. The door was open.

"Barrett—" he heard.

"Yes!" He neared the door with a few eager strides.

"I want to speak with you a moment—if you'll come in!"

CHAPTER 20

A small night light was burning in Elinor Barrett's bed and she was sitting up, curling hair framing her oval face and touching her bare shoulders.

"Barrett," she said as he stood beside her, "I can't stand it any longer, trembled on the words. .

He sank to the edge of the bed and took her hands in his.

"I'll do anything you want me to," she said with a sob. "I hope you won't want me to take any of Aunt Ella's money—"

"I don't want you to, since you've told me you don't want to. I don't want to provide for you—when the time comes—if I don't know I can stand it if you wouldn't let me do that."

"I can take money from you more easily," she admitted.

"Well!" he said quickly. His throat had thickened a little with sudden confusion. "Then," he said, "suppose," he said, "we call this matter closed?"

"Yes!"

"I know I was harsh, child—"

"Oh, no! I was perfectly horrid but—"

"Well, it's over now." He had to settle for that was over on the tip of his tongue.

He lifted her hand on his and again his heart was beating thickly.

We made rather a mountain out of a molehill," he said.

"I suppose we did but I couldn't seem to help it," she agreed, her deeply indrawn breath and a little sigh.

"We were both—rather earnest!"

"Yes—"

He rose quickly. "Better be on my way," he said. "Peace to you child," bending suddenly to give her a quick forehead.

"We must be friends," he said a bit thickly. "To day has taught us that."

He did not understand her eyes that were crying, "I love you!" but his mouth said them to her as she lifted his hand. "Good night, dear."

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Alone Elinor touched her forehead with her hand where he had laid the hand to her lips. She had been with a man a week and already almost as much as she was back where she had been, willing to kneel to him if he would have her.

Barrett next morning smiled blithely to himself. How could he have been taken in so completely as to believe the girl really wanted she had said? How could he be know her for exactly what she was?

Elinor wakened with a chill start. Is he really? Did he? She had not put his [illegible] Higgins to him [illegible] thing that [illegible] going to burden me all my life with it and she'd cleverly planted on the conscientiousness of having stolen your money? Barrett and I both know this money is yours and that more might have been yours if you had been willing to do what mother did. There has been plenty of gossip about mother that you could have told Aunt Ella—

"I never did tell Aunt Ella anything about your mother," Bessie admitted. "Once I thought of it—I never did, though—and I was so glad even high after Aunt Ella's death that I didn't."

Jim Thrupp heard all this and [illegible] Barrett put in his voice and at last they were persuaded. After that came the ecstatic hunt for a house with "nice grounds and space around it."

"There's not a dark room in it!" Bessie would pant, stopping with Elinor. And Elinor would press her aunt's arm closer to her side, saying, "Barrett thinks is a marvellous bargain!"

Bessie told Jim Senior that all Elinor's opinions were second-hand. "I never saw a child so much in love," she said, "I some times think she's a little too much in love. It puts every egg in one basket, you know," she pointed out.

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

"Then canst not prevail over Sir Mabod on the morrow, my good friend," said Sir Richard, "for I much fear thy place in the lists against him, but that may not be. I console myself with the thought that three will conquer in the end, and die as a good Sir Knight should—with no stain upon my escutcheon. Verily will it solace the Princess Galeadis to know that there didst die bravely!"

"You think so?" ventured Jimmy... "Verily," [illegible] Richard replied. "And if I die, will she be put out?" "Put out what?" demanded Richard... "Why, her feeding bottle," explained Richard. "I'll get to be a little [illegible] Blake... "I'll be damned if I'll be [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

MOTORIST FATALLY INJURED NEAR FOXBORO

Pension Tribunal in Session Here Called to Montreal

TRIBUNAL'S SESSION HERE IS CANCELLED

Unexpected Termination of Two Day Session In Belleville

4 CASES UNHEARD

Board Ordered To Report At Montreal District Headquarters

Acting upon instructions received from Ottawa the session of the Pension Tribunal which was scheduled for today in Belleville, has been cancelled and the members and staff instructed to report to District headquarters in Montreal. The Pensions Advocate, J. L. Maclennan will be returning to Ottawa this afternoon. Today was to be the last of a two-day session which had been arranged for in this centre and the orders to suspend or discontinue today's cases, came as a distinct surprise, as the claimants and a number of witnesses were on hand at 9.30 this morning. The Registrar was busily engaged for some time arranging return transportation and other out-of-pocket expense in the cases of out-of-town claimants who were on hand.

No information or instructions have been received by the chairman as to resumption of hearings of these claims. It is anticipated however, that the amendments to the Pension Act will be promulgated very shortly and that the new body "The Canadian Pension Commission" will be functioning for the purpose of hearing Pension claims shortly.

Before finally breaking up the Tribunal has been tendered addresses by three years, having come into being in October 1st, 1930.

Only four of the eight cases to come before the court, had been completed at the time, that word arrived from Ottawa, to disband and though claimants and witnesses were on hand, they could not be heard as instructions were forthcoming from the Capital. The Tribunal and intended to visit London, Ont., on leaving Belleville.

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS

Lynbrook, N. Y., Sept. 12.—(CP)—Yowls, attracted firemen to a section between two buildings yesterday. They found a dog—very small and very frightened—inside. Fed three hours they worked and finally got him free.

No one in the crowd of onlookers stepped forward to claim the fireman said:

"I guess he belongs to we now. But from here on his name will be Squeeze."

West York, Sept. 12 (CP)—Joseph Paulas used his crutch for a writing pad, thereby getting in trouble.

Policeman saw Paulas, a cripple, standing on a street corner. Men would approach him, hold a brief conversation and then Paulas would write something on his crutch.

The policeman examined the crutch. Several numbers had been scribbled on it. The policeman arrested the man, charging policy numbers, a gambling game.

Chicago, Sept. 12 (CP)—Occupants of a Forest Park street house were somewhat startled when they went to bed. In their front yard was a tombstone, bearing the inscription:

"May Sullivan, died May 14, 1931.

How it got there was a mystery.

Philadelphia, Sept. 12 (CP) — An attempt to rid suburban Jenkintown of the effects of a recent startling crime created a police problem.

While 20 expert shots, led by G. W. Gerhard, brought down about 1,000 of the birds last night, so many residents gathered to watch the "war," police reserves had to be called out to hand'e the throng.

The usual number of starlings which have flocked to the suburban borough in recent weeks, led residents to ask the state to take steps.

NEW KING OF IRAQ

A recent photo of Crown Prince Emir Ghazi who was crowned King of Iraq almost immediately after the news was received in Bagdad that King Feisal (lower), had died suddenly at Berne, Switzerland. Emir Ghazi is 21 years old. He was educated in English universities.

HOLD UP BANK KIDNAP YOUTH

Bandits Release Carl Wild At Youngstown

Farrell, Pa., Sept. 12 (CP)—Two men, armed with sawed-off shotguns and revolvers, robbed the S. J. Guilty Bank of between $5,000 and $7,000 today, kidnapped Carl Wild, 21, an employee, and fled across the state line to Ohio in two cars. At Youngstown they released Wild unharmed.

Eight men entered the bank with two companions remained at the wheels of automobiles. Holding employees and two customers at bay the men, only one of whom wore a mask, took the money, seized Wild, backed out of the bank and roared out of town toward Sharon.

NEED PRESSED OF INFLATION

Senator Harrison Stresses Requirement of Better Commodity Prices

Washington, Sept. 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt interrupted his conference on finance today to receive an urgent recommendation from Senator Harrison Harrison of Mississippi, United States Senate Finance Committee for "rational inflation."

"Commodity prices have got to be up," Senator Harrison said. "It is now gone some form of rational inflation. We have got to do more than we are doing." This will help the bankers and the farmers and the latter are the ones who really need help just now."

The President summoned his recovery council to meet this afternoon following a long conference today with his chief financial advisers.

New steps to aid the rise in prices and to provide credit for the NRA members appear in prospect.

Maine Goes Back on Prohibition, Has Been Dry Since Before Civil War

Washington, Sept. 12.— (CP)—Into the 18th. It was the 36th State to enter the Repeal Column. Ratification of the proposed 21st Constitution before an amendment becomes the law of the land.

Twenty States have now taken all the steps to ratify repeal. Among the latest of them, filed its formal notification of ratification with the Secretary of State at Washington yesterday.

At least 39 States will have voted on the Repeal proposal by November 7th. The next States to vote after today are Idaho and New Hampshire. Both have called elections for next Wednesday.

UNEMPLOYED JUVENILES ARE PROBLEM

One Hundred Thousand Young Jobless In British Isles

SOCIAL WASTE

Society Says Dr. Holland Disturbed By Great Laxity

LEICESTER, Eng., Sept. 12.—(CP Cable) — Juvenile unemployment is one of the most vital problems confronting Great Britain with more than 100,000 young people between the ages of 14 and 18 jobless, according to the latest statistics, J. L. Holland, noted educationist, told the British Association for the Advancement of Science today.

"The National Conscience is troubled about the problem of adult unemployment, but nothing is not fully alive to the magnitude of juvenile unemployment and its terrible consequences," he said. "Here any worse example of social waste than that the youth who is to be dependent is thwarted, and the opportunity of honest, useful work is denied them? Could they have any

ELEVEN VACANCIES IN SENATE OF DOMINION

Conservatives Number 46 and Liberals, 39 Members

Ottawa, Sept. 12—Death today of Hon. P. E. Belcourt has reduced the vacancies in the Canadian Senate. Senator Belcourt was the oldest Senator and fourth oldest in point of service. He was 88 years old last May and completed 31 years in the Senate last February.

The present standing in the Senate is 46 Conservatives and 39 Liberals. The eleven vacancies, all but one caused by death, have occurred since December 15, 1932. Five are on the government side of the chamber and six are in the opposition ranks.

The law worked speedily in the cases of the four hoodlums they were under sentence within 48 hours after the kidnapping and jailing of Hesbitt had occurred.

Funeral services for Nesbitt, slain as he stood with upraised arms and pleading for mercy, were held here Sunday. The body was taken to Warren, Ohio, his birthplace, for burial.

OUTSTANDING FIGURE GONE

Senator Beique Passes At Age of 88 Years

Montreal, Sept. 12 (CP)— An outstanding career in law and finance was closed today with the death of Senator Frederic L. Beique at the advanced age of 88 years. Senator Beique founded the falling health for some months and his death was not unexpected. He was elevated to the Senate in 1902. During a long period practice at the Bar he was made a K.C. in 1892 and in 1898. Senator Beique was president of the La Banque Canadienne Nationale, a director of the Canadian Pacific Railway and Vice-President of Canadian Cottons, Limited. He was also President of the University of Montreal and was former Batonnier of the Montreal Bar. He was made an officer of the Legion of Honour by the French Government.

KIDNAPPERS GIVEN LIFE

Four Men Under Sentence Also For Killing

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Under concurrent sentences of 25 to 90 years' imprisonment for kidnapping, and life for murder, two of the four men who kidnapped, robbed and killed Charles Hesbitt, last Thursday, were taken before dawn today from the County jail here to begin the journey to the Michigan branch prison at Marquette. They were Robert Buffa and Robert Fratus.

A few hours later, their companions in the crime, one of the most wanton in Michigan's criminal annals, Douglas and Louis Whitsitt, formerly of Toronto, were taken from the jail and started on their trip to the Michigan State Prison at Jackson, where they will serve similar sentences.

Three deputy sheriffs accompanied each group. Fratus, who identified Buffa, considered the two most desperate criminals, were handcuffed and wore leg irons, but the Whitsitt brothers were merely handcuffed.

PRICE OPENS UP INQUIRY

No Charge Laid Against Scott-Paine For "Speeding"

TORONTO, Sept. 12. — (CP) — Ontario Provincial Police heads said today Hubert Scott-Paine British Harmsworth Trophy Challenger, was picked up by a traffic officer near Barrington yesterday for speeding. He later appeared before Magistrate Thompson of Ingersoll, who decided no charge would be laid.

Major General Victor Williams, Commissioner of Provincial Police ordering an inquiry into the incident, said he demanded the report from the Constable.

"He was picked up while speeding," said a police official. "This incident arises also in the London district where a private car arose recently in which two American motorists charged they had been unfairly dealt with when one was lined for reckless driving following an accident. This case is still under consideration by Attorney-General W. H. Price, who stated today he had asked for further details from the Constable at Wardsville, who levied the fine."

CRANKS CAR IN GEAR DIES IN HOSPITAL

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—(CP)—Oliver Williams, 43, Coniston, Ont., died in the hospital here today from injuries received when the automobile he was cranking ran over him. He had left the car in gear.

TRIANGLE IN WORLD OF ANIMALS ENDS

She-Wolf Kills She-Coyote, Mate of He-Wolf in Park Cage

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 12—Barney, the old he-wolf and an unmated she-coyote lived fairly quietly in a large cage in Bellevue Park here. But the Parks Board, having another she-wolf, and not knowing where to cage it, tactlessly put it in with Barney and the coyote.

For several days she-coyote and she-wolf spent hours looking "daggers" at one another." An immediate sympathy sprung up between them.

But Barney maintained an aloof, unconcerned attitude.

Although much smaller than the coyote, the new wolf struck at, and lacked her cage-mate. When the dust clearing the prairie dog was dead, a deep cut in her throat.

BEER, WINE, AS ISSUE NEARER

Premier Henry Admits Cabinet To Discuss Matter

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—(CP)—Sale of beer and wine as an issue in an Ontario Provincial election is gradually growing nearer, Premier Hon. S. Henry admitted today in an interview, the Telegram said.

"The Premier agreed that his cabinet will shortly discuss the question in view of the growing feeling that the Liquor Control Act requires alteration in connection with the distribution of beer," said the Telegram.

The newspaper quoted the Premier as saying: "The present Act, it was admitted by former Premier Ferguson, was more of an experiment. There appear to be some few who believe the distribution of beer requires a change. That has to be taken into consideration and we will discuss it.

"It may be before the House meets or not until an election."

OVERSEAS TRADE OF BRITAIN PROGRESSES

Satisfactory Progress Made in British Trade

London, Sept. 12 (C.P. Cable) — British overseas trade continues its steady upward climb. Despite intervening holidays both imports and exports for August were substantially higher than for July and August last year.

The increase as shown by the Board of Trade returns are regarded as especially satisfactory because the advance in imports was principally in articles wholly or mainly manufactured.

Value of imports for August reached £56,754,000, an advance of £3,000,000 over July and £3,500,000 above the total for August, 1932. Imports in August classified under the heading of raw materials and articles mainly unmanufactured, showed an increase of £1,500,000 over July and of £4,750,000 over the previous August.

EXPORT CARGO HELPS PORT

New Lease On 1933 Export Life For Churchill

Churchill, Man., Sept. 12.—(CP) —Assurance of another cargo for export this season and reduction of storage rates today gave Canada's most northerly seaport a new lease on its 1933 export life.

Threatened with idleness through lack of grain for shipment overseas before the official closing five weeks hence, Churchill began to busy with renewed activity as word came the Saskatchewan wheat pool was providing 400,000 bushels to be exported shortly.

Meanwhile the S. S. Brandon, which has carried one cargo from the port to the United Kingdom this season, was en route back to Churchill to carry another cargo to the United Kingdom. Resides wheat, the steamship will take furs.

Gloom that settled over Western farmers as grain prices fell, it became known only 32,000 bushels of wheat were left in the 2,500,000-bushel elevator after the S. S. Caredonia steamed away was dispelled last night by announcement of Hon. H. H. Stevens, Federal Minister of Trade and Commerce, that S. S. Brandon would make another trip. She will carry 350,000 bushels of wheat and if further deliveries of wheat to the port are made by farmers or grain companies, more ships likely will be available before the ice hems in the port.

To Give Seat to Hepburn?

Border Cities Star Says Way Open For East Kent Seat

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 12.—(CP)—Mitchell F. Hepburn, M.P., Ontario Liberal Leader, may shortly be offered a seat in the Ontario Legislature for the coming session by the Conservatives, according to apparently well-authenticated reports in Conservative circles, the Border Cities Star says in an article today.

"The Government intends calling a by-election in East Kent, and made vacant by the death of P. J. Carling," the paper says. "The Tories are planning to offer Mr. Hepburn Parliamentary seat in East Kent, and will accept it. The move is understood to have been discussed at a recent cabinet meeting."

Shakespeare Play Quoted in Trial of Political Killing

peare was appealed to across the centuries and the vast differences of Occidental and Oriental civilizations today to testify in behalf of ten young naval officers on trial for killing Premier Suyoshi Inukai in May, 1932.

The defense attorney, Naoyoshi Tasmaski, dramatically declaimed passages from "Julius Caesar" to show that the assassination of Inukai was comparable to the slaying

GRASSHOPPER AND DROUGHT THIN YIELD

Low Average Per Acre In Canada's Wheat Crop

MUCH LOWER

Wheat Estimates Lowest Since 1924 At 282,771,-000 Bushels

Ottawa, Sept. 12—A crop report issued yesterday by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics told how devastating had been the effect of the drought and armies of grasshoppers on Canada's wheat crop. "The report estimated this year's crop for the entire Dominion at 282,771,000 bushels.

Last year the crop was 428,514,-000, and the year before 231,225,000 bushels. The high record was in 1928, when, with fewer acres under wheat than this year, harvest of 566,726,000 bushels was garnered. Not since 1924 had the crop fallen below 300,000,000. The total that season was 263,097,000. From that year, acre for acre, the yield was better than that estimated for 1933. The average yield in 1924 was 11.9 bushels to the acre. This year's estimate is 10.9. In 1928 the yield

J. J. MORRISON QUITS POST

Ill-Health Prompts U.F.O. Secretary To Retire

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—(CP)—J. J. Morrison, "father of the United Farmers of Ontario," in the Kitchen of whose home the idea of the agrarian organization was conceived has resigned as Secretary of the U.F.O. because of failing health, it will mean considerable loss to the U.F.O. organization, it was declared yesterday.

Accompanying his resignation to the executive was a letter from his physician urgently advising that he give up his U.F.O. duties. While official serving his connections Mr. Morrison had been told would "always be with the movement".

More than a decade Mr. Morrison has been recognized as one of the outstanding farm leaders in Canada. His temporary successor is H. H. Dewart, (K.C.) Secretary-Treasurer of the U.F.O., who has been appointed acting secretary for the balance of the year.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 12 (CP)—Light showers have occurred in Northern Quebec and East Maritimes, also in some parts of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, but it has been fine elsewhere in the Dominion. Temperature has been considerably below normal throughout Eastern Canada with moderate temperature in the west.

Northern Ontario—West to northwest winds; fair and continuing cool today and Wednesday.

Lake Superior—Moderate winds; fair and cool.

Lenora and Rainy River—Moderate winds; mostly with the same temperature; probably a few scattered showers.

Saskatchewan—Mostly fair with stationary or a little higher temperature.

Alberta—Mostly fair with moderate temperature.

MOTORIST IS HURLED THRU WIRE FENCING

Sideswipes Truck Near Foxboro Laden With 3 Tons of Stone

INJURY FATAL

Sides of Truck and Car Are Torn As Result of Impact

Everett R. Jamieson died in the Hospital at nine o'clock this afternoon without regaining consciousness. He had been paralyzed on one side since he suffered a fracture of the skull and brain concussion on an accident near Foxboro on Monday night.

An Inquest will be opened.

Suffering from a badly fractured skull and concussion of the brain sustained in a motor accident, Everett R. Jamieson, 43, of Centre St., Whitby, was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital in the local ambulance following the sideswiping of a loaded truck by a car driven by him at what is known as Carter's Corner, one mile north of Foxboro, about 8.45 o'clock last evening. Jamieson was received at the hospital in a rather critical condition and had not regained consciousness at an early hour today. A passenger in the car, Miss Hyon Lenox, maid, living at 310 Front street, escaped with minor cuts and bruises about the head and face from flying glass.

The car which Jamieson was driving was proceeding northwards at an alleged rapid rate of speed and when about to make a right hand turn at the first curve north of Carter's Corner, struck a truck loaded with stone and being driven in the opposite direction by Frank Howes, 2 St. Clair Boulevard, Toronto. The car, according to the Provincial Police, who investigated, proceeded 168 feet further northeast on the highway and jumped a three-foot ditch before coming to a full stop against a wire fence.

Hurled Through Fence

Mr. Jamieson was picked up with his head projecting through the fence while the remainder of his body was stretched in the car. Jamieson was unconscious when Miss Lenox managed to pull herself from the wreckage. With the assistance of a passing motorist, Mr. David

FAULKNER CUP IS PRESENTED

Belle Theatre Fetes Fruit Girls' Team Who Also Win League Cup

As guests of the management the players and officials of the Belleville Fruit girls' softball team attended the Belle Theatre last evening where, during the programme, the girls were presented with the two fine trophies they have won on the playing field this season.

First the Dr. J. A. Faulkner trophy which they won on Labor Day on Victoria Park by winning all elimination series taking in all the better girls' teams of the district was presented to them by Mr. Harold Holton on behalf of Dr. Faulkner who was unable to attend through pressing professional duties.

Manager Ted Wilson was host of the evening and manager of the theatre presented the girls with the cup they had defended when they successfully won the local title for the second year in succession. The girls were dressed in uniform and looked fine in the proper lighting on the stage as the Belle is fine setting for such an occasion was pictured. Captain Helen Gilbert received the trophies while Coach Barrett was on hand.

In presenting the Faulkner trophy Mr. Holton assured the girls that it was the intention of the Liberal party to re-stage their Labor Day girls' softball tournament as an annual affair, inviting all the various league winners to compete in future years. "The party is always ready to sponsor good clean sport and we feel it is an asset to any community", stated Mr. Holton in conclusion.

Both the players and the executive of the Belleville Fruit girls' team are highly indebted to Mr. Horhan for his hospitality.

EXPERTS AT ALL SHOE REBUILDING
Chas. R. Tilbrook Shop Has Most Modern Equipment
When one sees a man, woman or child going about with a limping one instinctively looks at their feet. And—in the majority of instances one notes that the individual is wearing a new pair of shoes. There is nothing that makes a person more uncomfortable, makes them more irritable, than shoes that because they invariably cramp the feet until they set to the shape of the foot.
Such is the case. Shoe Rebuilding Shop, of 393 Front street, Belleville, is an establishment that keeps the feet of the community in good spirits, because it enables the people to have shoes that will last a long amount of wear from a pair of old shoes. Shoes that are repaired there are returned stylish in appearance, serviceable in quality and reasonable in price.
The owner and manager of the shop understands what constitutes a good job of shoe repairing. For instance, Mr. Tilbrook knows the qualities of leather and sees that only the best grade is used. He knows the process of sewing soles so that it will be snappy in appearance and will be of long service.
A good pair of shoes represent a fairly large investment and all of the most cases outwear two or three pairs of shoes. The advantages of having them soled and heeled represents a savings of no small consideration. Mr. Tilbrook specially repaired at this shop—they look specially at shoes that repaired are infinitely more comfortable. In all the service there is one that is neat, is both efficient and economic. No effort or expense has been spared by the management in equipping the place with the latest machinery and appliances to enable them to do a first class job in the shortest possible time and at the minimum in expense.
Mr. Chas. R. Tilbrook, the owner and manager of The Belleville Shoe Hospital, has had 15yrs of experience and is of high standing in this section. The firm has been established for a number of years and during this time has promoting its business by fair service. Phone Belleville 900 for your appointment.

Kiwanis Hosts to Entertainers

Club Gives $10 Gold Door Prize For Karnival

At their regular weekly luncheon Tuesday noon members of the Kiwanis Club of this city had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Hemsworth, Miss Jean Hemsworth and her dancing partner, Mr. Harold Gallop who delighted those in attendance at the Armouries Monday evening. Miss Hemsworth and Mr. Gallop are again appearing at the Armouries Fashion Show at the Karnival giving the same numbers that so captured the audience at the recent Fashion Show at the recent Canadian National Exhibition.
Tuesday's after-luncheon meeting of the Club was given over to discussion and further plans arrangements regarding the Karnival. It was decided that a $10 gold piece will be given as a door prize this evening and Monday night's tickets will also be drawn this evening at the evening's admission. A most interesting announcement will be made at the carnival tonight, which means a valuable prize to be given Wednesday evening when a big show is to be staged.
With the Toronto Riddles to entertain Thursday and Friday evenings, and the big wrestling events Saturday night to complete the Kiwanis Club of Belleville are providing four excellent shows as well as the closing night of the fashion show this evening.

PREVENTION IN LAW FIELD
Wise Lawyer Keeps His Clients From Costly Litigation
"Preventive Law" was the subject of an interesting address before Belleville Rotary Club Monday by Gordon D. Conant, K.C., Oshawa, Past President of Oshawa Rotary Club. Presenting expensive litigation he had to handle, the preventive medicine said the speaker, and the lawyer who can keep his clients out of the courts and save them from expensive and useless litigation is doing his duty to his client and the state in a manner deserving of all commendation. The lawyer should be the business adviser and confidante and on important undertakings should be consulted with being carefully gone into and discussed with a lawyer.
People who buy a ten cent form and make their own wills also almost invariably make trouble for their heirs—one of the most important things to leave behind when one leaves the earth. Is a vital property dealt with all due care by a lawyer, so that no doubt exists as to its passing. Mr. Conant pointed to the fact that many wills which have to be brought to court to be interpreted, and named an executor, a lawyer, specialist in wills, who made his own will and died, and the will had to be interpreted by the court. Knowing that when a great lawyer fails down occasionally in making a will what chance has a layman to keep his heirs out of litigation by home made wills.
Criminal law was discussed by the speaker who said that lawyers have more trouble over the things their clients say when first placed under arrest than in conducting the entire case afterward. Have nothing to say until you see a lawyer, and avoid trouble. Everyone placed under arrest is entitled to have a lawyer, and the best procedure when accused is to insist upon seeing a lawyer before making any statement whatever.
Sale of goods, leases, land transactions, etc., were discussed. Mr. Conant who stressed the advisability of having everything legal on paper as avoiding possible future litigation and endless trouble. No transaction is legal unless it is in writing, and there are many pitfalls for the unwary who undertake to be their own lawyer, the correct procedure and the only safe one is to consult your lawyer upon all transactions which depend upon their legality to be effective.
Mr. Conant's address was very interesting and instructive and was interspersed with amusing stories which illustrated the points he wished to bring out.

WM. McEWAN PRES. Y'S MEN

Installation of New Officers Club Take Place

Installation of the new officers elected at the termination of the last semester was the chief order of business during the initial autumn meeting of the local Y's Men's Club at the Y.M.C.A. last evening after the club members held enjoyed a two course holiday. From their activities during which time, however, they saw the reinstatement of many of the projects such as the boys' camp and other objections fulfilled that are always interesting in the hearts of all Y's Men.
"Bill" McEwan, along with his newly elected staff of officers, was inducted into the office of president of the Belleville Y's Men's club last evening before practically a 100 present. Installing officer was Thompson, past president of the Toronto Y's Men's International Y's Men, was the installing officer of the evening and, after a few words on the duties that befront the newly elected executive of Y's Men's Club. "Ordinarily the candidate seeks the office but, in the Y's Men's Club, office seeks the candidate," pointed out Mr. Thompson following which he dwelt on the four "I's" of Y'sdom, those four principles which must be kept in the minds of all Y's Men namely — Idealism, Interest, Initiative and Intimacy.
In response President-elect "Bill" McEwan, in a few words, struck a note his incoming executive, eloquently thanked his last year executive for the excellent manner in which they had carried on the work of the club. "Thanks to the officers of last semester we today start further than ever with a balanced budget," stated the new president, further pointing to the many new projects that will be presented to the club this fall. President McEwan asked all for their hearty co-operation in the future as they had always given in the past. The new executive installed included:
The treasurer's report for the fiscal year showed that the club's financial statement was more than satisfactory, showing a balance more than their usual amount of approximately $100. Congratulations from Y's Men's International Steve Bell, secretary of the secretary —one for promptness and the other for holding a 100 percent meeting attendance for the semester. The "Word to the Yr" a Y's Men's International publication from Lawrence, Mass., carried twice the write up of the Belleville club as one of the most foremost Y's Men's Clubs in the continent, a distinction that brought distinction to the local organization.
Until the installation of officers President Court Miller conducted the initial meeting of the fall term although no programme was presented. Later, however, he outlined the duties at the piano. The chairman of the various committees were carry on the work of the club for the ensuing year were presented and approved. They included the first and foremost the district meeting that is scheduled to be held in Belleville this semester. This meeting will be the largest Y's Men's gathering ever to be held in this city and Newton Thompson was unanimous choice as chairman for the all-important convention. The other chairmen ships were—Finance, Harry Poste and Geo. Pauley; Entertainment, Mel Blanchard; Revenue, Court Miller; House Committee, Bert Houston; Programme, Alex Gordon; Advertising, Ken Gulling; Membership, Ed. Buchanan; Sunshine as a whole.
Following the termination of the meeting a special executive meeting was held.

PAY MORE FOR GASOLINE NOW

N.R.A. Plan of President Roosevelt Is Given Credit

Local consumers are paying from one cent to a cent and a half more per gallon for gasoline today as the result of wage boosts under Roosevelt's National Recovery Act, and the consumptive costs of the crude product in the field.
Whether or not there will be a further rise in price remains to be seen. Those connected with the industry in this city are frank in their statements that it may. It is pointed out that the industry at present has not been stabilized and until some agreement is reached there may be further advances. Little hope of a reduction for some months ih held out.
"Crude oil has doubled in price in the field," officials of the British American Company pointed out today. Their product had gone up one and one-half cents per gallon at gasoline within the past five days.
"You can lay it all to the NRA," they explained. "Wage boosts and so on may send it higher yet."
At the office of the Shell Gas Company an increase of one cent per gallon was announced. The rise in price at this office was explained as the outcome of a recent oil men's convention held in Chicago.
Cities Service Company also announced the one cent rise. Whether it will go higher remains to be seen, stated the office. "Every time the crude goes up oil and gas will, too," they said.

MONSTER FISH SEIZES BASS

Gerald Lynch Preserves Mutilated Bass As Proof

Mr. Gerald Lynch, Coleman street, ardent fisherman, is exhibiting cold storage proof this week of an epic struggle with a monster at Madoc Lake last Sunday. It's a one and one half pound black bass, badly chewed and almost bitten in two that had served as bait for another fish whose size and weight are still being talked of by himself, Geo. Lee and Frank Donnelson, who were in the boat with him. Casting for bass in the shallows, the fish managed to hook a fair-sized fish that then commenced to reel in. When he had it about to the boat there was a sudden flurry, and then the rest began to play. It's just singing until over one hundred feet of line had been paid out. Once the fish, on the end of the line was brought close to the boat, but each time he took a new lack away from it. On the third try the fishermen saw that the big fish was much even hooked but was meekly hanging on to the last mouthful. Then the fish was almost brought to the boat, but lifting of the gaping, the large one finally flickered its tail and disappeared into deep water. They still report it, was as all beat a forty pound hunge.
Less work for firemen is indicated by the big fish when a small fire hose can be made milder-preat and moisture-repellant when treated with radioactive salts.

ADMINISTRATION COSTS
Belleville, Sept. 10
Editor Ontario Intelligencer,
Sir:—In the issue of your paper of the 8th. inst. appeared a statement from the Relief office for the period of a year, which shows that $65,858.27 was expended for relief from August, 1932 until July 1933.
The statement reads that "a full statement showing mode of distribution of relief from August 1 until July 31, has been submitted for public approval, then it goes on to state" the committee should draw to the attention of the public the comparative low cost of administration as compared with other municipalities.
Why then is the cost of administration, "Officials' Salaries" not listed. Are they paid by the city or the Relief Department? I am sure the public would be more interested in a complete cost statement which would include administration.
E. J. BALDERE,

380 ENROL AT DEAF SCHOOL

Overcrowding Will Be Eliminated By New Construction

With an enrolment of approximately three-hundred and eighty students, school will start for scholars of the Ontario School for the Deaf on Thursday morning, Sept. 14. Each year shows an increasing attendance at the school, so great in recent years that the existing facilities have been greatly taxed to care for them. With the addition of new dormitories now under construction, this condition will be cared for by next year. Last year's enrolment of children who attended school from all over Canada was three-hundred and fifty-eight

Chas. R. Tilbrook Shop Has Most Modern Equipment

When one sees a man, woman or child going about with limping, one instinctively looks at their feet. And-not without reason, for in instances one notes that the individual is wearing a new pair of shoes. There is nothing that makes a person more uncomfortable, makes them more irritable than shoes that because they invariably cramp the feet until they tend to the shape of the foot.

Chas. Tilbrook Shoe Rebuilding Shop, of 393 Front street, Belleville, is an establishment that keeps in touch with the community in good spirits, because it enables the people to obtain new or those with a small amount of wear from a pair of old shoes. Shoes that are repaired here are returned stylish in appearance, serviceable in quality and reasonable in price.

The owner and manager of the firm understands that conditions are a good job of shoe repairing. For instance, Mr. Tilbrook knows the qualities of leather and sees that only the best grades are used. He knows the process of sewing soles so that it will be snappy in appearance and durable to boot.

A good pair of shoes represent a fairly large investment and will in most cases outwear two or three pairs of poor. The advantage of having them soled and heeled represents a savings of no small account. Besides, it is practically repaired at this shop—they look equally as good as new and are infinitely more comfortable. In all cases where shoes are repaired there is both efficient and economic. No effort or expense is spared by the management in equipping the place with the latest machinery and other equipment to enable them to do a first class job in the shortest possible time and at the minimum in expense.

Mr. Chas. R. Tilbrook, the owner and manager of The Belleville Shoe Hospital, has had years of experience and is on high standing in this section. The firm has been established for a number of years and during this time has profited by the lessons of hard knocks. Do you know their charges for full soles and heels?

The Setting of a Diamond

IN other times, when metal was present merely for the mechanical purpose of holding a stone in position, it was rightly rendered as unnoticeable as possible. In these days however, beautiful mountings of platinum, or of gold in its various forms, add their quota to the natural charm of the gem.

The settings, as well as the jewels themselves, of jewelry purchased at McPEEK, bear the support of the 'Guarantee of Quality'.

Kiwanis Hosts to Entertainers

Club Gives $10 Gold Door Prize For Karnival

At their regular weekly luncheon Tuesday noon members of the Kiwanis Club of this city had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Hemsworth, Miss Jean Hemsworth and her dancing partner, Mr. Harold Gallop who delighted those in attendance at the Armouries Monday evening. Miss Hemsworth and Mr. Gallop are again appearing at this evening's Fashion Show at the Karnival giving the same number that so captivated the audience at the great Fashion Show at the recent Canadian National Exhibition.

Tuesday's after-luncheon meeting of the Club was given over to discussion and plans were formulated regarding the Karnival. It was decided that a $10 gold piece will be given as a door prize this evening and Monday night's tickets will also be given with the issue of the evening's admission. A most interesting announcement will be made at the meeting tonight, requiring a valuable prize to be given Wednesday evening when a big show is to be staged.

With the Toronto Kiddies to entertain Thursday and Friday evenings, and the big wrestling events Saturday night to complete the Kiwanis Club of Belleville are providing four excellent shows as well as the closing night of the Karnival show this evening.

PREVENTION IN LAW FIELD

Wise Lawyer Keeps His Clients From Costly Litigation

"Preventive Law" was the subject of an interesting address before Belleville Rotary Club Monday by Gordon D. Conant, K.C., Oshawa, past President of Oshawa Rotary Club. Preventing expensive litigation by just as expensive but preventive medicine said the speaker, and the lawyer who can keep his clients out of the courts and save them from expensive and useless litigation is doing his duty to his client and the state in a manner deserving of all commendation. The lawyer should be the business adviser and confidante and no important undertaking should be entered without being carefully gone into and discussed with a lawyer.

People who buy a ten cent form and make their own will are also almost invariably make trouble for their heirs—for the most important things to leave behind when one leaves the earth. It is the property left in mistakes by carefully drawn wills which leave the most work for the lawyer. Drawing up a will is not to court to be interpreted, and named an eminently capable lawyer, specialist in wills, who made his own will and died, and the will had to be interpreted by the courts. Knowing that when a great lawyer fails to draw successfully a simple will, what chance has a layman to keep his heirs out of litigation by home made wills.

Criminal law was discussed by the speaker who said that lawyers have more trouble over the things their clients say when first placed under arrest than in conducting the entire case afterward. Have nothing to say until you see a lawyer, and save trouble. Everyone placed under arrest is entitled to have a lawyer, and the best procedure when questioned is to insist upon seeing a lawyer before making any statement whatever.

Sale of goods, leases, land transaction, etc., were discussed by Mr. Conant who stressed the advisability of having everything legal and thus avoiding possible future litigation and endless trouble. No transaction is legal unless in writing, and there are many pitfalls for the unwary who undertake to be their own lawyer, the drawing up and signing of a safe one is to consult your lawyer upon all transactions which depend upon their legality to be effective.

Mr. Conant's address was very interesting and instructive and was interspersed with amusing stories which gratified the points he wished to bring out.

Milk Probe Ordered By Winnipeg Council

Winnipeg, Sept. 12.—(CP)—An investigation into the milk situation in Winnipeg has been ordered by the City Council.

A committee of Aldermen was named unanimously yesterday on motion of the Municipal and Public Utility Board in fixing a definite schedule of prices for milk without any allowance for spread.

Recently the price of milk to the consumer was raised one cent a quart, leaving the door-to-door delivery 11 cents. Throughout the summer the price was 10 cents a quart.

WM. McEWAN PRES. Y'S MEN

Installation of New Officers of Club Take Place

Installation of the new officers elected at the termination of the last year's work was the chief order of business during the initial afternoon meeting of the local Y's Men's Club on Tuesday. The evening after the club members held enjoyed a two months holiday from their activities during which time, however, they saw the realization of many of the projects such as the boys' camp and other objections fulfilled that are always interesting in the hearts of all Y's Men.

Wm. McEwan, along with his newly elected staff of officers, was inducted into the office of President of the Belleville Y's Men's club last evening before practically a full following attendance. Fred Thompson, past president of the local branch of International Y's Men, was the installing officer of the evening and, after formally on the duties that befell the newly elected executive of Y's Men's Club. "Ordinarily the candidate seeks the office but, in the Y's Men's Club, the office seeks the candidate," pointed out Mr. Thompson following the swell out the four "Es" of Y'sdom, those four principles of International Y's Men's minds of all Y's Men namely — Ideals, Interest, Initiative and Industry.

In response President-elect "Bill" McEwan said: "I am glad to start his incoming executive, eloquently his predecessor, Dr. Ketcheson in the excellent manner in which he has done, and one of which the club. "Thanks to the officers of last semester we today have a splendid start with a balanced budget," stated the new president, "and already we have many fine projects that will be presented to the club this fall. President McEwan asked all for their hearty co-operation in the future as they had always given in the past. The new executive installed included — President, McEwan; Past President, F. Courtland Miller; Vice President, Earl Boyd; Secretary, Ed. Buchanan; Treasurer, Harry Dinsmore; Aler Ward, Harold Crowe and Bert Houston.

The retiring president for the fiscal year showed that the club's financial statement was more than their usual amount of membership. Among the contributions from Y's Men's International was $100 for the Y's Men's Camp —one for promptness and the other for holding a 100 percent meeting during the summer. The "Y" the World to the Y's" and Y's Men's International Convention in Providence, Mass., carried twice the number of Y's Men's Clubs as the most foremost Y's Men's Clubs in the country, a fact that is a tribution that brought distinction to the local organization.

Installation of officers President Court Miller conducted the initial meeting of the year, although no programme was presented. Aled. Gordon assumed the official duties at the piano. The chairman of the various committees to carry on the work of the club for the ensuing year were presented and approved of. They included first and foremost the district meeting that is scheduled to be held in Belleville this semester. This meeting will be the largest of Y's Men's gathering ever to be held in this city and Fred Thompson was unanimous choice as chairman for the all-important convention. The other chairmanships were—Finance, Harry Poste and Geo. Pauley; Entertainment, Mel Blanchard; Revenue, Court Miller; Boys' House Committee, Bert Houston; Programme, Alex Gordon; Advertising, Ken Colling; Membership, the executive committee as a whole.

Following the termination of the meeting a special executive meeting was held.

PAY MORE FOR GASOLINE NOW

N.R.A. Plan of President Roosevelt Is Given Credit

Local consumers are paying from one cent to a cent and a half more per gallon for gasoline today as the result of wage boosts under Roosevelt's National Recovery Act, and the increasing cost of the crude product in the field.

Whether or not, there will be a further rise in price remains to be seen. Those connected with the industry in this city are frank in their statements that it may. It is pointed out that the industry at present has not been stabilized and until some agreement is reached there may be further advances. Little hope of a reduction for several months is held out.

"Crude oil has doubled in price in the field," officials of the British American Company pointed out to day. Their product had gone up one and one-half cents per gallon of gasoline within the past few days.

"You can lay it all to the NRA," they explained. "Wage boosts and so on may send it higher yet."

The office of the Shell Oil Company an increase of one cent per gallon was announced. The rise in price at this office was explained as the outcome of a recent oil men's convention held in Chicago.

Cities Service Company also announced the one cent rise. Whether it will go higher remains to be seen, stated the office. "Every time the crude goes up oil and gas with ton," they said.

MONSTER FISH SEIZES BASS

Gerald Lynch Preserves Mutilated Bass As Proof

Mr. Gerald Lynch, Coleman street, ardent fisherman, is exhibiting cold storage proof this week of an epic struggle with a monster at Madoc Lake last Sunday. It's a one and one half pound black bass, badly clawed and almost bitten in two that had served as bait for another fish whose size and weight are still being talked of by himself, Geo. Lee and Frank Dotsonbro, who were in the boat with him. Casting for bass in the lake Mr. Lynch managed to hook a fair-sized fish who later commenced to reel in. When he had it almost to the boat there was a sudden flurry, and then the reel began to sing. A great slogging until over one hundred feet of line had been paid out. Twice the fish on the end of the line was seen almost to the boat, but each time he took a new tack away from it. On the third try the fishermen saw that the fish was now even hooked but was merely hanging on to the bass bait. This time the fish was almost brought to the boat, but a fling of the tail sent the larger one finally flickered its tail and disappeared into deep water. They still believe it was at least a forty pound hunge.

Less work for firemen is indicated by the announcement that fire hose can be made mildew-proof and moisture-repellant, when treated with radioactive salts.

HEAVY LOSS FROM FROST

Blanket of White Does Harm To Buckwheat Crop and Produce

Deadly, killing frost which made its appearance unheralded, awaking this central district in a snowy blanket late Monday night and early Tuesday morning brought thousands of dollars loss to farmers of the section and wrought untold damage to tender garden stuff in urban and rural plots. The frost followed a drop in temperature during the early morning to just 34 degrees above, two points above actual freezing, making it the lowest point reached for some time, and the cold-est morning of the present season. In the city householders awoke to find unsheltering plants and other stuff blackened and wilted. In the county every resident had a tale of his own regarding the unexpected visitation. Some farmers, however fearing the visit had started during the night Monday in order to save some of their more perishable crops.

James Eaton of North

From Huff's Island in Prince Edward County to Bancroft on the north, the same blight was evident. In the vicinity of Pontypool especially and farther north, the heavy grey blanket lay on the fields like snow. Farmers who were questioned on Tuesday had not yet calculated the damage, but were certain that it would assume considerable proportion.

Acres of buckwheat, still in flower from its late start, have been nipped and rendered useless for else except stock feed. Tender vines, fruits and roots also suffered.

In Prince Edward County, Mr. J. Hatfield, of Hatfield Island, declared the early stuff at front to be a bad one. Further frosts which are expected may not be so disastrous as gardeners and farmers have been working overtime garnering what they may.

On the front of Sidney, Mrs. L. Bradshaw, R.R. 1, Frankford, stated that considerable damage had been done in that district. "A few more like that one and there will be no gardens left," she added.

Blanket of Frost

James Wilson of Shannonville, on his way to Tuesday market saw evidences of the frosty touch all the way to Belleville. He noticed several gardens which appeared to be snowed under. "It was quite heavy down east," he said.

In Halloway, Mr. J. Nolan declared that buckwheat would be a heavy sufferer. A lot of melons would also be ruined on the vines. How heavy the damage was he had not yet learned. It would be necessary for the sun to come out before an estimate could be given.

Gardenville, west of this city, reported quite a heavy frost, according to Mr. A. D. Sine. In his own business, however, considerable damage was saved owing to the efforts of the family who worked late Monday night picking tomatoes and other perishable crops. The frost was expected by him.

Forboro gardens were "well cooked" in the opinion of Mr. D. Lafferman. Fields of buckwheat have been nipped and rendered useless. "Usually about the 10th. of September, however, we look for the frost, and this year we were not disappointed," he stated.

Even though the visitation was unexpected the majority of farmers who were questioned stated that it was not an unusually early one. Lulled to security by the recent warm weather, and caught unprepared by the lateness of the majority of crops, the visit was made only the more severe.

John Street W.M. Society

The Women's Missionary Society of John St. United Church began the Autumn activities by entertaining the President and members of the W.M.S. of John St. Church at the regular September meeting which was held on Friday, September 8th. at 8 p.m.

After the call to worship by the President, Mrs. A. F. Moore, Mrs. Ferguson conducted the devotional period. Her subject was "Loyalty to Our Church" and she chose for her Bible reading St. Matthew, chapter 16, 13-20 and the Hymn selected was "The Church's One Foundation is Jesus Christ the Lord."

A responsive service by Mrs. Moore and the members of the Society was read and a solo, "Thou Didst Leave Thy Throne and Thy Kingly Crown" was beautifully sung by Mrs. J. W. Kinnear. Reports were read by the treasurer and secretaries. Mrs. Smith read a letter from the Temperance Secretary of the Dominion Board, in which she warned the women that God had given this department to the W.M.S. for a purpose just at this time. The church has been fighting the liquor traffic from early days. During the war it was put down, but it has since risen, full of greater danger, for women have lost their fear of alcohol and even serve it in their homes, thereby putting temptation in the way of their innocent children. What are we going to do about it? The women of Canada must be roused to the danger.

Candid said to the women of India: "I am going to bequeath to you the closing of the saloons," and the women of India stood in the doors of saloons, praying and pleading in order to save that twenty-one saloons were closed in Delhi. Are we, the women of Canada, able to do as much for our country? It is our responsibility and we can do it if we will.

The liquor people are out to get what they can and will work to the utmost to gain their ends.

The temperance people must be united in their aim and plan an educational campaign, showing the effect of liquor, even in small quantities on the body and mind. Do we know the facts and figures that a host of our Canadian people will welcome the return of wine and beer by the glass. Every President of every W.M.S. and Mission Circle should get busy and see that literature is distributed which will give information to a vast army of the members of these societies so that each may be able to talk to the uninformed and influence women, and get "Temperance" weaned to the growth of the situation.

Mrs. H. A. Ross, Secretary of Finance and Christian Stewardship gave an interesting talk on the Stewardship of Thankfulness.

Ten lepers came to Jesus, full of faith that He could heal them and their faith was rewarded. Jesus healed them and told them to go and show themselves to the priest, which according to the law, they went, but only one returned to give thanks to Jesus. Are we like this example of thankfulness and unthankfulness.

We accept our blessings casually and forget to be thankful. Leprosy is a loathsome disease and it is wonderful to be rid of it, but the nine had nothing but ingratitude in Jesus for them. We feel very cross with these lepers but are we any more thankful than they for our blessings? Do we always return thanks for all God does for us?

A girl was asking how to pray. She was told to begin by saying "Thank you," for one thing; do not be continually asking but try once to see something to be thankful for."

We are told to be very grateful for present evil on his way rejoicing, but that does not mean that we may not show our gratitude by just singing and rejoicing, but we must prove that we are grateful by being willing to serve others and trying to cultivate a spirit of thankfulness.

Papers giving a short resume of the work done by the W.M.S. in foreign lands and the home land, were read by Miss Ida Jack and Mrs. Harry Hill.

Miss Jack gave a very pressing invitation to the visitors to join the Society.

Mrs. Moore cordially welcomed the President and members of the Y.W.A. and Mrs. Scannill, President of the Y.W.A. moved a vote of thanks to the President and members of the W.M.S. Mrs. Hunter seconded the motion.

After singing Hymn 240 the President closed the meeting with prayer.

All were invited to remain for refreshments and a social hour was enjoyed.

Ladies' Aid of Front Rd. Meets

The September meeting of Front Road Ladies' Aid was held on the regular day, first Thursday, afternoon of the month, at the home of Mrs. C. B. Lewis.

Eighteen ladies were present and a good start made towards a quilt from pieces contributed by each member, which when finished will be up for sale.

Afterwards a short meeting was held the President, Mrs. A. Bird, taking charge. After singing "What a friend we have in Jesus", the pastor Mr. Keough, who was also present, read the 34th Psalm and led in prayer, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison.

In the absence of the Secretary Miss Doris Reid, (who was attending the Toronto Exhibition), Mrs. T. J. Bevan read the minutes of last meeting and acted as secretary for the day.

Roll call was well responded to by a verse of Scripture. No keyword having been previously decided upon verses were chosen along all themes but it was decided the keyword for next month should be "love".

Plans were made for a pie social to be held in connection with the anniversary services of the church this fall. Rev. W. T. Keough, Mrs. H. Brewin and Mrs. W. Trevaskis were appointed a committee to make arrangements for same.

It is expected this year to make this event of more than ordinary interest being the sixtieth year since the building of the church.

Mrs. S. Anderson invited the Aid for the October meeting when work on the quilt will be resumed and the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

The hostess then served a dainty lunch assisted by Mrs. F. Purdy, Miss Aletha Reid, Miss Connie Anderson and Mrs. M. Hall.

PLAINFIELD W. I.

The Plainfield Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Raymond Sullivan on Thursday afternoon. Attendance was large, about forty being present as each member was asked to bring a friend. The meeting opened by the President, Mrs. H. Harrison with Community singing. Then the ode was sung and all repeated the Lord's Prayer.

Paper was read by Miss Mabel Hodgens and one by Mrs. Waller Hall and duet by Mrs. Willie Sills and Mrs. H. Harrison. A reading was given by Mrs. J. W. Hamilton. The main part was discussed concerning the building of a cupboard in the hall for dishes and silverware.

They discussed the cemetery question and appointed Mrs. E. Hodgens and Mrs. Sherman Parks to write to people who have relatives buried there for donations to improve the cemetery at Plainfield.

Dr. Welsh and Mrs. Welsh were guests at the meeting and Dr. Welsh gave a very inspiring address on "Health and Child Welfare".

He said how the Women's Institute could help in the work in looking after the health of the children in the school against contagious diseases and see that the drinking water is pure and everything in sanitary condition. He said in the death rate now heart disease took first place, cancer, accident, third. After the address a vote of thanks was given to the speaker and collection was taken.

A new press reporter was voted in as Miss Elsie Maynes is attending High School.

The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem, after which lunch was served by the ladies of the section and a social time was enjoyed.

MRS. WILLIAM HUCK

Following a lengthy illness Mrs. Florence Huck, beloved wife of William Huck of Point Anne, died on Tuesday evening, in the Gravenhurst Sanatarium. The deceased lived in Point Anne, 47 years ago, the daughter of the late Thomas Brophey and Mrs. Mary Brophey, and had lived there all her life. Mrs. Huck was a member of St. Michael's Church and the Catholic Women's League and was highly regarded by all who knew her. To the large family connection left to mourn her loss, is extended the sympathy of their many friends.

Surviving immediately are her husband and mother; two brothers, Thomas Brophey of Cleveland, Ohio and Michael Brophey of Rochester, N.Y.; and eight sisters, Mrs. Ivy. Michael Turney of Point Anne; Mrs. L. Bartlett in Rochester, N.Y.; Mrs. C. Hanger at Niagara Falls; Mrs. R. Bradshaw in Descronto and Mrs. Percy Harvey, Mrs. Sadie Dennis, Mrs. Harry Taylor and Mrs. Catherine Daley all of this city.

The funeral was brought by motor from Gravenhurst, today and will be resting at her late residence at Point Anne.

ENTERTAIN AT FAREWELL PARTY FOR G. MARTIN

West Huntingdon, Sept. 12 —It seems that lazy days are here, this not muggy weather seems to be on hand and heat, but however the flies seem to be enjoying it.

A large number of friends gathered at Mr. Herbert Burke's home on Wednesday evening to bid farewell to Mr. Geofrey Martin who intends to leave for England in a few days. Mr. Martin came here four years ago and has been in the employee of Mr. Burke continuously, judging by those present on this occasion (left as he is called by his chums) has won a host friends who are indeed sorry to see his leave. On being called in he was presented with a Rolls safety razor and brush. Mr. B. Mills read the address and the presentation was made by Mr. A. Brough. A number of the gentlemen present made suitable speeches. Mr. Martin's brothers, Messrs. Frank Palmer and Arthur Brough.

Mr. G. McGowan's many friends will be pleased to learn that he is now to enjoy life to the full. He can get about and even intends to leave for Detroit. At present he is visiting his brother-in-law, Kenneth Richford.

Mr. Walter Cerow of Belleville spent Tuesday with Mr. Sandy McCurdy.

Mr. William McMechan Sr. and Mrs. Mary Ann Ellis, Miss Margaret McMechan spent Thursday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Perry.

Mrs. Richard Haggerty spent a few days recently with Mrs. Sandy McCurdy.

Mrs. J. McGee of Ridge Road is visiting her daughter, at Detroit.

Mrs. Jas. S. Wilson entertained the Women's Association of United Church for their September meeting on Thursday. There was a good attendance present, with some visitors.

Mrs. Foster Wilson and sons also Mr. and Mrs. Wilson spent Friday with Mrs. M. Reid.

This is the season of year for annual church anniversaries. Rev. Mr. Mills has been quite busy of late in arranging those services for this circuit, and assures the plans are nearly complete.

INJURED IN FALL DOWN CELLAR STEPS

Moira, Sept. 12—Mrs. Fred Kellar suffered the misfortune of falling down the cellar steps last Monday evening. Dr. Wallbridge was immediately summoned and gave Mrs. Ketcheson a thorough examination and found to the relief of all that no bones were broken. She is confined to her bed and is suffering somewhat by the extent of her fall. All hope for a speedy recovery.

Miss Bertha Emerson has returned to her home after spending a few weeks holiday near Cobourg where she took in the exhibition.

Miss Laura Post R.N., of Belleville spent Sunday afternoon under the parental roof and also called on a few of the neighbors.

Mrs. Lottie Vandervaeter and son Elmo were callers in the neighborhood again this week.

Mr. M. Trassell has undertaken to dismantle some of his buildings and intends to build a garage of smaller dimension than the one which all have been accustomed to seeing. Mr. and Mrs. Trassell deserve credit for the improvements made since they have been living their sojourn in this community.

SPAIN IN NEW POLITICAL UPSET

ALEJANDRO LERROUX

MANUEL AZANA

Spain has been plunged into a new political crisis, following the resignation of the cabinet headed by Premier Manuel Azana, left, as a result of the elections for the Cortes, or parliament of constitutional guarantees. In result of the elections for the Cortes, or parliament of constitutional guarantees. In which the radical party won an overwhelming majority. The resignation was handed to President Zamora, who is expected to appoint Alejandro Lerroux, radical leader, to succeed Azana.

Mrs. Stanley, sister of the late Mrs. J. L. Herlihy and now a resident of Texas is spending a few days with relatives here.

Mrs. Arthur Bailey of Plainfield is visiting with her sister, Miss Jay Herlihy.

Mrs. D. Thompson has returned from a visit to Toronto.

Mr. J. F. Herlihy spent Wednesday at Pinkney viewing the ruins of the fire which occurred Tuesday morning. Mr. Herlihy kindly offered how to sympathize with others in a case of this kind, since he had a replica of the same thing a short time ago.

SEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT AID

Aid In Labor and Material Costs Requested By Municipalities

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—(CP)— A resolution urging the provincial and Dominion governments to contribute 75 per cent of the direct relief costs and contribute 75 per cent of the cost of materials used on unemployment relief undertakings was passed unanimously by the Ontario Municipal Association, meeting here today.

Framing of the resolution was the first important step taken by the association comprising mayors from approximately 15 Ontario centres, which opened its session here today.

Later today the mayors will interview Premier George S. Henry and present the resolution to him.

Heated debate preceded the passing of the motion, the cost of which a large bloc of the organization urged the government be asked to increase their share of direct relief to 100 percent.

Belleville was not represented at the Emergency Municipal Association meeting.

ALL-BRAN RELIEVED HIS CONSTIPATION

Delicious Cereal Brought New Health to Mr. Bartholomew

"I spoke from his voluntary letter: "I had considerable trouble with my stomach. Digestion was out of order. I got medicine which gave me only temporary relief.

"Then I thought of taking ALL-BRAN. I started eating a cereal dish full two or three times a day.

"It has been over a year now since I ate that first dish of bran, but in that time to this I have had the pleasure of enjoying the proper functioning of the digestive organs.

"Thanks to ALL-BRAN. I still eat it regularly and like it better all the time." Name, Mr. Bartholomew (Address furnished upon request.)

Constipation is usually due to lack of "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to promote elimination. ALL-BRAN supplies both, as well as iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetables. Certainly this food is more natural than taking artificial patent medicines. Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation. With each meal in chronic cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

PSYCHIATRY IN MEDICINE

Probably a majority of all cases coming to the average physician's attention are complicated by mental difficulties of one kind or another. Yet the medical profession at present is not properly equipped to provide psychiatric treatment, and few medical schools are remedying this lack adequately in the next generation of medical men.

These are the conclusions of Dr. Ralph A. Noble, clinical professor of psychiatry at Yale University, who with Dr. Franklin G. Ebaugh, director of the Colorado Psychopathic Hospital, has just completed a two-year study of psychiatry in medical education for the National Committee for Mental Hygiene.

The future of the medical profession in general to take up this important branch of healing has led to the invasion of psychiatric fields by quacks, amateur "psychologists" and others lacking in fundamental medical training, says Dr. Noble. Plausible fellows with a smattering of psychology or a little training in a clinic have been able to establish themselves as healers in many sections, and even to testify in court as experts in mental disease.

"The National Committee's survey will be continued under the direction of Dr. Ebaugh, and the Committee will assume leadership in a movement to eliminate charlatans on the one hand, and improve psychiatric education in medical schools on the other, in order that future practitioners will be equipped to consider the patient's mental state as well as his physical difficulties.

The survey has already begun to bear fruit. Preceding the publication of Dr. Noble's report, but after its contents had been given to the National Committee, the American Psychiatric Association took preliminary steps in curbing quackery by establishing an examining board to pass on the qualifications of self-styled "alienists" and private practitioners in the treatment of nervous diseases who are without proper training and institutional experience.

These persons will have to obtain a diploma in "psychiatry" upon recommendation of the examining board, or cease practising.

"Psychiatry suffers considerably in America," said Dr. James V. May, commissioner of mental diseases in Massachusetts and president of the American Psychiatric Association, in announcing the association's action "because of the fact that there are no higher degrees or diplomas on this subject as there are in other branches of medicine.

"It has been possible for men without a thorough training or special examination to obtain a superficial knowledge of psychiatry, either in a mental hospital or psychiatric clinic, and to have their names published in the directory of the American Medical Association as specialists in psychiatry."

KING FEISAL

"Various circumstances combined to make Feisal Emir and later King, one of the most picturesque figures emerging out of the World War," says the New York Times. "Chief of these is the fact that the war as fought on land had for the most part neither movement nor color. It was a prolonged and hideous adventure in methodical slaughter—the technical word was "attrition"—between deadlocked armies in a setting of mud and mud. Compared with this war of the trenches the Revolt in the Desert as depicted by Colonel Lawrence, shows the older panoply of war, armies marching and riding out to outflanking, and particularly armies of horsemen with banners. It is hard to say how much of the glowing picture is reality and how much is the evocative genius of Lawrence, scholar and poet turned politician and guerrilla chieftain. But the magic of his pen was reinforced by the friendship of the two men, in the great tradition of David and Jonathan.

Because Feisal, son of the Sheriff of Mecca and descendant of Fatima, daughter of the Caliph, lost no time in taking up arms against Turkey in 1914, he was destined for the favor of the victorious Allies. It did not come without stint, but perhaps as fully as might have been expected in a war, settlement of so many disappointments. Feisal's father became King of the Hejaz. His younger brother Abdullah became King of Transjordania. The father lost his kingdom to Ibn Saud of the invading Wahabis, and Feisal himself was King in Damascus for only a few months. But in 1921 he received compensation in the crown of Iraq.

To the world at large the political and military troubles of the last few months in Iraqi, followed by Feisal's sudden death, mark a reversal of fortune such as the Oriental story-tellers are fond of. The progress of Iraq from a mandated territory to independence and membership in the League of Nations was rapid. The ugly affair of the Assyrian massacres would indicate that Iraq has not escaped the lurch into exacerbated nationalism that many bigger countries than Mesopotamia have experienced.

CENTURY OF PROGRESS

Steamboat, iron plow, cotton gin,
These the marvels men might see
When this century came in,
Back in eighteen-thirty-three.

With a great ox for a steed
And a water-mill for power,
Little thought had men of speed,
Cruel demon, splendid dower.

But this century has brought
Magic gifts to you and me;
Tasks, undreamed of once, are wrought
Now, in nineteen-thirty-three!

In Chicago, at the fair,
We are shown a world made new;
All Aladdin's dreams are there,
Brighter, that they have come true!

Boundless realms swing wide their doors,
Lord of electricity,
Man to newer marvels soars
Still, in nineteen-thirty-three!

FISH STORIES have been large, wide and handsome this season, indicating that the keen sport is enjoyed by lovers of the piscatorial art in Bay of Quinte waters. One noticeable variation this season in the fish stories is the fact that "the fish that got away" is relegated to the background and the fish that didn't get away takes its place in the spotlight. Many fine catches have been made and photographed and proudly shown and "the fish that got away" just has no place in the picture at all. Perhaps the queerest story of the season is that of Mr. Sam Springer, of the Artistic Ladies' Wear, Front Street, Belleville, who was fishing Rideau water near Westport with friends when a large sized black bass jumped into the boat, and that fish did not get away either.

THE CALF WITH A COUGH, the horse with the Blind Staggers, and the Blind Mare of Guelph Aggie, and into the background alongside "The Hen which came to town." Down the Kingston Road, a short distance east of Belleville, lives a farmer named Lee Purdy. Mr. Purdy keeps hens and the hens help to keep him. The other evening he got out his trusty flivver, and came to town to see a show. When he was returning he stopped opposite the City Hall to speak to a friend, and was surprised when the friend asked him why he was giving the hens a ride. The reason for the remark was made plain when Mr. Purdy looked under the car and found the hen sitting on the front axle of the car, and there the hen stayed until home was reached again that night. Mr. Purdy has an idea of trying out that hen on the radiator as an ornament, being she is so fond of riding.

NOISE, THE CLAMOR OF THE CITY, driving nervous folk out into the great open spaces—the motor age—the careless motorist who squawks the horn on every and all occasions, at the slightest provocation. Squawks the horn when parked on Front Street, just to attract the attention of some acquaintance passing, incidentally making some innocent passerby jump from his self nerves jingling which should not have been disturbed. Squawks the horn at the traffic light when some car is ahead waiting for the red to pass. Modern noise is making nervous wrecks out of many forced to endure the strident clamor of city life, and most of it is unnecessary. Motormen should be instructed into what constitutes a breach of the peace, including shattering the peaceful evening quiet with unnecessary blasts of a motor car horn, or daytime either. Life is becoming a bit difficult, what with express trains rocketing across the land at a speed of over a mile a minute—one minute they are a mile away, in less than a minute they are shooting hundreds of tons of steel right past your nose if you are lucky enough to keep your nose off the track—airplanes which flash through the heavens at two miles and more a minute—motorcars built to do seventy miles and more an hour—motorcycles which make a lot of noise and add to the casualty list—speed boats flying through the water at a speed of over eighty miles an hour—monoxide gas, frightful noises and all the other modern menaces which make life just one long and vivid chapter of "the Quick and the Dead"—the dead being those not quick enough—and it only seems yesterday when the early bird milkman used to take a nap in his wagon while the horse found his way homeward, occasionally stopping for a bite of fresh grass by the roadside—used to be a man could go to sleep in his buckboard and let the horse find the way—no one tries it now—and 50 you've got to be quick or probably you'll be dead—but let's cut out a lot of the unnecessary noise and give the nerves a chance.

REASON WHY STIMULANTS ARE CRAVED

Man Is So Constituted Little Daily Pepping Up Necessary

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc., World rights reserved.)

As regards the craving for stimulants, two classes of persons exist: those who must needs have them in order to maintain their even sense of well-being, and those who can do without them in every form, and still feel satisfied.

For men and women exist, however, who do not crave stimulants.

It may only be the morning cup of coffee, or the afternoon cup of tea; it need not be whiskey before breakfast or the daily dose of a narcotic. Yet we are so constituted that a little daily pepping-up, mild or strong, is almost universally necessary if we are to feel at our best.

Whether certain kinds to stimulants should be considered as such or not is beside the question here.

What modern science has shown is that the nervous and glandular systems are so constituted that they sometimes seem to slow down. This gives us sensations of depression, malaise, "the blues" and even ambition. It is at such times, especially, that—to borrow an expression from that noted stage comedian, Joe Cook—we have a "builder-upper" is desirable.

Fatigue products, or various kinds probably accumulate in the muscles, nerves and other tissues of the body. Such a condition is less manner a stimulant helps to eliminate them, partially or wholly, of course, make the blood flow faster and thereby speed activity. Direct action on kidney, skin and even lung elimination can often also be noted.

A stimulant, therefore, is a kind of furnace-cleaning process. It aids in removing the accumulated cinders and ashes, it allows the life again to burn brightly, so it can supply more heat and energy.

It must be remembered, however, that although stimulants process as a rule, beneficial effects when taken in small doses, the effects are permicious if large or excess doses.

Particularly is this true in the case of alcohol. One cocktail may remove fatigue, promote appetite, and make the world seem rosy again. On the other hand, a half dozen such brazen actually a tonic lead to paralysis of the nerves and a retardation of all physiological functions—a state that is frequently termed "dead drunk."

Not only should every individual be careful about the amount of stimulant he uses, but he must also watch the factor of habit. For, whereas one cocktail may suffice to produce desirable results for a few months, a daily habit soon loses its "kick" quality, and more alcohol then is needed for the same effect.

The daily use of coffee and tea does not seem to make persons want to drink more and more, but with alcohol this tendency is a real danger.

No person should be ashamed that he feels the need of a stimulant now and then, nor should he deny himself the relaxation that goes with its proper use. But moderation should be practiced—in plain common sense. Then one can indulge in almost any stimulant now and then, except a narcotic drug, and obtain real benefit from its use.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Persons inclined to obesity need not refrain from drinking beer if they enjoy it. Beer should, however, be considered a food with a fairly high caloric value. Therefore, if you would drink beer and not gain in weight, reduce somewhat the food intake at regular meals, especially the carbohydrates (starches and sugars).

Rum Runners, Falling on Evil Days, Turn to Smuggling Watches, Perfume

Detroit River's Whiskey Trade Drops Off, But Beer Continues To Trickle Through Along With Other Contraband

A bigger ready to dash for the American shore with contraband

Birdseye view of Detroit River

By BONITA WITT
Central Press Canadian Writer

Detroit, Sept. 9 — The old river isn't what she used to be!

What river? The Detroit river, of course, the favored locale of big-time bootleggers, who found its narrowness very convenient in their business. In fact it is no trick at all for a husky gentleman to row a cargo of wet goods from Canada to Uncle Sam's shores.

From Col. Heinrich A. Pickert, collector of customs of the port of Detroit, comes word of the sad days which have fallen upon the river (from the bootlegger's viewpoint). "All of the big-shot rum runners in the Detroit area are either behind bars, dead, in retirement, or broke," he declares. "There is activity on the river, naturally, but it's smuggling of commodities other than liquor. Our own 3.2 beer is so good that the market for Canadian beer has collapsed. We drove hard liquor smugglers from the river long ago, our customs border patrol made it too tough for them to operate.

From Liquor to Perfume

"Just now there is considerable smuggling of watch movements because there is a duty varying from 40 to 82 per cent. on them. A person can easily conceal a pocket containing $3,500 worth of watch movements in his clothing and pass casual inspection. French perfumes, because some of the better brands bring a little more than $4 over there and $15 in the United States, frequently are smuggled.

"We are going to have to be doubly watchful of smuggling as employment increases in the United States. As soon as the people get money, they are in a position to buy, then the smugglers get busy."

All the smuggling of the river isn't between Canada and the United States, there also is a big traffic in the reverse direction. From their posts along the river, U.S. border patrol men see boats occupied by known smugglers streaking for the Canadian shore, with alcohol, cigarettes and other articles which are very operative in the Dominion.

Now let's return to beer!

True, the river has changed, the nightly gun battles between rum "monkeys" and border patrolmen disturb the sleep of Detroiters no more, at least not nearly so frequently. But, river men maintain, thirsty Americans still like Canadian beer. They like Canadian whiskey, too, but they don't have the money to pay the smuggler's price for it, whereas beer is within reach of their purses. Most of the beer run across the river is of the 3.2 variety but, every once in a while, the customs border patrol uncovers a load of the 8 or 9 per cent. variety. Duty on Canadian beer is $2.17 per case.

Long hours the men of the customs border patrol lay in wait on the inky river, sometimes concealed in mosquito infested marshes, to catch the rum runners who are far more cautious in picking their landings places than in the day when well organized fleets could decoy patrolmen. To-day, according to river authorities and in the face of Colonel Pickert's statement, approximately 600 cases of beer a week come across the river. In former days when money was plentiful, a thousand cases a night was not unusual.

This writer recalls seeing boats leave the Ambersburg, Ont., docks, a few years ago, in midafternoon, just as fast as they could be loaded, and return shortly thereafter for another cargo.

Whiskey Seizures

Whiskey seizures are infrequent, perhaps one-tenth of what they used to be. "The demand is still there," border men say, "but the purchase price is lacking—and, furthermore, most of the big operators are out of business."

Ecorse, not far from Detroit, once was a bootleggers' paradise. Any time of the day or night boat wells and docks were filled with toughlooking rowboats, waiting for incoming liquor boats. Now Ecorse is almost as quiet as the proverbial tomb.

In the slip at the customs border patrol base the casual observer may see for himself the efficiency of the outfit. There are some secret operative speedboats, a racing yacht which has won several sailing cups, cigarette-looking rowboats with tanks built along their keels, large enough to hold a dozen or more cases of beer. All of these boats are sold at auctions held periodically at the base.

Contraband Fish

There's a huge deep sea scow anchored in the slip which tells the story of another side of the life of a customs border patrolman. He doesn't spend all of his time apprehending liquor boats, he rescues many persons, saves boats in distress and safeguards the diet of Americans from inferior products. This particular scow, captured on Christmas day, last year, was loaded with 32 tons of wormy fish! Had the operator succeeded in slipping through the patrol he would have smoked the fish, thus concealing the worms and smoked-fish lovers would have consumed them!

Horrible thought!!

From fish we progress sweet smelling contraband.

One murky night a customs boat slid into the dock at the base and one of the occupants called out, "We've got a big load!"

"Load of what? Liquor?" sang out the patrolman on the dock.

"Naw, face powder," came back the surprising answer.

Here are some of the U.S. patrol boats the smuggler has to evade if he hopes to land his cargo on American shores

Sleeping Beauty Remains An Enigma to Scientists After 19 Months in Coma

Victim of "Sleeping Sickness" Shows No Sign of Regaining Consciousness, Despite Constant Efforts of Doctors

PATRICIA MAGUIRE

By BRUCE GRANT
Central Press Canadian Writer

Oak Park, Ill., Sept. 9—Patricia Maguire, young "sleeping sickness" victim of Oak Park, is entering the nineteenth month of her long coma wholly unaware of the long list of victims who have recently succumbed to this strange malady in St. Louis, New York and other cities.

For, since she sank into her "sleep" on February 24, 1922, no trick has never once been conscious. She has proved an enigma to medical men and scientists throughout the country and unfortunately enough is believed to be holder of the record for "unbroken "sleep."

Thrives on Malady

Too, she apparently has thrived on this queer malady. She has gained weight, her cheeks are rosy and one of the few manifestations of life is a smile now and then.

Almost a legend has been built up around this "sleeping beauty" of Chicago's suburb. As many as 50 fan-mail letters come in a day, people visit the home every hour of so and inquire about "Pat," and there is even said to be a "priest" waiting for his sleeping "princess" to awake that they may go through with the wedding planned nearly two years ago.

Notwithstanding her lengthy sleep, Patricia has been more fortunate than many others who have contracted "sleeping sickness," Dr. Karl A. Meyer, chief surgeon at the Cook county hospital, says that the more recent victims are apparently suffering from the same malady as Miss Maguire—and adds that it has been increasing alarmingly for the past two years.

"In the opinion of many the disease is in reality the aftermath of influenza," he says. "It is a respiratory infection of the same type. The extraordinary long sleep of Miss Maguire makes her case unusually interesting, but it must be remembered that this disease is no longer rare."

Premonition?

It has just been learned that when Patricia consulted her doctor a few days before going overcome by the disease she asked:

"Am I going to have that sleeping sickness I've been reading about?"

This was about Feb. 15, 1922, when she first began to feel drowsy. Her eyelids became heavy and she could hardly keep awake as she worked as a secretary for the Chicago office of a national magazine. Her sister, Mrs. Gladys Hansen, even thought her about to faint on the elevated. She had been in a sound sleep on the train. It was then that she managed to stagger home and went to bed and into her long sleep.

Many Remedies Tried

Dr. Eugene F. Traut identified the disease as encephalitis lethargica, or the abnormal sleeping sickness. He is still the physician in the case and has not yet given up hopes of bringing her out of her coma. At one time he sought to isolate the germ in her blood, made a serum of it. This was injected several times, but without effect.

Many other remedies have been tried—but Patricia sleeps on. They have tried the ultra-violet ray lamp. The girl's step-father, Peter Miley, has given his blood three times for transfusions. Just last month the girl was given typhoid inoculations in an attempt to create a high fever and "burn" out the infection. She has even undergone an operation to remove a portion of her injection broken off in her spine. Still she sleeps.

Last February, almost on the anniversary of her sleeping spell, she contracted double pneumonia. At that time a radio station (KYW) sent out a broadcast for an oxygen tent but when Dr. Meyer's permit was responded. The oxygen tent was used, but failed. Its help in pneumonia is hoped it might help about her sleeping spell.

She survived the pneumonia attack. And it was said that she was able to do this because of her extremely wonderful physical condition. She had gained 22 pounds since she fell asleep!

Two Birthdays Asleep

At the time she went into her slumber she was 26. She is now 28 and has unconsciously lived through two birthdays. A nurse who attended her has married during her time and now has a baby.

In the brown stone house at 523 South Clarence avenue, Oak Park, Patricia's mother, Mrs. Miley, and her sister, Mrs. Hanson, are in constant attendance. The girl's position in bed is changed every two hours. She is given a sponge bath every day. Her limbs are massaged each day, too, to keep them from deteriorating.

Patricia has her regular food. Before they fed her with tubes through her nose. Now they are able to feed her with a spoon. She has strained soup, a glass of milk and cream, an egg-nog and orange juice.

Responds to Name

She lies there just as she is placed, and sometimes there is a flicker of the eyelids, a ground of smile—and infrequently mumbled words which are incoherent to her listeners. Even at times, Mrs. Miley says, it seems that she responds by a smile or a flutter of her eyelids to her name.

"For a time I was glad she was asleep," her sister remarks. "During a whole year I thought how nice it would have been for everyone to have been asleep — times were so terrible. But now we wish she would awake — times are becoming good again. And every day we believe she will."

Glacier Priest Defies Death Wind In Daring Arctic Mountain Climb

Flung Back By Gale Three Times—Twenty-one Hour Climb In Teeth of Hurricane Conquers Volcanic Mountain

Father Bernard Hubbard, S.J., scientist and explorer, at the base of Mount Shishaldin's icy cone, taking a brief rest before attempting the last stage of the assault. It was climbing this glaciated cone against a 100-mile hurricane that members of the party almost lost their lives.

By PERCY C. RICHARDS
Central Press Canadian Writer

Victoria, Sept. 9—Another daring expedition to the Aleutian Islands has been completed by Father Bernard Hubbard, S.J., scientist and explorer, and his party, comprising Roderick Chisholm, University of San Francisco professor; Edgar Lewis, Stanford University student; and George Petersen, Alaskan guide.

Father Hubbard has returned to his Victoria base with a wealth of scientific data, hundreds of photographs, thousands of feet of motion picture film and stories galore of adventure.

"There will be no major eruption in the Aleutian rift for the next five or seven years," the scientist announced on his arrival here. "The volcanoes are in quiet eruption, but have not reached the building-up stage. There will not be such an eruption as tore mighty Aniakchak wide open two years ago, for some time to come," he declared.

This prediction is based on findings he made after testing the floor of Mount Shishaldin's vast crater, but to make those tests provided Father Hubbard and his party with an adventure they will never forget.

Three times they assaulted Mount Shishaldin in the face of a 100-mile hurricane, and three times they were flung back to the base by the sheer force of the elements.

Tired of waiting for an opportune time, the priest got stubborn and determined he would not be licked. Members of his party were bulleted about, torn from their man-made foot-holds in the ice. The dogs were lifted bodily along the snow. Yells pierced the air as one member shrieked for aid as he was torn from his perilous hold. The story of the climb is replete with tales of ground gained and lost. For twenty one hours the party fought a 100-mile wind to cover the 5,000 feet to the edge of the crater.

Eventually they won their way to the top, their faces frost-bitten, icicles hanging from their hair, and generally looking like a lot of Santa Clauses.

"It was so tragic it was funny," Father Hubbard declared, and then proceeded to recount of the descent in which the party got separated when dense banks of fog settled over the mountain.

"The fog was so thick we could not see twenty feet ahead," Father Hubbard said. "Cries grew fainter until they no longer were heard. We were lost, separated.

"Magerik," the priest's favorite dog, "kept heading to the right, but I thought he was just after game. He can scent a bear track in the snow. But Magerik was right. If we had stayed by him from the start we would not have been separated."

Realizing his mistake, Father Hubbard followed the dog, which led him below the fog banks and out on to a glacier. The priest headed for a landmark, and there he was joined by Chisholm and Lewis. Joining themselves with ropes, they trekked back to the camp over the mass of ice crevasses. Petersen had failed to return, but twelve hours later he walked into camp exhausted. A huge fire had been lit to guide him toward the spot.

On this, his sixth, expedition, Father Hubbard excavated several prehistoric villages on Unimak Island and several other islands in the Aleutian group. He uncovered many stone weapons and domestic utensils, proving conclusively the existence of a stone-age civilization along the Aleutian rift.

He also discovered a war cave, where warriors during the stone-age kept their armaments. Here, he found hundreds of relics, such as wooden armor, spears, war masks, canoe paddles and other implements.

Weddings

BAKER—BOWER

Wingham, Sept. 12.—(Special)—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bower was the scene of a pretty wedding, when their youngest daughter, Georgina Margaret, became the bride of James L. Baker of Belleville, son of Mrs. and the late James Baker of Toronto. The wedding ceremony was conducted in the drawing room by the Rev. L. H. Currie, pastor of the United Church, Wingham. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace, and carried a shower bouquet of Sunburst roses and lily-of-the-valley. Following the ceremony a wedding luncheon was served. Mr. and Mrs. Baker left by motor for Eastern Ontario points, the bride travelling in a suit of grey tweed, trimmed in black, and other accessories to harmonize. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

Madame Hale Miller at Style Show Again Tonight

One of the best Style Shows ever staged in Belleville was the general consensus of opinion of those who attended last night's Style Revue in charge of Madame Hale Miller, and tonight's show should even surpass the first effort. Madame Miller will again be in her place on the stage and her running comments on present day style tendencies, as well as the garments shown, puts much interest in the show. Jean Hemsworth and Harold Will again feature their graceful dances. They warmed themselves into the hearts of the crowds last night and promise a more extended program tonight. This year the Karnival committee are making the door prizes really worth while and they will be drawn for every other night. The Grand Drawing takes place tonight for Monday and Tuesday's door prize ticket. The prize to be given is a Silver Tea Set valued at $27.50. The slogan tonight should be "On to the Armouries", it is warmer there than it is in your own home.

Kiwanis Karnival Opens with Bang, Entertainment and Style Show Please Crowds

Novelties And New Arrangements of 1933 Edition

DESCRIPTION

The Kiwanis Karnival and Style Show, 1933 edition, formally opened by His Worship, Mayor Tice, last evening, was greeted by a large and enthusiastic audience eager to discover the style secrets of the new season and to find entertainment in the many phases of Kiwanis Karnival.

The feature of the Style Show this year is the presence of Madame Hale Miller, famous stylist, who has come to Belleville direct from the Canadian National Exhibition, where she arranged the Fashion Show there. Mme. Miller in a scintillating style talk described the beautiful gowns and accessories worn last evening and her amusing as well as instructive remarks kept the audience chuckling.

Sensation in Costume

After Mayor Tice, in a happy little speech, declared the Karnival open, Mr. Jack McIntosh on behalf of the Kiwanis Club introduced Madame Miller, who made a sensation in her costume of a pale green satin evening gown finished with a train and her wide black velvet hat adorned with a sweeping plume. This she explained was the new Mae West fashion idea which she has worked in every style presentation.

Against a beautiful background of rainbow drapes, with luxurious living room appointments the Style Show of the evening began. It was prefaced by a smart tap dance by Jean Hemsworth and Harold Will, after whom many Belleville people saw at the Toronto Exhibition. Jean, who delighted audiences here several years ago, showed a marked step in the daintiest little dancer imaginable, and with her handsome partner made an instant hit with the audience. At the close of the Style Show Jean and Harold did a ballroom dance number. Jean in a shimmering sterling frock of white satin with cerise velvet bows and Harold in the conventional tux, completed a number which brought steps with grace and charm. The Concert Band supplied the music for the Style Show and for the dancing later in the evening.

Style Show

The much anticipated event, the Style Show, proved delightful last evening. Gowns, hats and other dinner garments were shown by the J. A. McNabb Co., Kroch Bros. and Watkins, Limited, while Mrs. Bird and Miss Gladys Emerson modelled for the J. A. McNabb Co. Miss Marjorie Lehman, Miss Rose Samuels and Miss Connie Tilbrook for Kroch Bros., and Miss Gwendolyn Ray, Miss Helen Kiser and Mrs. J. Kerr for Watkins.

Mme. Miller's assistant, Mr. Vincent, was most efficient in arrangements back stage.

Variety of Garb

Each firm showed sports, afternoon and evening dresses, suits and coats and no apposition was there costume that the audience was dazzled with loveliness of the Fall and Winter mode. The smart knitted suits and fine wool costumes without which a wardrobe is hopelessly out of date appeared in every shade. And in speaking of shades Mme. Miller was emphatic in her choice of grey, grey, black, then green and brown in the order designated as styles favourites.

"Black," she said, "can do everything for you." It can be dowdy or sophisticated, depending on how you wear it. Black takes ladies from 16 to 60 years. It's a black season for Fashions, only. If you are style wise you will wear red gray also.

Rage Over Suits

"New York has gone mad over suits," she continued. "It's the perfect thing for the woman who has a fur coat to wear now. In smooth fabrics, or nubby tweeds, with coat three-quarter length, a suit is almost indispensable. The wide effect on the shoulders are especially good."

FRANCIS FANS

KAY FRANCIS

The days of the flaming fan flirtations back in the 90's, will be revived in the new movie, "I Loved a Woman". Kay Francis wields a naughty fan in one of the leading roles.

As the luxurious afternoon gowns appeared, in satins, in crepes satin trimmed and in many styles Mme. Miller described them, eloquently, when she said, has assumed new elegance and their fashion points are all above the waist, in unusual fur treatment, wide shoulder, high neck, while fur around the bottom of the coat was definitely new and muffs were re-appearing.

For evening wear, the gowns were mostly velvet and satin.

"There is no fabric so shot with drama as black velvet," said Mme. Miller and the gowns of that fabric this evening, certainly had the distinction all their own. One must particularly admire the gown Mme. Miller advised, and the use of sequins and brilliant on velvet made this possible. Moire and lace are also back in Fashion.

Hats

The hats with Kroch dresses were from Kroch Bros., while all the others worn were from Woodley's millinery store. The captivating models in velvet, felt and satin, had a triumphal appearance in turban and brimmed models.

"Shift your hat to the starboard side," counselled Mme. Miller, "People may think you are piloting your light craft in a hail, but then think how much fun they'll have looking at you. You're whimsical. They are seeking expression in all directions. Remember that every face has one good side. Find which it is yours and make it work for you. We can't all be young but we can be youthful."

Purses and Bags

Lovely evening bags, velvet and satin bags and jewelled evening purses were from the Angus Mc-Fee Store, and Mme. Miller drew attention to their fashion correctness. The jewelry, which gave a regal air to the afternoon and evening dresses was displayed to the same store, and included the new wide silver and brilliant bracelets, dazzling earrings and necklaces and the new vogue necklaces for less formal wear.

Artistic fur coats were shown by Delaney's and revealed the versatility of fur this year. Hudson seal and Alaskan seal, Mme. Miller explained are stepping right out in the Peoples Line Trenches, while caracul and silver fox are striking and the flexibility of fur in its unusual line this year is most apparent.

The style show ended in a wedding scene with Miss Helen Kiser as the bride in conventional white, and Miss Jean Hemsworth in brown satin and green velvet. The bride's shower bouquet and the bridesmaid's old-fashioned nosegays were designed by Dorothy Quick.

Games

After the Fashion Show the crowd made their way about the interesting booths and had trials at the games which drew many patrons. Dancing in the main auditorium with the Commodores in attendance completed the first evening's program of the Kiwanis Karnival.

Hollywood Gold Diggers to Give Variety Show at Karnival

Troupe of Twenty Artists Engaged By Kiwanis Club To Add To Entertainment of Large Audience on Wednesday

Since its inception some years ago the Kiwanis Club have always tried to give the patrons something new in the line of entertainment and the program that is being offered on Wednesday is believed to be the best that has ever been secured for so low a price of admission. The Club has closed with the Hollywood Gold Diggers, a variety show of 20 artists, who give a full two-hour performance, the club being favored by an open date in the booking of this versatile troupe. The show has been booked to appear at Renfrew Fair for two days and they were able to step over here on the way to their assignment.

This troupe includes an orchestra, straight players, comedians, dancers, singers and ensemble numbers and critics have pronounced the aggregation one of the best playing the boards at the present time. The comedian with the show developed Charlie Chaplin and brought out the famous comedy team of Laurel and Hardy, so well known to theatre fans. The Kiwanis Club has been put to considerable expense in securing this attraction for the public and believe they will be patronizing accordingly. The money derived from this project is being put to the best use possible. The Club has been under heavy expense during the depression to look after the many projects before the club and they have but one way of securing that money, through the generosity of the citizens. Some underprivileged child or expectant mother will be the beneficiary of the patronage accorded the Karnival, the members of the club only being the medium through which the money passes. The Karnival this year is much above the average and with the same fine support given as has been given in the past, the work of the Kiwanis Club will be furthered and some child made more happier.

Italy's program for conservation reclamation and utilization of soil and water resources is to be completed in 14 years.

EGGS SELL AT BETTER PRICE

Slight Advance In Quotations On Tuesday

A slight increase in the price of eggs was noted at Tuesday's market when this farm produce advanced to as high as 20 cents a dozen. There was a large attendance but trading was somewhat slow.

Some of the largest melons ever offered for sale were in evidence, the canteloupe selling at 3 for 25c to 40c each. Water melons were 5 to 25c each. Pears, 30c a peck; and crab apples sold at 15c for a six quart basket. Cooking apples were in abundance. Blue Damson plum were 50c a peck; gages 30c a basket.

Green tomatoes, cucumbers and peppers of the pickling variety, were in demand and sold at prevailing prices. Green corn was 15c a doz.; tomatoes 30c bushel; potatoes 30c a peck. Beautiful plants and cut flowers met with ready sale.

S. A. DIVISION MEETING HERE

A large and enthusiastic congregation assembled in the Salvation Army Citadel last evening to greet Major and Mrs. F. J. Riches, and also the visiting delegates to the district rally of officers and other Salvationists in the city yesterday.

The Citadel Band and singers were present at full strength to brighten the special meeting.

Each delegate spoke briefly as they were introduced by the new Divisional Commander.

Captain and Mrs. H. W. Williams, on furlough from India, were also present, and these officers will conduct next Sunday's services at the citadel.

Major and Mrs. Riches were heartily received by local Salvationists and friends.

New York Market Backs and Fills Moving Unsteadily—Early Spurt On Toronto Board Fails To Carry Through To Close—Mining Market Holds Half of Gains Made

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 12.— (AP) Stocks backed and filled irresolutely today. Advances turned irregular after an early attempt to extend their sharp movement of yesterday. Oils were steady to firm while mining issues were in light supply.

U. S. Steeling eased two points. Shares of other companies to preside included U.S. Steel, New York Central, American Telephone, Cerro de Pasco Copper and American Commercial Alcohol. Equivalent advances were registered by Du Pont, Amerada, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Rahvstor. Transfers approximated 2,400,000 shares.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

Toronto, Sept. 12 (CP)— The mining market spurted as the opening and then through the balance of the session, moved along at a steady pace and holding about half the price gains. Silver and base metal shares maintained the best tone with all stocks firm and the gold issues barely steady.

A few of the base metal shares closed with gains while the leaders, International Nickel and Noranda finished down about 25 cents each. Base Metals Corporation advanced 6, Sherritt 3 and Falconbridge was steady. In the silver group Eldorado closed 15 higher at 4.05.

All the leading gold shares boarded moderate losses. McIntyre dropped to 38 1-2, Hollinger to 34.50 and Lake Shore 25 to 45.75.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—(CP)— The strong bullish trend with which the Toronto Stock Exchange opened today failed to carry through to the close, the price level apparently a bit ragged at the finish. The big end of the day's business was in the Distillery and Beer issues and these all established their high prices in the first half hour of trading.

Walker's Common sold up to 23 in early morning trade, the close at 50 was off 3-4. Distillers Seagram had a net drop of 1-4. Industrial Alcohol closed unchanged at 20 1-2 and Brewers and Distillers worked down to 3.55 from 3.75 for a net drop of 10 cents. Canada Malting and Canada Steel closed with fractional gains still intact.

Metal issues finished close to their best prices, Smelters at 12½ and Nickel at 21.25. Lesser base metal issues were registered for Brazilian Ford A. and C.P.R.

1933 RECORDS BELOW THOSE OF LAST YEAR

International League Analysis Shows Most Hits By Mulleavy

BASE-STEALING

Weaver's Fork Ball Claims 25 Victories For Bears

Montreal, Sept. 12 (CP)— No records were cracked this season in the International Baseball League an analysis of the chief features of the performances of the players shows. In most departments of the game the performances fell far short of existing marks.

Apart from Julius Solters of Baltimore and Ray Boone of Toronto there were no outstanding hitters on the circuit. Solters topped the batting averages and Boone was a close second. But the Baltimore slugger's average of .362 at the end of the season was far below the .393 mark made by George Puccinelli of Rochester the previous year. Only regular who established the season with a mark better than .300 was Mulleavy, Hartford outfielder who made the .300 mark.

Buzz Arlett's champion home run total of 54 fell a long way short of the 94 he knocked out in 1931 to head the list and of the league record of 63 established by Joe Hauser of Baltimore in 1930.

The most hits were made by Gregory Jolley, Buffalo first baseman who played a prominent part in getting the Bisons into a play-off berth. Jolley had 206 hits, four more than any other player and made 207 in 1932, the best hit mark in the league record.

Solters led the league in runs batted in with 156 to his credit. Arlett was next with 151 and Fay Collins of Rochester who brought in 130 runs in 1930.

Mulleavy's base stealer of the season was Presco Thomson of Buffalo who had 36, less than half the record total set up by Miller of Newark in 1931 with 76 to his credit.

Jim Weaver's deceptive delivery and fork ball claimed 25 victories for Newark Bears against 11 defeats and gave him the best pitching record of the season. Harry Smythe of Baltimore had the best percentage with 21 runs against seven defeats.

The pitchers came nearer setting records than the batters as the best high of the league in pitching wins since 1016 is 26, set by Robert McGraw Byrne in 1931.

Weaver managed to fan 175 batters to lead in that branch but this performance was not remarkable when viewed as an historical perspective as Bob Grove's record of 349 in a season was far from being in danger.

PICTON WINS THIRD-ROUND

Two Games Taken From Peterboro, Second By 6 to 2

Behind the superb pitching of "Warpy" Phillips the Picton intermediates made it three straight over the Peterboro Cogsawanas at the Lift Lock City ball yard on Saturday afternoon to take the title of the O.B.A.A. play-off by the score of 6 to 2. The defeated boys of the Cogs elevates the Picton club into the fourth round of the provincial play-downs.

Hurling an excellent brand of ball in the pinches Phillips blanked the homesters after they had scored two runs in the first inning. Picton on three solid safe blows, Only five subsequent hits followed, all being well scattered. Vannest started on the hillock for the homesters but was replaced in the initial frame by Billingsley who finished the hassle on the Peterboro hilltop. Both teams managed to garner but seven safe hits apiece. Phillips proved much better afield, committing but one miscue while only the homesters booted the ball for eight costly errors.

Vannest the Cogs' starting pitcher, had to leave the game in the first inning when he was hit in the face by a thrown ball. Billingsley finished and was not hit hard, but suffered from erratic support.

IN MEMORIAM

WHALEN — In loving memory of our little son Edwin Whalen who passed away Sept. 12th, 1931.
Somewhere beyond the shadows
Dwells a little boy of divine
Whom I locked on as a treasure
Whom I cherished as divine
But softly as a sunbeam
He slipped from off life's deck,
And I years so much for the loving touch
Of his arms around my neck.
Sadly missed by Mamie, Daddy and sister Margaret.

RIGHT ELBOW SHOULD BE LOWER THAN LEFT DURING BACKSWING AND DOWNSWING

ALEX MORRISON says:
A simple way to properly balance the action of both arms and hands is to keep one arm in the right relation to the other during the backswing.
With a right-handed player the right arm rolls over the left during the downswing, carrying the backswing.

RIGHTHANDER FOR 1934 IS JOHN MARCUM

Connie Mack's Problem Is Believed Solved For Next Year

DOUBLE VICTORY

10 Victories In 19 Games To Assure Giants of Flag

(By Orie Robertson, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Connie Mack's problem of finding a right handed pitcher to fit into the mound staff he is building for 1934 apparently has been solved by the purchase of Johnny Marcum, from Louisville of the American Association.

While New York Giants were strengthening their lead in the National League and Washington Senators holding to their advantage in the American circuit yesterday, Marcum, making his second Major League start, turned in his second shutout as Philadelphia Athletics trimmed Chicago, White Sox twice in a double header.

After Lefty Grove turned in his 24th victory of the season with a 5-3 decision over Ted Lyons in the first game, young Marcum ran his big league record to 18 scoreless innings with a 2-0 triumph, aided in his debut against the Indians last Friday. Marcum held the White Sox to five hits and won in four three. None of the hits was for extra bases and he fanned Al Simmons twice.

Double Win

The double victory boosted the Athletics into fifth place with a game lead of Cleveland Indians who were the victims of Monte Weaver's effective pitching at Washington, the Senators winning 5-1.

Coupled with Detroit Tigers 5-1 decision over Boston Red Sox, Senators increased their lead over the world champions to 2 1-2 games. They need only eight victories in their remaining 15 games to clinch the pennant even if the Yanks win all of their remaining 13 contests.

Leading the Athletics and the Giants with their nearest rivals, the Cubs and Pirates, piled up an increased their lead over Chicago to eight games and over Pittsburgh to 8 1-2. The half game gain was made at the expense of the lowly Cincinnati Reds by the score of 3-1. It was the fourth straight setback handed the cellar dwellers by the league leaders and the Giants fifth straight victory.

Then victories in their 19 games will assure the Giants of the flag.

Again Manager Bill Terry called on his ace pitcher, Carl Hubbell, to save the game. Holding a two-run advantage but with Herman Bell showing signs of weakening, Hubbell was rushed to the rescue in the seventh after Paul Locas had led off with a single. In the last three innings, he allowed only one hit and pitched just 27 balls to 10 batters.

Boston Braves retained their mathematical chance of winning National League pennant by defeating St. Louis Cardinals 3 to 0 behind the six hit pitching of Fred Brandt.

ROSS MEETS CANZONERI

Betting Odds Remain At 9 To 10 Against In Tonight's Fight

(By Herbert W. Parker Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—Barney Ross' 40½ professional fight won him the lightweight championship. His 50th takes him into the ring at the Polo Grounds tonight to defend against the first who can crown against the veteran he dethroned, Tony Canzoneri of New York.

Ross thus regarded all traditional of the game not only by putting his title in jeopardy so soon but by giving Canzoneri the first whack at it. It's an old pugilistic custom for champions to risk their title only when pushed to it and then only against the "ranker" that can be located.

But though Ross will be trying the 15-round route for the first time and will be meeting Canzoneri in the latter's prime, he's been a fistic idol for a half dozen years, the 22-year-old Chicagoan has shown no lack of confidence in the outcome. He says he can whip Canzoneri more decisively tonight than he did in Chicago a couple of months ago at 10 rounds.

The bout has excited more interest than has been aroused even in a lightweight match since the palmy days of Benny Leonard. Promoter Tim Mara reports advance sales of $70,000 and, with fair weather, predicts a crowd of 40,000 and gross receipts of close to $150,000.

The betting odds remained just where they have been for several weeks, 9 to 10 against, and that's your choice. The critics concede Ross a slight edge on the score of his youth and experience, but are confident he'll win back his title he has bet $3,000 on himself.

MONEY TALKS AGAIN

Spying on Sports

CONNIE MACK is about as capable as they come in the way of baseball managers—and has been for some 40 years—but the lean leader of the Philadelphia Athletics makes mistakes.

One of Connie's chief attributes is a clever pilot is his excellent judgment of men. He has picked a great many winning ball players. But he has pulled some boners.

He pulled one when he refused to buy Babe Ruth from Baltimore at the outbreak of the World war. Babe looked like a pretty good country ball player who could twist 'em with his left hand and, for a pitcher, not a bad batsman. But the war was here and with it a general fear for the future. Babe's price was high and, anyway, Connie believing the fans of Philly were fed up on all-star lineups and champions.

So he didn't buy the greatest attraction baseball will ever see.

x x x

CONNIE MADE mistakes in other men. Paul Strand, for instance, and all those other bright prospects who came and went at Shibe park when Connie was rebuilding in the early '20's.

However, few of Connie's mistakes must rankle him so as the one made in regard to George Earnshaw. Last winter Connie thought Earnshaw was the same pitcher he proved to be in the early days of Athletic glory. So Connie didn't sell when he could.

It is quite probable that Connie could have gotten $50,000 for the one-time Big Moose. The Chicago White Sox wanted him. The Boston Red Sox were interested. It's said that even Colonel Jake Ruppert had an idea Earnshaw would look swell in a New York Yankee uniform.

But Connie wouldn't sell. Now it's doubtful if he can—for any kind of good price.

x x x

EARNSHAW'S FAILURE this year ruined the Athletics' chance to bid for the American League pennant. Had George pitched the same kind of willing, eager game that has characterized the work of Lefty Grove this year the A's and the Senators most probably would be in the midst of a pennant fight right now.

But George didn't. He wasn't any help whatever at a time when Mack and his men needed extra help. He became overweight and was accused of indifference and laziness. They tell a story about Earnshaw being found asleep in a shady nook of the Yankee stadium during a ball game in which Connie wanted him to go in and pitch.

From the outside it appears that Mack exercised remarkable patience with George all summer, however, we do not know George's side of the story and therefore no one should criticize him. The final act in which Earnshaw was suspended for the remainder of the season was surprising in its belatedness. Perhaps Cagey old Connie figured he'd keep on until he was right when he failed to sell George last winter.

The story now Earnshaw is through with A's.

x x x

THE IMPORTANT QUESTION in regard to Earnshaw is where will he get

George is 34 but should have a lot of victories left in him arm. Too many American League teams are willing to gamble to expect that George will continue to do next year what he is doing this month—pestering in his Swarthmore, Pa., home.

WELTER KING IN NEW CLASS

Jimmy McLarnin Said To Be Looking To Middleweight

Vancouver, Sept. 12 (CP)—Jimmy McLarin Canada's welterweight boxing champion of the world, with no competition in his own class, plans to invade the middleweight ranks and has his eye on a match with another Canadian, Lou Brouillard, recognized in New York State as the middleweight king.

McLarin and Brouillard, French-Canadian from Quebec, met a year and a half ago when Brouillard was a welter. On a rain-soaked, loosely stretched canvas that checked his speed and spoiled him timing, Jimmy took a 10-round battering from Lou. Since then Brouillard graduated to the middleweight ranks to win the title in that division.

Five of six pounds heavier than when he entered the ring against Corbett, Jimmy is confident he can add several more pounds and meet the middleweight limit there without giving away too much weight. Five or six half dozen battlers who have defeated Jimmy have been able to withstand his onslaught in a return match.

"I was the toughest bout I've ever had," Jimmy said of his battle with Brouillard. "I couldn't fight the way I usually fight. Every time I stepped in to hit I couldn't get away from his counters and absorbed more punishment than in a dozen other fights.

"I'm afraid of his left hand, though, and if he wouldn't have more than five pounds on me it's the matter of weight. Under ideal conditions I think I'd have a good chance to beat him, and I wouldn't be asking for any handicap either."

John R. Kilpatrick, President of Madison Square Garden wants to put on the bout, Jimmy said, who figures it would be a big draw for outdoor shot for next season.

In the meantime, Ross is still angling for Jimmy to battle Andy Callahan and this show may come off within the next couple or months. Van Klaveren, Dutch slugger, is another prospective match and Jack Hood, English middleweight, worked a deal to meet McLarnin in America.

Jimmy left here last night en-route to Hollywood where he will join up with "Pop" Foster, his manager, and the two will turn eastward in anticipation of important ring engagements to come.

Carnera Dempsey Baer

What a bout! Primo Carnera, heavyweight champion of the world, leaves off to meet Max Baer, outstanding challenger, and Jack Dempsey is the referee! The 10-round scrap, held in Hollywood, Cal., however, was entered in the affirmative by the judges for the movies and ended in a prearranged draw.

CURRENT SPORT

Try as they might the Crystalaw Janders could not prevail on the O.R.A.A. moguls to allow the return Toronto or Belleville being played here Wednesday instead of Saturday, (Maybe St. Thomas was right).

Naturally the Young-managed outfit were somewhat chagrined following their overwhelming defeat in Toronto but we must give the kids their due—they're a game bunch—every last player seasoned Skipper Young of victory next Saturday. We were not present to witness the Toronto reef, but have been informed that too many pitchers were drenched in the fog, the pitchers were throwing the ball right over the centre of the plate and that's bad business.

Tonight one of the largest ballyhooed fights of the year takes place in New York when Tony Canzoneri will try and regain his box lightweight crown from Barney Ross. Both men have trained to the last stitch and the year's largest battle is assured. Experts say that the gate receipts will grow well over the $100,000 mark. Both Ross and Canzoneri are hard hitting boxers and may try for the k.o.

Leonard, the retired lightweight champ is also spending time in the sport will have to cushion Ross to retain his last laurels. The best marks the first of numerous boxing bouts that have been arranged for this fall.

While attending the New Toronto at Kingston game on Sept. 2nd last we noticed President Joe Joyce of the Ponies relative to staging a possible third game in Belleville, George was of the opinion that a regular gate would be assured in Peterboro. If the game were played on Saturday we'd agree with George but with a Wednesday date Kingston having but 56 miles from Belleville we felt all along that a larger crowd would have been on hand right here along the shores of the Bay of Quinte. After hurling a tough ten innings game in Toronto Saturday Tommy Ambrose's Belleville mates will have to wield a mean willow to assure the Ponies of victory tomorrow.

Rain last Wednesday afternoon put a sudden termination to the Duke and Duffy Invitational contest at the Bay of Quinte Country Club, but not until the thirty-odd players who had been lined up will be on hand Monday afternoon, should Wednesday to renew the feud. Recent rains in warm weather have put the course in the best condition it has ever presented, but by Wednesday an overnight drop in the ground's keeper will no doubt have his hands full replacing divots all over the place.

Yesterday the United States Amateur Golf championship opened at Cincinnati, where Ross "Sandy" Somerville of London, Ont., will defend the title he leaves attached one year ago when he headed all the best golfers in the world in the outstanding golf tournament.

Yesterday we received a short story of Somerville's athletic activities in the world of sport. The story was compiled by his employers in the London Life Insurance Company, to whom we are indebted. "Sandy" Somerville's sport life made as follows—

Golf—

Is the present Amateur Golf Champion of United States.

Has held the Ontario Amateur Championship 2 times.

Is the present Amateur Golf Champion of Canada.

Has held the Canadian Amateur Championship in 1931.

Invaded England to play in the 1932 British Open and British Amateur Championship matches.

Football—

Played three years on the University of Toronto Senior Intercollegiate Football team and was one of the best half-backs in Canada.

Hockey—

Was an outstanding hockey player who played with the 12th Battery team at London — Intermediate champions of Ontario; also played senior O.H.A. for London and was centre ice man on the University of Toronto's Senior team for two years.

Cricket—

Learned cricket at Ridley College in his teens and became so proficient that he scored with Norman Seagram's all-star eleven through England, scoring 513 runs in one inning.

Badminton—

Has recently begun to play badminton and is already an outstanding player.

Sports—

Spent six years in Actuarial and Investment work. In 1932 went into the field as a London Life general agent in partnership with Lieut.-Col. G. W. Little, M.V.O., M.C.

Jake Yanowery, Picton intermediate catcher, is playing baseball on the road than they do at home. They won their league at Belleville, made a better showing against Gananoque at Picton than they did at home and new down the Peterboro "Cogs" 6 to 2 after barely eking out a 3 to 2 win at Picton last Saturday. "Too much Philips" that's the whole story at Picton and where the Picton club play next we have not been able to find out as yet.

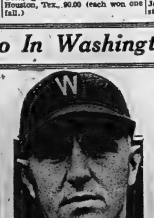
SENATORS' "MASCOT"—Dorothy Eby (Miss Mississippi) greets the Washington Senators for whom she's rooting in flag race

Who's Who In Washington - - - -



Manager Cronin

JOSEPH EDWARD CRONIN, manager and shortstop, was born in San Francisco, Cal., on Columbus Day—Oct. 12, 1906.

After playing third base for Mission high school and several amateur teams in Frisco, he was signed by the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1925 at the age of 8. The Pirates optioned him to the Johnstown, Pa., Mid-Atlantic, and New Haven, Conn., Eastern league clubs.

Early in 1928 the Pirates sold him to Kansas City, Mo., American association club, from which team Washington acquired him.

On Oct. 8, 1932, Owner Clark Griffith appointed him manager of the Senators and Joe has now become the youngest playing manager ever to pilot a major league championship team. He weighs 180 pounds, is five feet 11 inches tall, bats, throws right handed. Joe isn't married.

Alvin Crowder

ALVIN FLOYD CROWDER, the right-handed pitching star, was born in Winston-Salem, N.C., Jan. 11, 1901.

Too young to fight in the World War, Crowder joined the army in 1919 and saw service in Siberia and the Philippines. He was nicknamed "General".

He was mustered out of service in San Francisco and promptly joined the Pacific Coast league of baseball in 1922. There followed a hectic mound career with the Winston-Salem Piedmont, Rochester International, Waterbury Eastern, and Birmingham Southern league teams before Washington bought him in 1926. Next season he was traded to St. Louis, whereupon the Senators got him back in 1930.

Earl Whitehill

EARL OLIVER WHITEHILL, who has been a power from the left side of the mound for the Senators this season, was born in Cedar Rapids, Ia., Feb. 7, 1900.

The 183-pound, five-foot nine-inch southpaw broke into professional baseball with the Birmingham Southern league in 1920. After one game—which he lost—he was shipped to the Columbia, S.C., Sally league team.

Back in Birmingham the next year Earl did so well he was sold to Detroit. Twice more he visited Birmingham with the Tigers keeping a string on him. In 1924 he came back for good to Detroit and was a Tiger star for nine seasons.

In a trade last December Whitehill was shipped to Washington. This season he has had the best year of his major league career. He will start a game or two in the world series.

Ossie Bluege

OSWALD BLUEGE, regarded as the best third baseman in the American League, was born in Chicago, Ill., Oct. 24, 1900.

Like the childhood physicians warned Ossie's parents that the boy refrain from violent exercise because of his delicate health. However, Bluege loved baseball so that he played the game, anyway. And it hasn't hurt him!

As a kid in his teens Ossie played for a Chicago Lutheran seminary and for semi-pro teams. In 1920 he joined the Peoria, Ill., Three-I team. Two years later Washington bought him for $2,500.

After one year of seasoning with the Minneapolis, Minn., American association team, Ossie became a Washington regular and has played with the Senators since. He weighs 160 pounds, is five feet 10 inches tall, bats, throws right handed.

Goose Goslin

LEON ALLEN GOSLIN, star outfielder, was born in Salem, N. J., Oct. 16, 1901.

The Goose was bound to be nicknamed that, began his career with the Columbus, O., Sally era team and Manush became a diamond attache. His real start began in 1921 with Edmonton, Alberta, of the Western Canada League.

Omaha of the Western League saw Manush the next year. He batted so brilliantly the Detroit Tigers made him a regular in Heinie was a fancy batsman for the Tigers until 1927 when St. Louis gave up Elam Van Gilder, Harry Rice and Chick Galloway for Manush and Lu Blue.

He became a Senator in 1930 along with Alvin Crowder in the trade that sent Goose Goslin to Detroit.

Manush has a lifetime major league average of about .340.

Some Successful Senators

Heinie Manush

HENRY EMMETT MANUSH, the able gardener in Washington's left field, was born in Tuscumbia, Ala., July 20, 1901.

Five of Heinie's six elder brothers played baseball, so naturally Manush became a diamond athlete. His real start began in 1921 with Edmonton, Alberta, of the Western Canada League.

Omaha of the Western League saw Manush the next year. He batted so brilliantly the Detroit Tigers made him a regular in Heinie was a fancy batsman for the Tigers until 1927 when St. Louis gave up Elam Van Gilder, Harry Rice and Chick Galloway for Manush and Lu Blue.

"Oh, Barrett's all right!" Jim assured her. "If you ask me, he's richer about four than she is about him. Notice the way he kissed her when he came here for her last evening?"

"Yes, I did," Beasie admitted. She had not been so astonished by that scene as Jim had. There had been tension and a talked business back of Barrett's sweet kiss. Sometimes the astute Beasie suspected that Barrett's heart was not in his caresses.

"But," Beasie thought, "everything about it is—you quite right." Elinor had had no difficulty in settling a fortune upon her own person. Her father was too wealthy and too frail to consider the right and wrong of anything. Her mother's hold on eager hands as her eyes brightened.

"It is extra," Lida said. "I'm glad you got that way at last."

Lida's remarkable new fall purchases, matching snake-skin purse and shoes, a vibrating machine which she used once, frocks that had seemed attractive and that she discarded after one wearing, Hallith pottery, colored glass. She waited certain in her awe for diversion—and no diversion helped her to forget that Vance Carter had been locked up as insane in order to secure a divorce and thus escape imprisonment.

Vance wrote Lida, now and again, his letters smuggled out of the asylum to a post box by a bribed guard. He wrote with bitter arraignment of her, of his folly in having believed in her, of his hatred for the blankest phrases that she was. Lida kept to herself what she was. Lida kept to herself the letters when they came, without reading them, but that effort to take strength and Lida's only measure of strength lay in telling Beasie about them. She had to deny even the slightest interest in Vance Carter's fate. She resented it that he had so admitted publicly that he had unloved her for some time. She resented that her name was a household word. Stories of her mother's name in newspaper headlines made Elinor shrink. It was all so sordid. She thought of Vance Carter without pity. She knew what her mother had done to add weakness to weakness.

"Don't think of it," Barrett urged often. He was learning by her changing expressions to know the emotions they summoned. He wanted to, that he could not help to have her anything but happy.

He supposed as the days passed that he was being a fool again but he could not help it. He tried to steel himself against her, to be sure her natural appeal and he failed.

CHAPTER 30

One warming day in the middle of March Barrett decided he would ask Elinor whether he had any chance at all to make their marriage something more than an unsentimental business arrangement to make it not merely for the remainder of the year but for always. His faith in her had been growing. Even in his critical eyes her conduct had been exemplary since the day he had brought her to the Ritz.

She was always glad to pay, "And Lord, but you're dear to me!" he thought frequently as he sat with her across the chess table or listened to her music.

He had fallen into the habit of indulging those small demonstrations of affection—a hand on her arm, a pat on her shoulder—which he scarcely felt as they watched the unfolding of some card trick, and which left a glow beneath her rounded chin, raising it to ask anxiously what's wrong.

Slowly the conviction had been growing in Barrett's mind that she was fond of him, that she really cared. Slowly he had been losing the fear that morning as he was leaving for the office, "Good-by, Beasie's after lunch," she had said, "but I'll be back in time for tea. You won't will if you'll be home?"

He was engaged on a research job, a rather demanding piece of work that kept him away from the house more than he liked.

"I'll be here," she said, smiling. Almost at once she had kissed away and before he could recall Higgins appeared to say that Mrs. Radnor wanted to speak to Mrs. Colvin.

"Just a moment, Higgins," Elinor answered. Barrett, stooping, kissed her lips.

"For Higgins' benefit," he explained as the butler disappeared. Then for a moment Barrett eyed her questioningly. "Is that why you kissed me? I wished you to."

She said nothing but her smile was a little strained, her eyes misty. He kissed her hands suddenly as he had never kissed her lips, then turned hurriedly toward the door.

She stood where he had left her, hands above her heart, eyes closed. Slowly weeks had known something of his growing feeling for her. She had hoped it in his spoke which softened when he spoke to her. She had seen it in the frequency with which he came. She had been charted, too, in his concern for her comfort—in his flowers and books and music that had come to her room. Almost daily flowers had been some offering.

"Oh—mc-ke it come t-r-u-e!" she prayed. "I can't live without it now!" Vance Radnor's waiting! Higgins reminded hastily.

"Oh, yes!" she laughed unsteadily. She had forgotten. "Yes, Marcia?" she said breathlessly to Mrs. Radnor's secretary a moment later. Barrett had kissed her because he wanted to. "I'm sorry, Marcia. I didn't catch that. Oh, yes—for the baby's bath. Don't come right down. No, nothing's wrong. The connection is a little bad."

The result of Barrett's working day could have given, to even a less ambitious workman, a thrill of pride. He dallied over this and that, looked at a stealth plaque to lay it down without seeing the stereotypings which he was supposed to consider, picked up a seal of freedom to lay that down, too. He had run his hands through his hair and then pretended to examine a newsform inscription.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

At two o'clock Barrett rose. "I'm going to luncheon, Blinker," he said, "and I'm not coming back today. She's like Pringle's American Indian donation ready for me. I'll look it over in the morning."

"I'm afraid," said Blinker hesitatingly, "that you'll find it's a fact."

"I'm afraid so, too," said Barrett. Rather an awkward affair. He didn't like to hurt an old lady who wanted to do something worth while for the museum. Perhaps it would hurt the university, too. She might be the sort who would do nothing at all for the school if they told her that her collection was worthless. And yet it was impossible to interfere with the truth, Barrett knew.

Once out of the building, he removed restfully. He was going to the girl whose face now haunted him everywhere. He wondered whether he had a chance to be her husband for all time. Home to say, "I want to woo you and win you—if I can! You don't know how I'll try; how much you mean to me. You never will know, I suppose, but I'll try to prove it with the years—" How could he endure it if she should say definitely that he had no chance and how could have a chance? His heart chilled.

But a vision of her face that morning, lifted to him, returned to cheer him. His heart had been beating unevenly all day with the memory of that look and what it seemed to mean.

He reached home at three to learn that Elinor had not yet returned. If she were in Brooklyn with Beasie he would call for her, he decided, warming at the prospect of the extra time with her and the thought of what he'd say when he saw her.

He telephoned Beasie Thorpe and learned that Elinor had left an hour before. "She was only here a little while," Beasie said. "She had luncheon here. Elinor says little Dick Radnor is so proud, Barry! She says he trims his bath this morning—"

His answered vaguely, adding, "Do you know where Elinor went?" Beasie did not know. "I had the impression," she said, "that she was going straight home."

His elation was strangely exhausted. He said "thank you" and then "good-by."

Elinor might have stopped to shop or to see some friend, he reasoned; yet suspicions that had been sleeping were suddenly aroused.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

He settled moodily in the drawing room by a window to smoke continually and to frown. A French clock that stood on the mantel struck four. From the hall came Higgins' voice, and then Elinor's. It seemed she was usually in by four.

He rose and stood by the window. The distressing chime that told half past four came from the clock.

He crushed the last of his many cigarettes in the ash-tray in a silver tray. Higgins appeared to ask whether Mrs. Colvin would be dressing.

Barrett began a muttered affirmative response, but the words broke in the middle of it. A motor car had stopped at the low open sport car. Bobby Telfair stepped from it and helped the down. Elinor, smiling, descended.

Barrett moved back from the window. He felt no further emotion of her delay! This as the reason Beasie had given Elinor was going straight home!

She came in, radiant, her eyes eager. She was late and she had particularly looked forward to the luncheon, Barrett knew. She had kissed her that morning because she wanted to do so.

She had gone from Beasie's to see Phillip, Barrett knew. She had not said so yet. Elinor thought Phillip was making as much from her as he had and she had been sorry for Phillip's unfortunate combat with Barrett nor to thrust through Barrett's unwarranted interfering peace and happiness of their hours together. But that was the truth she told. Barrett about Phillip weighed her essentially truthful.

"Barry!" she called eagerly from the doorway. He turned stiffly.

"I'm so sorry to be late," she said moving toward him. Would he kiss her again? "I was delayed. I wouldn't be here now if Bobby hadn't taken me and picked me up—"

The words stopped. All too evidently Elinor could see in the hard, accusing eyes that he did not believe her.

CHAPTER 31

Coldly Barrett asked, "Why did Bobby Telfair bring you home?"

Elinor flushed; her eyes waivered. She had sent Bobby away. She had not meant to but she didn't want anyone to know about her going to see Phillip. She had murmured something about uncertainty of plans and dismissed Hatten.

"I—I had some shopping to do," she stammered. "You know how difficult it is to park cars near—"

"I fear I quite understand," he returned bitterly, crisply. She raised surprised eyes and a little war hit her face, her color receded.

"I must remind you," Barrett said unfeelingly, "that I have been waiting several weeks ago I would not have you indulging in liaisons."

"Why, Barrett!" she stammered.

"You were with Bobby Telfair all afternoon," he added.

"But I wasn't!" She was stung by the injustice.

"Did you have a pleasant time with Beasie?" he asked.

"I had a lovely afternoon," she answered, not quite evenly. "I would have gone on to tell him that she had gone elsewhere but he looked at her unrelentingly and in excuse and left the room.

Alone, she stood with tears brimming in her eyes and teeth set on her lower lip. Such a reception—! Barrett had told . . . Barrett about Phillip weighed her essentially truthful.

She drank her tea as partially as she could, hoping to hide her emotions from the keen eyes of Higgins. Then she went to her room and let the tears come.

Higgins tapped on her door at six to say that Mr. Barrett was dining out. Would she like her dinner served on a little table near the library fire? He also ever swallow convulsively before she responded.

"That would be very nice," she said, lifting her head.

Obviously, she decided when the door was closed on Higgins and she was alone again, Barrett regretted his interference over that morning. She regretted it too.

Elinor had tenderness had grieved her sick high hopes.

She laughed bitterly at the thought. What a fool she had been to think a kiss from him could mean anything, when once before he had shown how lightly he considered such an act.

At the end of the stipulated year she would work. She would not take a cent from him! She wished she could be working now. Then she would have less time to think, to imagine what his might have been for her if he had had the power to make him love her and to hold that love.

She did her best to eat. She knew Barrett would want to know how utterly Barrett's chill, disapproving eyes had crushed her. In spite of determination she could do no more than dally with her food. It choked and sickened her.

Having eaten, she went to the drawing room, sat down at the piano and played the gayest tunes. Higgins, hearing her, guessed some thing of her mood. "Poor young thing!" he thought. "Another quarrel and her heart is breaking over it."

But Higgins was not worried. The couple had quarreled before and made up that quarrel always, immediately. "Tomorrow," he decided putting silver away in its carton reverently, "they'll be back as thieves, telling each other 'heart's desire' and 'joy like.'"

On the morrow the butler continued his quarrel had been wrong than he thought. Barrett and Elinor scarcely spoke at all.

Barrett was the only one they ate together. Elinor looked pitifully unhappy and Barrett's expression was grimly blank.

He left the house almost immediately after the meal and she made no attempt to entertain herself. Instead she sat in her dimly-lit sleeping room, starring ahead, realizing she had been a fool again and that love could show the way to agony. "Never again!" she vowed to herself. "Never again!"

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Several days the Shelk waited to consider the promised cousins of the Galla guides. Again he sent Feljuan to urge them to hasten, for Sheik Ibn Ali impatiently for Zeyl, her lover. Seldom did she even glance across the curtain at the men assembled in her father's presence. When she did, her eyes blazed with hatred. For Fahd, the traitor, was also there. It was he whom she now saw grow pale as he whispered: "Ibn Jad! Look!"

Ateja, the Sheik's daughter, no longer sang or laughed while she worked. Her heart was heavy with apprehension for Zeyl, her lover. Seldom did she even glance across the curtain at the men assembled in her father's presence. When she did, her eyes blazed with hatred. For Fahd, the traitor, was also there. It was he whom she now saw grow pale as he whispered: "Ibn Jad! Look!"

With the others, Ateja glanced in the same direction as Fahd was glancing. She, too, gasped in astonishment at the strange-clad creature. For with straight toward the Sheik's beyd, strode a bronzed giant armed with a spear, arrows and a knife. Across his chest was coiled a rope of strong fibres. "Tarzan of the Apes!" ejaculated Ibn Jad, "the curse of Allah hovers!"

"His black warriors must be hidden nearby," whispered Tollog to his brother. The Sheik thought fast as the ape-man halted. Tarzan looked quickly about the sullen group and as his eyes rested upon Stimbol, he demanded: "Where is Blake?" "How should I know?" growled Stimbol. "I haven't seen him for weeks."

was 275 million acres, and the bulk of the wheat comes from the three Prairie Provinces. The estimate places the production in those provinces at 262,000,000 bushels of spring wheat. Last year it was 566,000,000 bushels, and 301,181,000 in 1931.

Late Flooding

The late September and early October rains, the wheat and rye estimate released was slightly higher than on August 1. The rains, coming late and heavy, northern crops on the whole escaped damage from frost and did not germinate as compared with the August 1 estimate, which was July 31. Only barley and flax showed lower, new crop wheat so far marketed graded high, the report said.

On the 262,211,000 estimated as the spring wheat crop, and 566,000,000 was spring wheat, the balance, 74,789,000 was winter wheat, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics then put to be accounted for by the Canadian Wheat Board, which was available for export and carry-over, at 340,000,000 bushels, or 200,000,000 quite fixed in Liverpool. The domestic consumption and the wheat needed for seed, 200,000,000 bushels, leaves 140,000,000 bushels to be taken out. It should enable a substantial carry-over.

Commenting on the reports of the crop, the report stated: "The early expectations of prairie farmers were, on the whole, realized and the season proved favorable. The stand of grain was generally quite satisfactory for germination and fall growth, and, with the exception of the district in the west which was cut off the same today and will not be constantly connected to the Pacific coast. Much of the land is well drained, but in other districts, where the land is poorly tilled by drought there were complaints as to the presence of subsoil moisture, and a realization that summer rains must be timely and well distributed for conditioning did not materialize except in some northern districts.

Hot Weather

"A distinctive period of hot, dry weather began in the second week of June, continuing at first in south western districts, but gradually spreading, so that by eventually covered about all the prairie wheat growing areas. Great damage was done in many districts by the hot winds, with minor outbreaks of cutworms, wireworms and saw-flies, and in the early part of July rust and plant disease were first noticed. This, however, did not cause any loss of grade and yield in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The potato crop in Canada will be lower this year, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The report stated:

"Excepting Ireland, Switzerland, Holland and parts of Belgium, the condition of the fall wheat crop declined further during the month of August, such serious losses from drought were too severe to be overcome by the cool, moist weather of the month. All the late-sown crops are often worse in condition than at the same date in 1932, and are about 20 per cent below normal.

The potato crop shows a condition at the end of August of only 58 on July 31, and 91 on August 31 last year. Sugar beets and root crops also suffered during the month, the report stating, "Except in Ontario and Quebec, the crop of roots and potatoes will be very poor."

The total cut of silage in Canada is forecast at 2,000,000 tons, or with 58 on July 31, and 91 on August 31 last year. Sugar beets and root crops also suffered during the month, the report stating, "Except in Ontario and Quebec, the crop of roots and potatoes will be very poor."

experience more destruction of man-made and moral things in a short time than in all the years of its existence. Yet this is the duty ordained by the Almighty for the human race.

"The present system of education has to meet and if we may so adjust many of the problems of the present day. Our Canada is the greatest country in the world. We are the foundation of a great nation. We are the people who are going to make or mar this nation. We are the people who are going to carry on our flag and our country. We are the people who are going to carry on the ideals of the Empire. Therefore, we must be educated in the best possible manner."

Following this address a resolution expressing confidence in the governing country that is an advocate of peace, and that is the most unprejudiced nation of them all, was moved by Mr. Ellis, and seconded by Mr. Hall, and carried unanimously.

Every educational act, motion and vote should aim at the betterment of the life of society that is disturbed by great private and public problems throughout the world-wide.

Amy Mollison Leaves New York To Meet Husband In Toronto

AMY'S INTERVIEW

"Jim" Brings Black Plane Amy Prefers Bright Colors

New York, Sept. 13.—(AP)—Amy Johnson Mollison bid farewell to New York friends today prepared to share again with her husband the dangers and thrills of a new air adventure.

This time it is a Toronto-Bagdad non-stop flight for the world's distance record, an attempt very much in doubt yet due to the advance of winter weather and accompanying hazards of ice and gales.

Captain Mollison, returning from England with a new plane to replace the ship in which he and Amy crashed at Bridgeport, Conn., this summer, lands at Quebec tomorrow night, then his wife in Toronto tomorrow night.

Amy Johnson Mollison, world's premier woman flyer, plans with her equally famous husband, Capt. Jim, to hop off soon from Wasaga Beach, Ontario, some 90 miles northwest of Toronto on an attempted non-stop flight for the world's distance record.

"Our plans call for the start at Wasaga Beach, but this is still indefinite," she said. "Of course there is still some doubt as to whether we will be able to start on account of the close approach of winter and the hazards of wind and gales."

She leaves for Toronto tonight.

"It is by no means definite that we shall go," Amy said today. "The Atlantic flying season is supposed to end the middle of September, but personally I think the latest advisable date is Sept. 1."

She laughed—it was really a laugh—and a gentle blush suffused her cheeks.

"But you know husbands, and I think mine has different ideas."

Her listener didn't know his hands very well but agreed on theoretical grounds.

"Jim painted the ship black—like the Seafarer I. I'm so disappointed because I wanted it a bright color—psychological effect and all that, don't you know."

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS

Mineola, N. Y., Sept. 12.—(CP)—An asinan derby will open the Nassau County Fair, a blue ribbon event, next Tuesday. The derby is a race for automobiles 10 or more years old. One rule is that all entrants must be willing to sell their cars for $50 after the race.

Detroit, Sept. 13.—(CP)—Mrs. Beatrice Hebb of Adelaide, Ont., when she was fined for a traffic violation. They paid the fine, but Beatrice insisted on staying in jail.

As policemen plcked him up bodily and carried him out to the street yesterday he struggled and cried:

"I cannot repay my friends. And if I do not repay a debt I shall never reach my Heaven. It is so written."

Toward Pa., Sept. 12.—(CP)—Mike Kitchen's bungler strike may make a job for a telephone operator at the County's jail. The sheriff says unless Mike, a ragman who has refused food for eight days, partakes of nourishment soon, an extra operator may be put on duty regarded to handle the telephone calls Mike's attack has occasioned, from his sympathetic public.

Quebec, Sept. 12.—(CP)—A suggestion that the remains of Octave Pelletier, noted French-Canadian poet who died in France 20 years ago and was buried at Havre, be returned to Canada is being discussed by the general council of the Quebec branch of the St. Jean Baptiste Society.

Farrell, Pa., Sept. 12.—(CP)—The shades of such wild westerners as Wyatt Earp and Wyatt Earo must be hovering over Farrell. Mike Dumas and John Hendrick, were fined $25 each for shooting out the lights in a beer garden.

ENVOYS OF DOMINIONS MEET IN CONFERENCE

Delegates attending the British Commonwealth Relations Conference, which opened this week at Hart House, University of Toronto, are seen, above, listening to the words of welcome addressed to them by Sir Robert Borden, former Canadian premier, honorary president of the Canadian Institute of International Relations. Sir Robert's address opened the conference, which will sit until September 21. Delegates are present from every dominion of the empire.—(Photo by Pringle and Booth).

TRIBUNALS TO BE OBSOLETE

Pension Appeal Court To Continue Under New Act

Ottawa, Sept. 13.—Announcement is expected momentarily of the reorganization of the pensions machinery and the substitution of "The Canadian Pensions Commission" for the present Board of Pension Commissioners.

The Pension Tribunals will go out of existence but the Pensions Appeal Court will remain in operation. The Pension Tribunal is the travelling body, and was recalled from the Maritime provinces and ordered to report to headquarters, this explaining a despatch from Belleville describing the sudden termination of the tribunal hearings there.

It is assumed that the three members of the present Pensions Commission, along with some of the nine members of the Pension Tribunal, will be absorbed in the new Canadian Pensions Commission.

LOVE UPSETS EUGENIC PLAN

Eugenics Must Give Way To Environment And Influence

Halifax, Sept. 13 (CP)—Efforts by parents to create and educate an ideal boy" always have proved futile and the only way it ever will be accomplished in the opinion of Rev. W. T. Ross Flemington, principal of Mount Allison academy is to "call in the aid of eugenics."

Speaking to members of a service club Dr. Flemington said just as "long as the tall choose short, the short choose tall and vice versa; as long as ladies are beautiful and men are handsome and dumb-so they can love us, the boy will continue to be natural and non-ideal."

The formula for producing an "ideal boy" said the Principal would be—

"If we chose our wives because their physical experiences and intelligence and our own were equally high, if we paid close attention to the physical wants of the child, if we submitted it to a wise and rich home training followed by a period of travel, how subtle would be the final product—the ideal boy.

"But love," he said, "spoiled all this, right from the beginning, so all that could be done about it would be for the listeners to do their part in providing the proper environment and influence for the youth of today.

Divorced Mother Searches for 12 Year Old Son She Has Never Seen

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 13.—(AP)—Mrs. Bessie Reilly today was divorced from William Reilly, Canadian, by a man she said left her shortly after their marriage in Sarnia, Ont., in 1920. She said she met Reilly at a festival for returned soldiers in London, Ont., where she was doing post-war work with the Y.W.C.A. Mrs. Reilly said she would spend all of the time she could spare in searching for their son, now 12, whom she has never seen. The child has been adopted by a Detroit family although she claimed not to have signed papers for his release.

Political Partiality Charged By Liberal Candidate, Dr. J. A. Faulkner

ONTARIO OUTLOOK

Party's Attitude On Record Extolled As Means of Cure From Slump

Over 125 Belleville Liberals met last evening in Memorial Hall Front Street, to hold their annual meeting and hear reports of the officers of the Belleville Liberal Association since the last meeting held in October, 1932.

When the president called the meeting to order, on the platform with the officers of the association were Mr. W. A. Fraser, M.P. for Northumberland; the Hon. Nelson Parliament, chief Liberal organizer for Ontario; Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Liberal candidate for West Hastings; Mr. Peter McLaren, the Liberal candidate for the other Hastings riding, and Alderman Cory of Trenton, president of the Trenton Liberal Association.

Reports of Officers'

President Hollon, in presenting his report for his past term of office reviewed the association's activities under observations and highlights of what had been accomplished.

SURPRISE BARTER OF COW FOR LUMBER

SETTLE, Sept. 13.—(CP)—Nick Brace, Lumber Company Manager, was astonished when a freight train unloaded a black cow in his yard.

A bow tie about the cow's neck was signed "Sammy", the name of his agent at Arquite.

By investigation he found "Sammy" had followed instructions to get rid of some of his investment yard by a "barter and trade" system. The cow was payment on a lumber deal.

DR. WODEHOUSE DEPUTY MINISTER OF PENSIONS

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—(CP)—Dr. H. E. Wodehouse, at present executive Secretary of the Canadian Legion Service Association, has been appointed Deputy Minister of Pensions and National Health. Announcement to this effect was made by Hon. Murray MacLaren, Minister of Pensions and National Health, today. He succeeds Dr. J. A. Amyot, former Deputy Minister, retired.

13,000 Natives Attend Court Over Flogging in Bechuanaland

Palapye, Bechuanaland, Africa, Sept. 12—A special British commission investigating the alleged flogging of a British subject P. W. MacKintosh, concluded his inquiry today with a decision that the European is prohibited from living in any of the native reserves.

The flogging was alleged to have been the sentence of the native court of Chief Tshekedi of the Bamangwato tribe.

The 15,000 natives who assembled for the inquiry heard the verdict in silence after their child had been denied the right to call witnesses to establish MacKintosh's character.

Diamond Worth $100,000 Stolen

Smash And Grab Raid Made Today In London, England

London, Sept. 13.—(AP)—A rare Brazilian diamond valued at $100,000 was stolen today from a shop in the heart of the diamond trade district in the most amazing of a series of recent daylight "smash and grab" raids.

Shortly after a window had been smashed in the store of Samuels, Harris & Son in Hatton Garden, a young man broke the glass, twisted the protecting grill with a piece of iron, snatched the diamond, and sped away in a waiting automobile.

One of the guards who had rushed inside the store after the window had been dressed, gave chase and obtained the number of the automobile license.

Police have found it difficult to cope with an increasing number of similar robberies because they are forbidden to carry firearms.

New Chance At Junior Championship

Toronto, Sept. 13 (CP)— David of Henderson, Chatham youth who won the Ontario Junior Golf Championship last week, tonight was disqualified because of an error on his card, will have another chance, Henderson and the nine others who tied for the championship were ordered by the championship committee today to enter a 36-hole play-off over the hills of the Summit Club here Saturday.

FARM PRICES LAG

Washington, Sept. 13.—After two days of intensive canvass of the domestic situation, it is felt farm prices are lagging behind in the general upward trend.

The President, in consequence, now is focusing attention on this end of the Recovery Campaign.

250,000 JOIN NRA PARADE

Three Million People Celebrate Steps To Recovery

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—(AP)—The Blue Eagle marshalled one of the greatest peace-time parades today.

He summoned a quarter million people in industry to march up Fifth Avenue in the "President's NRA Day" demonstration.

Moving, as NRA Chief Grover A. Whalen described it, from "darkest days of depression" toward the "sunlight of prosperity", the gigantic cavalcade was set to start at 12.30 p.m. E.S.T. and billow up the historic avenue until hours after sundown.

Capital and labor took places rich by side in the ranks under the NRA banner as the shock troops of the industrial Recovery forces gathered at starting points in 71 massed divisions.

Throngs, granted half-holiday, flocked to the scene to watch it. Some advance estimates said the spectators would number 2,000,000.

New York, Sept. 13.—(AP)—General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, said today that if Henry Ford does come in we will do it. "Ford is under the code", Johnson said in reply to an inquiry as to whether the Automobile Manufacturer is a "recalcitrant". "I don't know what the code's present situation is, but if he hasn't come in we will act."

GERMANS SHAKE SUNDAY POTS

Berlin, Sept. 13 (AP)—A plea to Germans to share their "Sunday pots" once a month with deserving poor persons was made today by Chancellor Hitler and Minister of Propaganda Goebbels before the cabinet and party leaders.

THOMPSON ELIMINATED

Kenwood Country Club, Cincinnati, Sept. 13 (AP)—Wood Thompson, Jr., diminutive shoemaker from Toronto, was eliminated from the United States amateur championship tournament in the first round of match play today, losing three and one to Sidney W. Noyes Jr., of New York.

HIGHWAY AND RAIL ISSUE TO BE SOLVED

Roads Transform Life Says Premier Henry At "Good Roads"

FREIGHT CLASH

Insular Thought Will Disappear Through Transportation

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 13.—(CP) Life had been revolutionized by the establishment of improved roads, Hon. Georgeis. Henry, Premier of Ontario told the 20th Annual Convention of the Canadian Good Roads Association here today.

Premier Henry, told of the rapid strides made in road building during the past 15 years and discussed the problems arising from this growth.

"Some years ago the belief arose that there was no longer any need for this association," Premier Henry said, "it was claimed the organization had completed its useful work when it impressed people with the conviction that good roads were a necessity. There is no longer any need to dwell on the question that in good roads, but road building is a progressive, developing science and must be kept abreast with that it may be kept up with."

The speaker said that the tremendous development in roads of the continent since the first good roads convention was held in Toronto in 1906 had transformed life of its people.

Barrier Vew Gone

"Changed conditions have solved the road problem. Expenditures on roads would not be justified if we were living to ourselves in a small community as we were 25 years ago. The community has been widened out and enlarged through better transportation and communication facilities.

All the problems arising from the establishment of a large network of highways with the increased use of motor vehicles using them for commercial purposes with railway traffic, the Premier said. "Should our roads be developed to such a point where they would enter towns and cities before they hit as publicly-owned and municipal railways," he asked. He said a similar problem was probably faced and solved when the railway interfered with water transportation years ago. Such problems work themselves out in the end, he said.

Premier Henry expressed confidence in having many questions considered by officials from the United States present at the convention. Canada was happy to have access to advice and help from the United States, he said, and the value of this would be tremendously wide experience, he said.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 13.—(CP)— The storm off the Labrador Coast has moved southeastward, bringing light local showers in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Eastern Quebec, the weather has been fair in all provinces and quite cool in most parts.

Northern Ontario—Fair and cool tonight and Thursday; moderate

Lake Superior—Moderate shifting winds, mostly fair and cool; possibly a few scattered showers in southern portion.

Kenora and Rainy River—Generally fair and cool.

Manitoba—Moderate northeast winds; fair and cool.

Saskatchewan—Easterly winds; generally fair and rather cool.

Alberta—Mostly fair with stationary or somewhat higher temperature.

Wins $54,000 on Hyperion Ticket, Montrealer Gives up Job as Shoe Store Clerk

MONTREAL, Sept. 13.—(CP)— Two Canadians and one American reaped small fortunes today as a result of the running of the St. Leger stakes at Doncaster, England.

Adrien Vanier, 54, of Montreal, held an Army and Navy Veterans in Canada sweepstake ticket on Hyperion, the winning horse and will receive $54,000. Odell Delelicaut, the second horse, is held by A. Labelle, of Quebec City, who receives $18,000. William A. Hasse, Calumet City, Ill., held a ticket on Scarlet Tiger, in third position. Hasse wins $18,000.

When he heard the good news today, Vanier promptly quit his job as a clerk in a shoe store. "I have worked for 34 years and I'm through," he said Vanier, "and have never earned more than $15 a week. Now I am going to take it easy." He grabbed his hat, tossed a button hook on the counter and dashed out of the store to celebrate.

Quebec, Sept. 13.—(CP)—A. Labelle who drew Felicitation in the St. Leger sweepstakes, Englands classic entitled to a prize of $35,000 in his share of the winnings in the easter today, is chauffeur for the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province, Hon. Esioff L. Caron. His chauffeur expressed delight when informed of his good luck and said he went about his duties at Spencer Wood.

"I am most glad to learn of my good fortune," Labelle said. "However I am quite contented in my present job and intend continuing in it. As far as my financial circumstances are concerned I am quite satisfied with my salary."

Labelle, who is 41 years of age, is married and father of six children.

DEATH MISSION FAILS

ALFONSO CASSAS

Alfonso Cassas, 20, a Cuban student, said he is said to have been selected by a lottery in the "ABC", a secret society of Cuba, to go to the United States and murder Ledeo, asserted killer during the regime of Gerardo Machado, has been refused permission to enter the United States and will be sent back to Cuba. He was discovered as a stowaway on the S. S. Morro Castle and placed in irons.

OPEN PROBE OF FATALITY

Coroner Dr. W. W. Boyce Presides At Jamieson Inquest

After identification of the deceased man the inquest, called by Coroner Dr. W. W. Boyce, of Everett H. Jamieson, Whitby, who died in the Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday, after receiving fatal injuries in a motorcar accident north of Foxboro on Monday night, adjourned until Tuesday evening next, by jury composed of Messrs W. J. Panier, foreman; Geo. Dulmage, R. McCrudden, W. Harden, R. Black, T. J. Holland, H. Hill, R. D. Black, S. J. Wedden and W. R. Vallance, met at the Belleville Burial Company's parlors. Coroner Dr. W. W. Boyce was in charge while Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan conducted the examination of witnesses.

Orrell Brickman, of the city, an employee of the McCarthy Milling Company, identified the deceased as being Everett H. Jamieson, who also had been employed by the same firm as a salesman. Mr. Brickman said that he had seen the deceased at about 6.15 p.m. on Monday last. The witness stated that Jamieson seemed quite normal at that time.

Owing to the fact that numerous other witnesses live outside of the city and were needed at the inquest proceedings until next Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Mr. J. W. Imlah, undertaker, was given permission to turn the body over to relatives for burial. Death resulted from a heavy blow on the left temple, causing a severe fracture of the skull. The unfortunate man passed away in the Belleville General Hospital yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock was born at Canaluck Centre, Ont. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Jamieson and was 43 years of age. He was a salesman for the McCarthy Milling Co., at Streetsville and a member of the United Church. The late Mr. Jamieson served overseas with the Princess Patricia Light Infantry and in the Royal Flying Corps.

Surviving are his parents, Everett and Mrs. Ada Johnston of Toronto) resident in Whitby and a brother Mr. Alvin Jamieson, Town of Vancouver B.C.

Following the inquest this (Wednesday) morning the remains will be forwarded to the Parks, Co., for burial and interment there.

THREE STATES VOTE REPEAL OF DRY LAWS

Maryland, Minnesota And Colorado Join Wet Parade

BIG MAJORITIES

Only Nine More States Needed To End Prohibition

Washington, Sept. 13.—(CP)— Twenty-nine States today marched the repeal path only seven more need follow to end U. S. Prohibition.

Maryland, Minnesota and Colorado won the latest recruits. All voted yesterday to abolish the 18th Amendment and left the score in 1933's balloting for repeal — 36; against—0.

In the seven States now needed to supply the three-quarters of the Union required for repeal among the 19 voting before November 6th, the Repeal Amendment will be ratified formally on December 5th—date of the 36th Convention.

The wets carried Maryland overwhelmingly. Fast mounting figures put the Repeal majority at nearly five to one.

The margins were smaller but substantial in Colorado and Minnesota, home of Andrew J. Volstead who sponsored the prohibition enforcement law'. Late counts listed both in the two-to-one class.

Prohibitionists promised undiminished efforts to block the trend which set Monday coat them Maryland's first bone dry State of the U.S.

Next Week Decisive

Next week on Tuesday, Idaho and New Mexico vote on Repeal two weeks later—October 3— Virginia, Nevada and a week later—October 10—Florida.

These four end the balloting until November 7 when six more voted: Kentucky, North, Carolina, Ohio Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Utah.

The list of 29 States which have voted to ratify the 21st or Repeal Amendment today read:

Rhode Island, Wisconsin, Rhode, Island, Wyoming, New Jersey, New York, Delaware, Nevada, Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maryland, Louisiana, West Virginia, California, Alabama, Arkansas, Tennessee, Oregon, Arizona, Missouri Texas Washington Vermont, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota and Colorado.

Yesterday's Vote

Maryland voted in 24 delegates to the State Convention to be held at Annapolis, with 18 to vote solidly for the proposed 21st amendment.

With the scattered precincts in the counties still missing, the anti-prohibitionists' majority in Baltimore rolled up a plurality of 152,678 votes over the dry's and their delegates are to have gone go the Convention without being pledged.

Returns present of Minnesota Repeal sentiment in yesterday's election with majorities coming from the urban centres, where large anti-prohibition majorities rolled up, enough to attain a two to one margin over defenders of the dry law even in the face of incomplete returns scattered and representative returns.

Returns from 56 of Colorado's 1,547 precincts tabulated by the Associated Press gave the following votes for Repeal 122,766 against Repeal 85,805.

CORNERSTONE OF CHURCH TO BE LAID

Ceremonies attendant on the laying of the cornerstone of Bonarlaw Church, now under construction, are expected to take place under the direction of officers of the Grand Lodge of Canada in the Province of Ontario, A.F. & A.M., on Tuesday, September 26. At present the foundation of the new stone church has been built up to grade, and a start has been made on the preliminary erection.

APPLE CROP IS CALLED VERY FINE

"Not in years have I seen such a wonderful apple crop as there is in this district this year," stated Mr. Geo. F. Catron, well known local produce buyer and shipper, today.

"Everything has been in their favor this year, and we have been given one of the best crops we ever had. We could ship thousands of barrels of them from this immediate district out of this local port to Montreal and the continent if we had the facilities," he added.

CONCRETE POURED FOR DORMITORIES

Concrete was poured on Saturday on the ground floor of the new dormitory buildings now under construction at the Ontario School for the Deaf. Bricklayers who will commence work on the walls are expected to start work some time this week or the beginning of next week when the concrete has been given time to set.

PROTEST BURNING OF OLD SCHOONER

A petition which has already been signed by scores of residents of the city, is still being circulated protesting against the proposed burning at Sunnyside Beach, Toronto, of the old schooner, Lyman P. Davis. Mr. William (Ring) Bowen is one of the moving spirits of the petition, circulated by him at the request of Oshawa friends who have also filed protest. Boat lovers and old time sailors of this city and district are indignant over the proposed burning of the well known schooner which once plied local waters.

TEMPERATURE RISES 10 DEGREES

Rising temperatures on Wednesday morning, ten points higher than those felt early Tuesday when frost which accompanied the drop caused damage all through the section, tended temporarily the fears of farmers of the district who had confidently expected another visitation of the nipping frost which damaged their gardens and flowering buckwheat fields. On Wednesday morning the lowest point reached on the thermometer was 44 degrees, contrasted with a low of 34 on Tuesday. High for Wednesday was 80, contrasted with the highest point on Tuesday of 68. Low cloudy blanket of the district on Wednesday accounting for the right degree drop.

OBITUARY

MRS. PATRICK DRUMM

An aged citizen, and for 70 years a resident of this city, passed away early this (Wednesday) morning at her late residence, 19 Cedar Street, following a lengthy illness in the person of Mrs. Catherine Drumm, widow of Patrick Drumm. The deceased was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Karin and was the last remaining member of her family. She was born 90 years ago in the village of Dublin, County Kerry, Ireland, and came to Canada when a girl 80 years ago; for the past 70 years she had made her home in Belleville. Mrs. Drumm was a member of St. Michael's Church and during her long years of residing in the city had made many friends, the great majority of whom had predeceased.

Remaining to mourn the loss of an aged and respected mother are two sons, John of Kingston and Patrick E., of this city, and three daughters, Mrs. Albert Koen of Kingston; Mrs. Joseph Koen of Odessa, and Miss Vera at home.

MRS. SYLVESTER McCUMBER

Following an illness of sometime's duration, Mrs. Melinda McCumber, widow of Sylvester McCumber, passed away this (Wednesday) morning at her late residence, 9½ Emily St. The deceased was born in Rosiln, 84 years ago, and for some years resided in Ashland, Wisconsin; for the immediate past twenty years she had made her home in Belleville. Mrs. McCumber was a member of the Salvation Army and held the respect of all who knew her. To the family left to mourn her loss is extended the sympathy of their large circle of friends.

Surviving are three sons, J. J. White or Blidney, B.C.; the Rev. F. W. White, of Minneapolis, and Bruner; White of Watertown, N.Y.; five daughters, Mrs. Henry Brethour of Sidney, B.C.; Mrs. W. Wales at Vancouver, B.C.; Mrs. S. Smith of Carberry, Man.; Mrs. Geo. Beck of Victoria, B.C., and Mrs. Wm. Daniel of Toronto, and one sister, Mrs. L. Graham of Minneapolis.

The remains will rest at Bellville Funeral Parlors, Funeral, 27 Campbell Street, until the time of the funeral, Thursday afternoon.

SCHOOL FAIR FOR RAWDON HELD AT SPRINGBROOK

List of Students Awarded Prizes For Exhibits

Rawdon.—On Monday, September 11th, Rawdon Township's annual school fair was held at Springbrook with a good attendance despite the cool, fall weather, under the auspices of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, with their representative, Mr. Joseph Wilson, B.S.A., in charge. The directors for this event were:

S.S. No. 1—Donald Stapley.
S.S. No. 3—Everard Cooper.
S.S. No. 4—Bob Hoard.
S.S. No. 5—Murray McInroy.
S.S. No. 6—Mrs. Mida McMullen.
S.S. No. 7—Nellie Morrison.
S.S. No. 8—Irene Wales.
S.S. No. 13—Ernest Runnalls.
S.S. No. 14—Ralph Willman.
S.S. No. 16—Murney Herrington.
S.S. No. 17—Isobel Beckett.
S.S. No. 18—Regina Farrell.
S.S.No.20—Doris Fleming and Ray Tanner.

The school fair committee is composed of Miss Laurene Smith and Miss Irene Grills, Belleville; Miss Susan MacFarlane, of Shannonville; Miss Edna Ketcheson, of Halloway; Miss Winnifred McInroy of Frankford; Mr. H. Connor, of Tweed, and Mr. Clarence Bailey, of Harold.

Early in the morning cars and wagons wended their way to Springbrook and large entries were made in table bouquets, poultry, vegetables, farmers' agents and apples.

Soon after 10 a.m. Mr. Clarence Bailey conducted a weed-naming contest with eight boys and three girls taking part and eighteen pressed weeds were shown the class, the winners were:—1st, Vernon Runnalls; 2nd, Percy White; 3rd, Carlyn Johnson; 4th, Betty Hoard; 5th, Murrey McInroy; 6th, Bob Hoard.

Following this, Mr. Wilson conducted a grain judging competition with nine entries and the returns were:—S.S. No. 13, Vernon Runnalls, 1st; S.S. No. 7, Douglas Richardson, 2nd; S.S. No. 4, Betty Hoard, 3rd; S.S. No. 20, Wesley Cooper, 4th; S.S. No. 4, Bob Hoard, 5th; S.S. No. 3, Murney McInroy, 6th.

The hall was then closed and various races for girls and boys, with relay races, handkerchief races, three-legged race, boot and shoe race and many more interesting and the awards were ribbons.

Four teachers entered the race with Miss Vera Wright as first, Miss Ruth Eggleton, second, Miss Dorothy Williams, third, and Miss Lorne Lanigan, fourth.

Those in attendance then enjoyed their lunch a la basket in the cool, sunshiny place available most anywhere they might be warmed by the sun's rays.

At 1.15 p.m. nine schools entered the parade and they all looked nice as they were adorned with pretty banners, maple leaves, green sashes and caps, purple sashes and caps, red, white and blue sashes and caps. The march was in the following order:

Ridge Road—S.S. No. 1—Mrs. Lorne Lanigan.

Mount Pleasant—S.S. No. 2—Miss Muriel Milligan.

Williams—S.S. No. 4—Miss Lenora Williams.

Benarlaw—S.S. No. 3—Miss Pollock.

Side—S.S. No. 6—Miss Ruth Eggleton.

Brown—S.S. No. 11—Miss Vera Wright.

Twelfth Line—S.S. No. 14—Miss Foley.

Minto—S.S. No. 9—Miss Clark.

Springbrook—S.S. No. 20—Miss Ella Hoard and Miss Swayne.

At the close of the parade pupils of S.S. No. 4, S.S. No. 3, S.S. No. 6, S.S. No. 11 and S.S. No. 19 filled in the centre and Mr. Clarence Bailey gave the Strathcona exercises and all the pupils acted them in time and this was certainly a pretty sight.

There were no awards as to positions made but each school entering the parade and exercises were given a playground ball and will be eligible to compete at Stirling Fall Fair.

In the school choruses prizes were awarded, $1.00, 75c, 50c and a ribbon.

S.S. No. 7, with Mrs. Hayton as teacher, sang "The Crooked Specktacles" and were awarded first, and they richly deserved it.

S.S. No. 4—Miss Lenora Williams, teacher, came second, singing, "I Love Thee Canada".

S.S. No. 3—Miss Pollock as teacher, won third place, "My Own Canadian Home".

S.S. No. 11—Miss Vera Wright, teacher, came fourth with "The Maple Leaf Forever".

In the parade and judging of live stock:

1—Lorne Watson—colt.
1—Melvin Heath—dairy calf.
1—Carl Heath—beef calf.
1—Willie Mack—lamb.

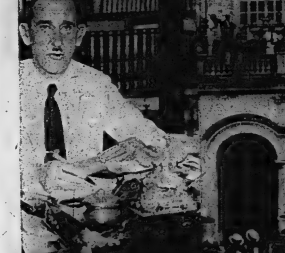
There were nearly 35 pens of poultry.

In the recitations—"Somebody's Mother" was awarded Winnie Wales, 8, won first; Norma Ray, S.S. No. 11, came second.

In public speaking—Donald Nix won boy's first, speaking on "My Greatest Ambition," Miss Grace Dargavel, teacher.

Betty Hoard won girl's first, her subject, "The Maple Tree," Miss Lenora Williams, teacher.

Following this Mr. Wilson told the pupils and had points of the various vegetable exhibits and then the main doors were opened for inspection, while others enjoyed watching a game of rollball.



The old and the young surely enjoyed the Children's Fair and many people returned to their homes laden with various prizes.

POLISH BALLOONISTS SAFE IN QUEBEC

The trio of Polish balloonists who started from Chicago in the Global Bennett international balloon race came to a landing in the Quebec bush and trudged ninety miles through rough country with only a pocket compass to guide them into the settlement of Lenoxville. At the LEFT is seen Captain Franciszek Hynek at the spot where the adventurers first came across the railway line which told them they were near civilization. With their ballon hung up in a tree in the Laurentian woods, they stagered into Lemieux five days after their landing. The trip gave them unofficial victory in the trophy race. The photo at the LEFT was taken by Lieut. Z. Rumpel. The two balloonits are shown at the RIGHT as they arrived by train in Quebec city.

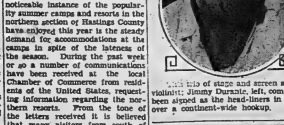
TOURISTS ARE STILL COMING



No Sign of Falling Off In Touring Cars Here

Tourist traffic through the city shows little let-up, even with the advent of cooler weather. Another noticeable instance of the popularity summer camps and resorts in the northern section of Hastings County have enjoyed this year is the steady demand for accommodation at the camps in spite of the lateness of the season. During the past week or so a number of communications have been received at the local Chamber of Commerce from residents of the United States, requesting information regarding the northern resorts. From the tone of the letters received it is believed that many visitors from south of the border will continue to arrive to enjoy the camps during the fall months. The hunting season, it is believed, will attract numbers.

CHRYSLER ENJOYS LARGE BUSINESS

Jno. Mansfield, President, Says Company Away Behind In Shipments

"An extraordinary performance, confirming our opinion that buying power and confidence are returning rapidly," says John D. Mansfield, President of the Chrysler Corporation of Canada, Limited, referring to August shipments of Chrysler Motors products.

"During August we shipped from our Canadian plants more than five and a half times the number of motor vehicles shipped during August, 1932," stated Mr. Mansfield. "During the month we were constantly behind in filling our dealers' requirements and entered September with a bank of unfilled orders from Dealers greater than our entire shipments for August, 1932. We have had the biggest August business since 1929."

"This means something more to me than merely the popularity of Chrysler Motors products, although that is no doubt a big factor," continued Mr. Mansfield. "It means that people are buying more freely because they are confident that business is on the upgrade. They are beginning to believe that tomorrow will be better than today and have lost their fear that their income and assets would be subject to further shrinkage.

"I have felt for some time that business and industry had gone far enough in making fundamental adjustments to justify a substantial measure of recovery as soon as the public regained confidence. I believe that this necessary public confidence is returning rapidly," concluded Mr. Mansfield.

WALKERVILLE BREWERY OFFERS 50,000 SHARES

Sale of Shares Direct To Purchasers At $3.25 Per Share

Ontario investors will be interested in the announcement that the Walkerville Brewery Limited, Walkerville, is placing 50,000 shares of no par value common stock on the market. The price quoted is $3.25 a share and sales will be made direct to purchasers without the intervention of brokers.

For the nine year period ending December 31st, 1932, the Walkerville Brewery, Limited has paid in excess of nine per cent. average dividends to its stockholders on the basis of the offering price of the current issue. During that same period, the earnings of the Company averaged in excess of 13 per cent. on the offering price of the present issue. The reports available for depreciation, provincial and federal taxes, and all non-recurring charges.

At this time, the Company is not on a dividend basis; but in the expectation of improving business conditions, early consideration of dividend payments is confidently anticipated.

In an issue of stock such as the Walkerville Brewery Limited, now making investors know that the imponderable asset of good will plays a decisive role in determination of value.

The plant of the Walkerville Brewery, Limited, is one of the most modern in existence. Since 1933, the plant has been entirely remodelled and re-equipped with the last mechanical appliances for the brewing, aging, and marketing of beer, ale, stout and porter.

The secret of the Walkerville Brewery's financial record during the past nine years, and particularly during the past three years of economic depression, is to be found in a close study of the plant and the methods of manufacture and shipping, which are employed.

Overhead and dividends could not have been maintained, it is pointed out, if the costs of production and marketing had not been reduced to the absolute minimum.

The Walkerville Brewery, Limited, is now looking forward to a business revival and substantial prosperity. The men who have been at the helm during the many years of uncertainty and who will remain in charge as conditions show improvement are Herman Hiram Walker, president; Eugene J. Berger, vice-president, E. T. Thiele, secretary-treasurer, and a strong board of directors consisting of Preston C. Norton, president of the Norton Palmer Corporation; Windsor; Arthur D. Miles, formerly president of International Nickle, chairman of the board; Charles D. Isaacs, formerly of Hiram Walker & Sons, Limited; Charles P. McVague of McVague-Clark, Springsteen and Ermser and John J. McHale, president of Scott McHale Limited, London.

Municipalities Cannot Afford New Relief Projects, Henry is Told

Toronto, Sept. 13—Many municipalities will not be able to take advantage of the new relief works agreement because they are not able to afford the large share of the cost of such works that they would have to bear, a deputation of Mayors and municipal representatives told Premier Henry when they waited upon him yesterday afternoon. Even with the governments paying two-thirds of the labor cost, the remaining one-third, plus the cost of materials, supplies and engineering costs would mean that the municipalities would have to put up approximately 75 per cent. of the expenditure on the works, members of the deputation stated. They wanted the governments to pay a portion of the cost of materials, etc.

Premier Henry promised to take the matter up with Dominion authorities this week-end, when he is to be in Ottawa. When the agreement was advanced that some municipalities could not undertake such because or their financial difficulties, it was realized that some municipalities would have difficulty as they had in the past when no public works were proceeding. But what the Governments had in mind was that many municipalities could undertake works.

When it was pointed out that, even a large works program could not absorb all those on direct relief in some places, Premier Henry replied that this also was realized. Mayor Oliver of Stratford, stated quite definitely that the system of direct relief was much cheaper. That the relief sums brought up during the discussion was that in many of the municipalities all the necessary work had been started before this, and that some had completed works which were needed for some time.

When Mayor Peebles or Hamilton claimed that municipalities would have to bear all the engineering costs, Premier Henry replied that they had engineering staffs to pay anyway, and it would not cost any more to have plans for relief works provided.

Mayor Peebles also urged a minimum wage law for men, and that the law for women be enforced where several cases where it had not been enforced, he said. "It does not pay such cases should go down to the board," the Premier advised.

3 DICTATORS

Prince Starhemberg's Strong Words About Bolshevists

Vienna, Sept. 13.—A report that an Austrian Cabinet shake-up was impending, which will result in the establishment of a dictatorial triumvirate, appears in a Vienna newspaper.

Standing in the midst of a great, mass meeting in front of the City Hall, Prince Starhemberg, Leader of the Austrian Fascists, faced Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, and declared: "It is an unbearable humiliation to the genuine citizenry of Vienna," the Heidwehr Fascist leader shouted, pointing to the City Hall, "to find a nest of these Bolshevists still rule.

"Do something, Mr. Chancellor. Throw them out! We Heimwehr are ready to stake our lives to help you make it a good job."

Vienna voted 60 per cent. Socialist in the last municipal election.

The dictatorial triumvirate, the newspaper Achi Uhr Blatt reported will be composed of Dollfuss, the Prince and Emil Fey, Minister of Public Security. This report could not be confirmed.

The newspaper, which is published under the strictest censorship, appeared on the streets at the conclusion of a ceremony honoring Prince Starhemberg's ancestor, who freed Vienna from the Turks in 1683.

Prince Starhemberg's address concerning "these Bolsherists" culminated a wreath-laying ceremony during the anniversary celebration. Other speakers eulogized the historic Starhemberg, and suggested that big descendant also was destined to free Vienna.

Although the Socialists chosen in the last election retained their posts, the supreme authority order is concerned.

These developments followed an address by the Chancellor yesterday, in which he declared that Austria would be reorganized along corporative, or guild, lines, with the old Parliamentary system dead, and the fight against Marxism and Hitlerism continued.

HYPERION IS STAKE WINNER

Heavily Favored In Great English Race For Three-Year-Olds

Doncaster, England, Sept. 12. — (CP Cable) — Lord Derby's young colt, Hyperion won the historic St. Leger stakes today with the Aga Khan's Felicitation second and Lord Rosebery's Cameronian third.

Hyperion, chestnut colt by Gainsborough out of Selene, won the Derby earlier in the summer, went to the post a heavy favorite.

The St. Leger Stakes, the fifth of the English Turf's five classic races for three-year-olds is the oldest of the great English races and covers one mile, six furlongs and 132 yards course.

Fourteen of the crack three-year olds of the year ran and Hyperion in winning repeated the feat of his illustrious sire, Gainsborough who won the "double" in 1918.

Hyperion first favorite at 6 to 4 won easily by three lengths while a neck separated Felicitation and Scarlet Tiger. The Aga Khan's horse ran at 22 to 1 and Scarlet Tiger at 100 to 8.

BUTTER GLUT IN DOMINION

Ten Million Pounds Over Dominion Needs Compared With 1932

Ottawa, Sept. 13 (CP)—Canada sidled into 1933 with 10,000,000 pounds more butter than will be needed for domestic consumption this Winter. W. H. Forster of Hamilton, president of the National Creamery and Alan C. Palmer, manager and secretary, with other members of the council had conference with Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, and Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, today to see what can be done about it.

The impression seems to be that Canada made too much butter and not enough cheese. Canadian cheese commands a premium on the British market and the humor has to take a discount as compared with the New Zealand product. Until late in August, for instance, the difference between cheese and butter was quite satisfactory, that butter rose as it was being accumulated is about the proper rule to provide for the domestic requirements this winter. However, the storage figures on September 1, showed 41,460,641 pounds of butter on hand whereas last year the total on the corresponding date was 30,806,180. Returns from the creameries were more complete this year, however, so that the actual excess may be under by 10,000,000 pounds.

The excess position will probably be greater by the end of September and is divided about equally between the prairies and the eastern provinces. Western Canada holders of butter are reported to be prepared to take a loss and ship the surplus butter so the United Kingdom, rather than glut the Canadian market. There is a move on foot to do the same with Ontario butter. The conversations were to devise the best means of going about the task and no decision would have been reached.

Butter is selling in Montreal today at 18½ cents a pound, which is approximately world prices. The butter actually stands the creamery commission would be 17½ cents a pound. It is contended as they did not anticipate the drop in prices that Canadian farmers, they claim, have been paid some $5,000,000 more for their milk than would have been the case had the creamery companies known what the situation was to be.

The proposal now suggested is understood to be that the holders of butter export 7,000,000 or 8,000,000 pounds, taking a loss on each pound, and plan to operate on the seasonal intravan on the upwards of 30,000,000 pounds to be sold for domestic consumption.

The question is of great importance not only to the creamery companies but to the farmers and general public as well. If the creamery companies have heavy losses, they contend they will have to fix the prices for milk next spring sufficiently high as to be able to avoid a glut in the domestic market, they will be in no position to offer good prices next season.

Calgary Despatch Says Turner Oil Wells To Reap Profits

CALGARY, Sept. 13.—(CP)—With gasoline selling in Calgary for 32 cents a gallon following the recent advance believed due to the United States NRA movement, oil company officials today predicted the retail price would reach 40 cents a gallon by midwinter.

PUCCINELLI NEWARK HERO

Second Game In Series With Red Wings Waited

Newark, N.J., Sept. 13 (AP) — A former batting idol of Rochester was the hero of Newark today as the Bears defending champions of the International baseball league, smashed the second game in the playoff series with the Red Wings with a one up lead.

The new local pride was "Pooch" Puccinelli, who was traded to the Bears in the middle of the 1932 season for George Selkirk. Yesterday in the opening playoff encounter, the husky Italian outfielder was the main cog in a three-run attack against him for former teammates and Newark won by a score of 6 to 3.

"Pooch" got two hits in four times at bat and one of them was a gigantic home run in the eighth inning that scored Jack Saltzgaver ahead of him.

Saltzgaver earlier had driven "Red" Rolfe home with a single in the eighth, sending Saltzgaver around First Base and the three runs provided the winning margin.

The Red Wings who finished second in the regular season and first in the northern section of the league, got off to a three run lead in the fifth when Ethel Crabtree clouted one of Big Jim Weaver's pitches into a home run with two of his mates on the bases.

Weaver picked up one run in the last of the fifth and tied the score in the seventh.

Johnny Murphy, ex-Fordham hurler who is classed as the best relief pitcher in the league, received credit for the victory after he succeeded Weaver when the big fellow was removed for a pinch hitter in the seventh. Then Don Brennan, ace of the league last year, is to start against him for the Bears, opposing Tony Kaufmann.

WINS PLACE WITH BIRDIE

Nicol Thompson, Canadian, Shoots Birdie At Cincinnati

Kenwood Country Club, Cincinnati, Sept. 13.—(AP)—Nicol Thompson, the first round of match play in the United States amateur golf championship was completed today when eight contestants, including one Canadian and three veteran former champions, survived a two-day playoff over the rolling acres of Kenwood course.

The elimination process was completed when Ira, Couch, of Chicago was put out of the running by Nicol Thompson, he took a four. Previously R. M. Grant of Hartford, Spencer Service of Baltimore, and Chris Brinke of Philadelphia were eliminated on the first hole.

Eight players battled for the seven remaining places after Nicol Thompson, Jr., of Toronto, qualified with a birdie 3 on the first hole. All but Couch got three on the second.

It was still driving when Thompson, the diminutive Canadian, sharpshooter, teed off shortly after 9 a.m. with Sidney W. Noyes, of New York, in the first 18-hole match of the opening round of man-to-man conflict.

GAME ENDS IN "NO CONTEST"

Player's Nose Broken In Ball Game On Coleman's Flat

After considerable wrangling the umpires called the first game of the playoff in the Central Prince Edward Trenton series after 5 to 5 at the Coleman Flats last night. The Firemen, trailing the College Hill Cubs by a 5 to 3 score, rallied in the seventh to get two runs in their half of the seventh inning and two more in the eighth inning. The game was declared "no contest" by President Harry Pinchin and teams will meet again Thursday night at Coleman Flats.

Animosity ran high throughout the game an air of bad spirit being evident from both benches. The two umpires imported from Trenton, were also however. Medical attention was required.

Pitcher Bowerman, Bunt Miller and Frank Farraro opposed each other on the mound, Bowerman hurling for the College Hill Cubs and the latter, pitching for the Firemen. Spectacular fielding held the score down on the sides. Pitcher No. 36 received the lucky number.

The lineup:

Firemen — Bennett, W. Morgan, Gray, Baxter, Bennett, Wm. Morgan, Walsh and H. Morgan.

Cubs — McDonald, Lypenmeitz, Miller, F. Murray, J. Miller, Covert, Robinson and Bowerman.

MORE AUTOMOBILES SELLING

Manufacturers who showed automobiles at the Canadian National Exhibition believe that they have the real evidence of a betterment in 1933 trade for facts show that more new cars were sold at the "Ex" than in years. The interest of the buyers was to be compared, they state, with that in the banner year 1929. Sales were shown to be seventy-five per cent. greater than in 1932.

At least the motor group is showing the signs of recovery. It is true that many owners have old cars which they have been holding on to until better times and it is probable that many of those who bought this year were a year ago in the same class but had of late come to the decision to make a new purchase.

Interest in the motor industry is a good sign, with the NRA causing advance in the price of a number of things it may be that the motorcar at the present price will seem quite a cheap buy after all. Anyway the trend in the United States is likely to leave its effect upon our prices in this country and upon motorcars. With higher prices for materials used in construction and with the advance of wages as planned by Mr. Roosevelt, if the plan succeeds the price of the motorcar as well as other manufactured articles must go up. So it probably is a fine opportunity to buy at the present moment.

THINKING LAGGING

"If it took centuries for mankind to appreciate the desirability of organizing into carefully bordered countries, certainly it will take many years before there can be general realization of the fact that prosperity depends upon the weal of neighbors and that national existence can be safeguarded better by friendship and co-operation than by strife and power," says Wm. de Cock Buning of The Hague, Holland, Economist, in the Rotarian Magazine.

"Science has quietly gone ahead and before our very eyes has melted blown old barriers to intercourse, as witness the cable, the radio, the talking motion pictures, and ocean transportation. The world has become an economic unit, with the ups and downs of crops and industrial production in one country affecting prices in every other land. In short, national isolation has become obsolete. Man's thinking must keep pace with material progress."

OBSEQUIES

"Among the relics of barbarism that are undergoing change as man comes closer to understanding the meaning of life, and death, is the funeral," says Edward Orleans.

"Before departing this life a few days ago, an England lady, Mrs. George Lansbury, wife of the labor leader, left instructions that her funeral was to be no mournful affair, but rather "an occasion for thanksgiving to God for a happy life." So, instead of a dirge, a simple funeral service was opened with Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." The jubilant music of the Hallelujah Chorus filled the church as the mourners left.

"Grief in bereavement is natural. It is also selfish. We very seldom stop to think of that. Why should we mourn because one we loved has been removed from the struggle, trial and perhaps suffering of this world? We do not. We are mourning for ourselves, our loneliness, our consciousness, sometimes, of the things we could have done but did not do to make that other life happier and fuller.

"Why, instead of sombre ceremony, do we not make our public acknowledgment of our respect for the dead an occasion for inspiration and higher resolve for those whose lives were touched by the life that has gone on? There is no really good reason. Tradition and custom, formed in past ages when superstitious man worshipped many gods and the life beyond was a dreadful mystery, persist in our enlightened day.

"Death remains a mystery. But so does birth. And love. And life.

"Where man has felt the touch of civilization, there are few who still believe in vengeful gods that must be propitiated, evil spirits that must be exorcised.

"To me there is something inspiring in the funeral of Mrs. Lansbury. To strip the last tribute to the departed of every suggestion of agonizing ceremonies that were held in days when man's soul was in darkness and in the grip of superstition, and to substitute for it acknowledgment of God's gift of life and love, is in keeping with mankind's spiritual growth."

SIDELIGHTS — GRAVE and GAY

THE GYPSY IN AUTUMN

Summer is fading, is passing now,
Yellowing leaf and stripping bough;
Days grow shorter and nights grow cool,
Chill are the deeps of the forest pool.
Southward the swallow and bluebird fly,
Soon will be only winter and I!

Only old winter, when flowers depart,
Laying his hand on my leaping heart,
Stilling and chilling its song and mirth,
Making it dream on the icebound earth;
Winter, with snow mounting higher and higher,
Mocking at me, by my dead-twig fire!

"But there are houses and hearths," you say,
"Doors one can shut to keep winter away!"
What knows a rover of bolts and bars?
Nights that are coldest flaunt brightest stars;
Walls for a gypsy are coin ill-spent,
Better the winds through my tattered tent!

ANNUAL INTERNATIONAL BALLOON RACE from the United States, always provides thrills, and this year is no exception. Distances in the order of nine races and two of the racing balloons came down in Canada's hinterland, one in Northern Quebec and one in Ontario, north of Sudbury. The balloonists in both instances had to fight their way through the bush to civilization, and the sky adventurers who came out at Sudbury added a new note to the chapter by cutting down a telephone pole to attract rescuers. Making their way out of the bush a telephone line was encountered, one of those pioneer lines which balks at no obstacle of bush and mountain. Nearly exhausted the lost balloonists conceived the idea of cutting down the telephone pole, knowing that the trouble squad would speedily be sent to locate the break, and that, incidentally, would mean their rescue. It worked out just that way. About twenty years ago a racing balloon from St. Louis, Missouri, making distance, came down in Lake Nipissing, near the entrance to French River where the reservation of the Dokis Indians is situated. A group of Indians saw the great gas bag coming down out of the heavens and fled in all directions screaming that the moon was falling down. The balloonists found that the riding basket was not waterproof and had difficulty persuading any of the Indians to come near them, but finally succeeded in getting rescued by canoe. Another pair of balloonists a few years ago, came down in the bush northwest of Sudbury and had a hard time of it until rescued by a trapper. They came out to the steel at Matice, a new northern Ontario settlement and celebrated their safety by a fist fight over their respective rights to make money from newspapers articles. The encounter put rather a dirty finishing touch upon an otherwise romantic adventure.

A NEW LOW IN CAULIFLOWER EARS

That bitter cry in London, "Our boxers are starving!" finds an echo in Leo Fuller's complaint that third-class "pugs" are getting £1 or less for "a rattling good scrap." As he reports in Everybody's Weekly, "very often if a boxer wins he is forced to substitute for another man later in the evening—two fights within three hours." Often a promoter "promises thirty shillings for eight rounds—and at the end of the evening says that business was bad and "arf a quid" is the most he can afford.' In tearful italics Mr. Fuller protests, "and nothing is done about it!"

STOCK AND FOWL FED ANY FOOD THAT WAS HANDY

In The Old Days—Different Now, Says J. S. Mackenzie, Expert On Feed That Produces Results

A few years ago practically all fowls and animals were fed the food that was raised or happened to be plentiful in that particular locality. If it was a good corn year, they got corn, and so on down the line.

Today as much thought and attention is given to the proper feeding of fowls and animals as is given to any other line of business. Because we have learned that properly fed, housed and handled, all fowls and animals thrive practically as well during one part of the year as another. As much milk, meat or as many eggs can be produced as heretofore was possible only under ideal weather conditions. Scientific remedies are now given either as or with food and keep the producers absolutely fit, therefore efficient.

MacKenzie & Co., has made a thorough study of the requirements and has on hand or can secure all that is required to keep fowls or animals in the best possible condition. This information and service is at your disposal and he will gladly confer with you and give you the best information obtainable. Their prices are right and the stock is not only always fresh but absolutely the highest grade that can be purchased. It has ever been the aim of MacKenzie & Co., to handle and sell honest feeds at honest prices and through their efficient afforded in their manufacturing and distributing costs they are able to offer you these honest feeds at very moderate prices. These feeds are made from the very best materials and they maintain the same uniform formula and quality always. The fact that this firm is located here in your midst is another important fact towards helping to maintain high-grade quality at moderate prices. By using carefully balanced rations, you will assure absolutely profitable results.

MacKenzie & Co., also supply Belleville and environs with the Famous Purina Products: Hay, Grain, Salt and his well-known chickens. For convenience of his many out-of-town customers he has his stores at 24 Campbell St., and 45 Front with a large warehouse at 56-64 Pinnacle or Phone 37.

You will be pleased with the results of your purchases here. Consult this expert feed man if you are having difficulty with your livestock by telephone or mail. You will know just what is needed. J. S. MacKenzie, the owner of this business is a man who is altogether conversant with this business and who aids in the success of every opponent of the community. Do you know what brands of feed are handled by this firm?

HEPBURN IS AFTER FIGHT

Does Not Want Acclamation for Liberal Leader in States

Blenheim, Ont., Sept. 13.—(CP) —Because he wishes the people to pass judgment on the Conservative Government, Mitchell F. Hepburn, M.P., Ontario Liberal leader, looks for a contest rather than an acclamation when nominated here as candidate is called to fill the vacant seat in the East Kent riding.

Speaking here last night the Liberal Chieftain declared, with reference to reports he would be offered the seat without opposition, that he was not looked for an acclamation in East Kent or any other riding.

"I am anxious for a test case, not an acclamation," said Mr. Hepburn. "I notice the Tory Minister is reported to have agreed to deal in East Kent if the people want me. Well the matter should be discussed with the Liberal and Progressive Executives in that riding and also by my own people in Elgin who have dealt so fairly with me in the past whom I have accepted a nomination."

The Liberal leader said he wanted to make it clear he was not a party to any deal, but he never called for any quarter and was not going to start now.

"We are going to have a Liberal Progressive candidate in the East Kent election," he said. "I may be or I may not be the candidate, but if I am I would welcome support of so the people may say what they think of the Tory Government."

VERDICT IN DEATH OF WILLIAM ROSE

PICTON, Sept. 13.—The coroner's jury called to investigate the death of William Rose, which occurred following a motorcycle accident last Wednesday night, in a verdict after two hours deliberation after the evidence had been heard. They found that he had come to his death when his motorcycle came in contact with a tile, throwing him against a second tile. They also found that, in their opinion, there was sufficient room for Rose to have safely passed the car driven by John Wesley which had come out of East Lake Road on the highway. Neither party had used sufficient care in meeting on the intersection, they stated and recommended a stop sign at that point.

Huntingdon School Fair at Ivanhoe Memorable Event in Lives of Young Competitors

Very Large Turnout of Scholars And Parents

MANY EXHIBITS

There was a fine turnout, Tuesday, at the school house of school section No. 13 of Huntingdon, at Ivanhoe, to attend the annual rural school fair of that township, held under the auspices of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, with its district agriculture representative, Mr. Jos. Wilson of Stirling directing the events of the day.

Following the judging a program of sports was carried out with races for boys and girls of all ages. There was no competition in the parade of schools this year, each participating receiving a prize equal to of the day instead and the Stirlaton caledonia event was made an exhibition only.

Ideal weather favored the day and fathers, mothers, teachers, boys and girls and their friends who met at Ivanhoe Tuesday, had a most enjoyable afternoon.

CHARGES FAIL IN BRIGHTON BAY TRAGEDY

No Negligence Found in Case of Drowning of Girl in Boat Collision

Charges of criminal negligence against Harry Sherman of Brighton and Bert Meachin, 325 Montrose Park Avenue, Toronto, arising from a fatal collision of motor boats piloted by the two men, were dismissed by Magistrate J. H. Dickinson, at Brighton on Tuesday.

The charges were laid following the death or five year old Dorothy Lewis, daughter of Albert Lewis of Toronto, who was the only passenger aboard Meachin's boat, lost. Meachin's craft was struck amidships by that piloted by Sherman and capsized.

Anglo-Saxon Democracy Will Never Break Down City Liberals are Told

ed.' During the year $1000 had been handled by the Association and 90 per cent of that money went into the hands of those out of work at that time and had gone to the relief of many who were in need. This expenditure was in connection with the mammoth banquet and reception to ex-Premier, the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King in the Arena last spring, staged by the Central Ontario Liberal Association, but carried out by the local Liberal organization. Expenses in connection with that affair had overlapped receipts by $140 but the president and other officers had found means of meeting the deficit and in connection with the arduous work of preparing the splendid arrangements for the Arena for that occasion, President Holton gave credit to Mr. T. Harris, treasurer of the Association who had gratuitously given nine days of his time and labor to make this so completely satisfactory.

To Secretary J. D. O'Flynn, Mr. Holton also tendered his and the thanks of the organization for the diligent and voluminous work he had performed for the Association, and the loyal support he had ever received from him. He had been a year of activities and much had been accomplished. If a reward for any worker in the organization in Foster Ward should receive that recognition, it should be the chairmanship of H. J. Martin and the unstinted support of the ladies of the section of the city is much had been done there in the cause of Liberalism. The fine Labor Day picnic held in Victoria Park under the auspices of the Belleville Liberal Association, President-Holton confidently expected would be repeated next year.

Secretary's Report

Throughout the year the meetings sponsored and arranged by the Association had met with good, satisfactory, immense in some cases, and ward and executive meetings had been well attended. Concluding, Mr. Holton said as special thanks ment had been most pleasing to him and his thanks went to the loyal support the executive had given him.

Mr. J. D. O'Flynn presented his report as secretary, mentioning 39 meetings in all had been held among them the great meeting in the City Hall at which the Hon. Peter Heenan had acted as speaker the opening evening, and the Arena meeting of last summer with ex-Premier King tion and Bert Meachin, 325 Mon- and Provincial leader M. F. Hepburn present. At the conclusion of his report Mr. O'Flynn paid tribute to the president as a man well worthy to fill the office he honored and as one of the ablest organizers in Ontario.

Mr. Tom Harris' presentation of the treasurer's report was brief, a small balance was still on hand.

Election of Officers

At President Holton's solicitation the Hon. Nelson Parliament occupied the chair for the election of officers for the ensuing year, and at this point Dr. Faulkner arose to address the gathering.

He had worked throughout the year with men in whom he had the fullest confidence. Executives had been selected at the last annual meeting to fill office during a year in which an election was expected. They had been chosen as men who were thought to be key men throughout the city. Personally he felt the City or Belleville to be the key situation in the constituency and the influence exerted here will be vividly felt throughout the riding. He felt he could not do a wiser thing than nominate for the loyal support and encouragement they had given him. As the outstanding Liberals of the city had been chosen when a contest was brought on in this section and as that situation still existed at the present time he moved that the secretary be instructed to cast one ballot, re-electing those who served last year. But with this qualification to the motion that the resignation be accepted of any one who felt he could not give his whole heartedly in the Liberal cause of the country's interests.

By a show of hands, Mr. Parliament declared the motion carried and last year's officers and ward chairmen re-elected. These as under:

President—G. Harold Holton.

Secretary—J. D. O'Flynn.

Treasurer—Tom Harris.

President Holton

In again assuming the chair Mr. Holton said it was a personal gratification to him to be re-elected and to be vindicated by the members of the Belleville Liberal Association. Every means possible had been taken to destroy him politically, he charged, and his efforts in his native town. A deliberate plot had been hatched to get rid of him personally as well as politically. "To know I have your overwhelming confidence is a satisfaction indeed," said President Holton. "In Dr. J. Wallace Faulkner we have a candidate who has undertaken to place politics on the highest possible pedestal," the speaker declared.

He regretted that some ward organizations were not showing the activity that was expected of them. If a Liberal worker feels he cannot work, does not like the work or feels he cannot devote his time to the work in his ward he should step down and allow one willing to carry out his duties take his place.

The president then spoke of the necessity of certain work under way being speedily accomplished, that of all might be in ship-shape if an election was suddenly called. He spoke of the necessity of funds to carry on the work of the year. Membership tickets in the Association would be forthcoming this year and parties would be arranged for the opening twelve months similar to those held the year just past. The ladies' organization would be called into be- fore the last week would be completed the last of the present month. He was glad to rally round the candidate and uphold the hands or the executive. Loyalty must be had regardless of personal feelings.

Organization

After these remarks it was moved by the secretary and seconded by Mr. Harris that Mr. Holton act as chairman, without excuse, was absent from three meetings in the year as chairman of his ward." The motion was put with the approval of the meeting.

Mr. Holton moved that the thanks of the meeting be tendered the publishers of the Ontario Intelligencer for the treatment accorded the Liberal cause, and said that Mr. W. H. Morton had assured him that the party would receive the general though the columns of the paper.

Hon. Nelson Parliament

The chief Liberal organizer for Ontario, gave one of the finest half-hour addresses, Tuesday evening, that has been made in this immediate district of late years. Full of vim and vigor the Hon. Nelson Parliament assailed the Conservative party, its leaders and policies and some of the blunders which before his hearers what Liberalism had accomplished for Canada when the governments were in power. Never had this country progressed save during periods when the Liberal and Liberal principles had guided its destinies.

The present conditions in Canada under three periods, since the Great War, were touched on briefly, then to 1930 and the period since that date. The present state of affairs, he declared, to which he specially. Citizens who are liberal-minded want a change for the better, people want a candidate who represents a party that will bring about a change for the better. People are interested in politics heretofore are showing an interest today. "The democracy of the Anglo-Saxon countries won't break down," declared the speaker. "Democracies will be maintained though they may be changed some. An educated democracy is not far in wrong.

He had been in attendance at the London Economic Conference. Mr. Hope and Mr. Parliament read the high ideals of Liberalism there as voiced by the Liberal aims were and what Liberalism would endeavor to accomplish.

Expansions or trade under the principles of the Liberal party had been the principle aim in London. Trade with other countries with fairness and they would trade fairly with us. The Ottawa Conference and the World Conference in London had proved that the democratic nations will be united. Hope and Mr. Parliament read the high ideals of Liberalism there as voiced by the Liberal aims were and what Liberalism would endeavor to accomplish.

Expansions or trade under the principles of the Liberal party had been the principle aim in London. Trade with other countries with fairness and they would trade fairly with us. The Ottawa Conference and the World Conference in London had proved that the democratic nations will be united.

In Ontario there is a premier who governs not so much for the good of the people, but for the welfare of a party, he thought. The time has come to rouse the citizens. He had come to rouse the citizens. He had come to rouse the citizens. He had

Trading Dull On All Exchanges, Though Early Business On The Standard Board Was Sizeable - Gold Shares Lag — New York's Half Session Lethargic—Base Metal Stocks Unchanged

TORONTO EXCHANGE close.

TORONTO, Sept. 13. — (CP)— Canada Bud Brewries was taken in large blocks at advancing prices and the whole list of Beverage shares closed higher on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Interest in the Distillery Stocks eased up when New York closed at noon but buying continued heavy in the Beer shares. The general tone was good at the [illegible] group the afternoon movements were firm. Nickel recovered an early recession, closing 30 higher at 32 3-8. C.P.R. and Ford A registered fractional gains.

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—(AP)—Security Markets, closing soon today for the longer New York Stock demonstration, generally followed a narrow and fluctuating course. Except for a few specialties, which were run up for sales of as much as 2 points, the dealings were content to hold just a little better than the heavy levels of yesterday. The finish was firm. Transfers approximated 900,000 shares.

While business was rather quiet on the stock exchange, a rally in prices at Chicago served to bolster sentiment and some of the farm belt issues were in demand. Wheat got up about 2 cents a bushel. Bonds were slightly mixed.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept. 13.—(CP)—The Standard Mining Exchange handled a sizeable business in the morning session at steady to strong prices but trading flattened out when New Years closed an hour, for an afternoon Blue Eagle Celebration. Gold shares lagged while narrow price changes showing while Silver shares were strong and Base Metals stocks firm.

In the senior Gold Group Dome, Lake Shore, and Teck Hughes closed unchanged. McIntyre registered a gain of 30 cents, Wright Hargreaves 15 cents while Pioneer lost 15, Bralorne 10 and Hollinger 5 .

Except for a sell-down of about 5 cents for Sherritt Gordon, the Base Metal Stocks closed unchanged Nickel at $31.36 and Frobisher at $35. Tone in the oil group was firm, Royalite added $1, closing at $17.

JOHN J. McHALE President of Reed & McHale Ltd., London, Ont.

THE COMPANY Walkerville Brewery Limited was incorporated during October 1916, by letters patent, under the Companies Act of the Dominion of Canada, for the purpose of acquiring, taking over the assets and business of its predecessor company bearing the same name, but incorporated under the Companies Act of the Province of Ontario. The company is the direct successor of one of the oldest industries of the town of Walkerville, Ontario, and was organized after the death of Hiram Walker, who founded the business in the late 1850's. The late Hiram Walker was the father of the late Willmer Gow of the late Hiram Walker who founded the town.

PROPERTIES The plant is located at Walkerville, Ontario, in the heart of its industrial district, and has a frontage of 1,000 feet on Riverside Drive, which is the residential section of the town as well as being located on a main thoroughfare. The plant buildings are modern and the brewery is every respect, having an annual brewing capacity in excess of 125,000 barrels, or the equivalent of 1,250,000 cases. During the last eight years the company has spent over $1,000,000 on improvements, additions and extensions to the plant. In the opinion of the directors the present condition of the properties is such as to require no large capital expenditures for some time to come.

EARNINGS During the nine year period ended December 31, 1932, the average yearly earnings of the company were in excess of 12% of the offering price of this issue after provision for depreciation, provincial and federal taxes and all non-operating charges. During the same period since the present management has had control, the company is stated to have operated at a profit.

DIVIDENDS During the nine year period ended December 31, 1932, the average yearly dividends paid to shareholders were in excess of 9% on the basis of the offering price of this issue. The management of the company is of the opinion that, on a moderate improvement in general business conditions, dividends will be resumed.

FINANCIAL The company is in an excellent financial position, having no obligations ranking ahead of its capital stock other than current trade accounts payable. After completion of the present offering of 50,000 shares, for cash, and made to the public by this company, its current assets ratio to current liabilities will be approximately 16 to 1, of which cash alone will represent an approximate ratio of 8 to 1.

MANAGEMENT The management of the company will be in the hands of those responsible for its past success.

GENERAL The future of the domestic market for the products of the brewing industry remains stable, and should any change be made in the Liquor Control Act of the Province of Ontario in the direction of permitting the sale of the company's products in beer parlors or taverns, or the like, the position of the company would be materially improved.

PURPOSE OF OFFERING The company is making this offering with the realization that customers' ownership of its shares, and also with a view to permit those valued customers who have long asked for as many years have been loyal to the products of the company, sold under the trade names of "PROHIBITION CLUB," "PURE MALT BEVERAGE," "BULL-ALE," "PURE MALT STOUT" and "PURE MALT LAGER," to participate in the earnings of the company.

The company reserves the right to refuse either all or in part or to limit the amount of stock to be allotted to any application or subscription.

Applications for this stock may be made directly to the company, together with your cheque covering the amount of your subscription. Those will be accepted through your broker.

EVIDENTLY the football schedule makers visualized last fall the scorings of the Blue Eagle and the spread of employment and father pay envelopes beneath its (we all hope) beneficent wings.

Anyway, the boys who book the big grid battles lined up a great card, one which gets started earlier than usual and then floods October and November with some exciting promises.

Usually, the first struggles between major elevens, so called, do not take place until the first Saturday in October. However, this year the final day of September is a Saturday and a number of interesting clashes are booked for that spot on the calendar.

Football in 1933 then will actually get well underway before the word, series is on.

x x x

HERE ARE some of the major pigskin wars as they are scheduled: Saturday, Sept. 30—Stanford-California, Illinois-Drake, Tulane-Texas A. and M., Pittsburgh-W. & J., Navy-William and Mary, Minnesota-South Dakota State.

Saturday, Oct. 7—Carnegie Tech-Temple, Notre Dame-Kansas, Ohio State-Virginia, California-St. Mary's, Southern California-Washington State, Michigan-Michigan State, Northwestern-Iowa, West Virginia-Pittsburgh, Tennessee-Maryland State, Vanderbilt-North Carolina.

Saturday, Oct. 14—Purdue-Minnesota, Stanford-Northwestern, Purdham-West Virginia, Illinois-Iowa, Georgia Tech-Alabama Poly, Army-Delaware, Notre Dame-Indiana, Southern Methodist-Rice, Nebraska-Missouri, Columbia-Virginia, Illinois-Wisconsin, Oklahoma-Kansas, Cornell-Michigan, Rice-Land, Southern Methodist.

SATURDAY, Oct. 21—Columbia-Princeton, Yale-Dartmouth, Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech, Georgia Tech-Clemson, Illinois, Michigan-Ohio State, Colgate-N.Y.U., Navy-Virginia, Florida-North Carolina, Purdue-Syracuse, Purdue-Chicago, Harvard-Holy Cross, Iowa-Wisconsin, Dartmouth-Harvard, Nebraska-Kansas State, Pittsburgh-Carnegie Tech, Washington State-California, Texas Christian-Texas A. and M.

Saturday, Oct. 28—Harvard-Dartmouth, Pennsylvania-Navy, New York U.-Georgia, Tulane-Alabama Poly, Army-Yale, Notre Dame-Pittsburgh, Oregon State-Oregon, Michigan State-Northwestern, Missouri-Iowa State, Oregon State-Washington State, Michigan State-Syracuse, California - Southern California, Colgate - Lafayette, Washington-Idaho, Texas-Arkansas, Tulane-Mississippi, Columbia-Pennsylvania.

Saturday, Nov. 4—Purdue-Carnegie Tech, Princeton-Navy, Alabama-Kentucky, Fordham - St. Mary's, Maryland-Maryland, Temple-Drake, Penn State-Syracuse, Georgia-Vanderbilt, Yale-Dartmouth, Colgate-Tulane, Princeton-Brown, Illinois-Michigan State, Alabama Poly, Northwestern-Minnesota, Ohio State-Indiana, Southern Methodist-Texas, California-U.C.L.A.

THE ST. LOUIS CARDS are moving to Mound City fans that the Red Birds have designs on the 1934 National League pennant. They've decided to add Paul Dean to the mound staff rather than sell Dizzy's promising kid, brother for the large sum offered for him.

"Big Town" Admits Barney Ross to Ranks of Champs

Canzoneri is Again Loser

One of Most Savage Battles In History of Ring At New York

40,000 SEE IT

Judges' Decision Splits And Donovan Votes For Ross

Special Dispatch

(By Gale Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 13 (AP)— This big town, the toughest in the world to convince, was ready today to admit Barney Ross of Chicago to the ranks of the world's ring champions.

Out of one of the most savage, gruelling fights ever seen in a local ring, the Jewish battler from the Middle West emerged with his second victory over the veteran Tony Canzoneri, from whom he won the lightweight title less than three months ago.

With 40,000 bowling fans soaking on at the Polo Grounds last night, most of them pulling fervently for Canzoneri to turn the tables on the former amateur champion and reclaim his crown, Ross attacked Tony's early rushes, caught up with him midway of the fight and beat him all over the ring before it was over.

As in their first scrap at Chicago, it was so close it required the vote of the referee to reach a decision. Arthur Donovan, who was in there with them for the torrid 15 rounds, cast his ballot for Ross after the judges had split.

Harold Barnes, one of the arbiters, gave the Chicago boy nine rounds, Canzoneri two and called four even. The other judge, Geo. Kelly, awarded Canzoneri eight and Ross seven. Donovan gave Ross eight rounds, Canzoneri four and scholged three even.

Admires Tony

"My money goes on Tony any time he fights anybody else," said Ross in the dressing room. "But I'll give him another fight anytime, anywhere, either in his home town or mine. I thought I was ahead all the way, just as I did in our first fight."

Canzoneri, who had been so confident of regaining his title that he bet several thousand dollars on himself, was the most downhearted young man in New York.

"I thought I was out in front," he declared. "I felt strong all the way, but toward the last I couldn't seem to get untracked. I thought I was losing."

The big crowd, which paid a gross $110,000 to watch the two gross little fellows pour gloves into each other, received the verdict with mixed emotions. Some cheers were almost equally mingled with boos.

Tony's flashier style evidently made him look to the fans nearer to the thousands of patrons clustered in the outer stands, but those closer to the ringside could appreciate the terrific body punishment dealt out by Ross in the last six or seven rounds.

Ross admitted he was dizzy for a moment both in the ninth and 15th rounds, when Tony caught him flush on the jaw with left hooks, but he recovered quickly and from there on evaded the Italian boy's left like poison.

LEAFS FEEL CHABOT LOSS

Toronto, Sept. 13 (CP)— Loss of Lorne Chabot, veteran goal tender of Toronto Maple Leafs in the National Hockey League, is keenly felt by Dick Irvin, Leafs' coach.

"If Lorne retires, professional hockey will lose its greatest 'money' goalie," said Irvin in commenting on Chabot's announced retirement. Other goalies might outshine the former Allan Cup star during the season but when it came to important games and title play Chabot was the best of them all," said Irvin. "Lorne may not retire. I remember some talk of him retiring last year, but nothing happened."

Irvin believed Benny Grant, who guarded the nets for Syracuse Stars in the International League last season, might be a worthy successor to Chabot.

"LAST DITCH" SERIES OPENS TO HELP CUBS

Giants Need Nine Games Only Out of 18 To Take Crown

CUBS' CHANCES

Pittsburg And Brooklyn In Second Place Tie

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr. Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago Cubs marched into the National League pennant picture today to start a six game series with New York Giants that was labelled as a "last ditch" affair. Starting from a second place tie, 7 1-2 games behind the league-leading Giants, the Cubs were rated as about the only team that had much chance of beating out the New Yorkers and a decisive victory in this series seemed needed to give them much of a chance.

New York's closing game in Cincinnati was wiped out by threatening weather yesterday and it is unlikely it will be played unless it is necessary to decide the championship. With the Giants and Cubs game gone where they can't by added to the Giants' total column the Cubs were faced with the necessity of winning all six games or at the worst five out of six, to get into a threatening position.

6 Games Necessary

Even in that event they wouldn't be sure as the Giants now need to win only half their remaining 18 games to clinch the flag regardless of what the other teams do.

As a tune-up for the critical series, the Cubs bang a neat 5-2 trimming on the Phillies yesterday for their 90th victory in 136 games and this season's Jeannie Waroske kept the Phils in complete subjection, giving up only six hits and never allowing a runner to touch third. Young Curtis Cassidy, from the Pacific Coast League, did the rest. He walloped a triple with Frank Demaree on base and scored on Gabby Hartnett's fly to account for both Chicago runs.

Tie With Dodgers

Pittsburgh's Pirates moved back into a second place tie by taking two almost decisions from Brooklyn Dodgers. Heinie Meine and Waite Hoyt were in great form and between them they held the Brooklyn to nine hits to win with a pair of teeny duels, 3-0 and 1-0. Rudolph Thuston and rookie Emil Leonard were the losers.

New York Yankees again clipped a game off Washington's American League lead without lengthening the Senators badly. The Yankees defeated the Tigers 5-4 at the ex-Detroiter, George Uhle, stopped the Tigers except Gerald Walker, who knocked in all three runs. Lefty Grove, Mickey Cochrane of the Yanks, provided the winning tallies with his 13th home run of the season.

Cleveland and young Monte Pearson got the better of Washington and "General" Al Crowder by a 3-1 count. Pearson gave only four hits while Crowder gained two, including a homer by Odell Hale.

St. Louis Browns continued their efforts to get out of the cellar by trimming the seventh place Boston Red Sox for the third straight time, 4-1, behind the six-hit flinging of Dick Coffman. Sam West provided the punch in the St. Louis attack, making two hits, scoring two runs and driving in a third. Chicago White Sox and the Philadelphia Athletics were rained out.

FISCHER LOW SCORE AT 141

Ross Somerville Among Those Qualifying At Cincinnati

(By James I. Renick, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Kenwood Country Club, Cincinnati, Sept. 13 (AP)—The Canadian and American survivors of a record entry qualifying test today —only 34 bolding undisputed places in the 36-hole round of match play, and a dozen others vying for the remaining eight positions.

Grouped in the surviving field which scored so furiously that an unprecedented score of 150 was necessary to escape elimination in the 36-hole qualifier were some of the most prominent names in amateur golf, including C. Ross Somerville, of London, Ont., the defending title holder; Johnny Goodman of Omaha, U. S. open champion, and Johnny Fischer, the hometown idol who blazed his way to golfing honors yesterday with a sub-par 69 for the history making total of 141.

Three former champions were among the 12 contenders who barely made the scare of 150 necessary to keep them in the race for the eight positions in match play. It was the lowest qualifying limit in the tournament's 27-year history and the number dead-locked at 150 also was a new record.

Yesterdays Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Wes Ferrell, Indians — Knocked in winning runs against Senators with single in sixth.

Lou Warneke, Cubs — Shut out Phillies with six hits.

Sam West, Browns — Led attack on Red Sox with two hits and two runs and fielded brilliantly.

Pie Traynor, Pirates — Batted in a run in each game to help defeat Dodgers, 1-0 and 2-0.

Gerald Walker, Tigers — Drove in all Detroit runs against Yankees, hitting triple, double and single.

CURRENT SPORT

Over in Picton they are all agog over the possibilities of their 1933 County Intermediates. When the selectors announced home from here late Monday night (and believe us it was late) the team that the majority of the villagers were on hand to welcome "Jake" Ferguson here built on a matter of fact the band has been present during their last two home games.

If our memory serves us right it was just a decade ago that the Picton Intermediates last won the Ontario O.B.A.A. honors, so perhaps we are entitled to feel that hops they are entitled to feel that hops are the Rank nowadays. The Vanover-Rorke-Church-Phillips aggregation have built slowly but determined and today are worthy Intermediate champions of East-ern Ontario.

It was sensationally announced yesterday that the Prince Edward County aggregation was scheduled to play the first game of the next O.B.A.A. round in Beaverton on Friday of this week but no information relative to the date for the return game was forthcoming, however.

Yesterday Bill Hammitt, who Manager Art Young has pinned his hopes on to step into Terrie Cyrpians next Saturday in Belleville, was operated on for an infected thumb. Fortunately Bill's bad thumb was on his left hand and he will be ready to serve 'em up on Saturday. Manager Young is not calling his many practices during the club's week off. Only one lengthy workout being scheduled.

Junior baseball cannot be figured as can senior ball as the kids are not considered. However, it would not surprise us to see Sir Crystalcore turn out their Queen City rivals and administer some thrill a round trounding. We do not imagine that any junior club in the province are 23 runs better than the local kids and expect to see a real bang-up ball game Saturday. Incidentally this game is the junior O.B.A.A. semi-final.

Up in Peterboro Joe Daley's Kingston Junior battle Bob Wenthergen's New Toronto seniors with the winner meeting the Riverdale Grads at Oshawa in the senior O.B.A.A. semi-finals. If the Ponies can get by, West Toronto changes they can afford to gamble on the final game of the next round. Placed in a position like the Ponies it would be rather embarrassing at this time of year. Having bet one first string hurler to bed sickness around the middle of September, Manager Joe can well succeed he'll not be tossed out of the park today.

GOLF FACTS
NOT THEORIES
By ALEX. J. MORRISON
Central Press Canadian

ALEX MORRISON says:

Clothes don't make the golfer but the way he wears his clothes does affect the game.

Shoes laced too tight will make the feet uncomfortable.

A belt drawn tightly about the waist cramps the middection.

A shirt, sweater or jacket of any description with narrow across the back handicaps the action of the shoulders.

Likewise, a tight collar or necktie limits the freedom of the whole body.

Who's Who In Washington — Some Successful Senators

Johnny Kerr

JOHN FRANCIS KERR, a 1909 Christmas present to his folks in San Francisco (he was born Dec. 26), graduated from the Prince sandlots, joined the Detroit Tigers in 1922. He played that season and the next two for the Bengals and then dropped from sight of American league fans.

But Johnny wasn't done. The Washington Senator bounded into the limelight with the Chicago White Sox in 1929.

Late in 1931 Kerr was shipped to the Senators by the Sox along with Carl Reynolds in the deal for Sad Sam Jones, Irving Hadley and Jack Hayes.

RAY PRIM, Albany International league southpaw, over whom the Chicago and Boston National League clubs staged a controversy, has become a Washington hurler. So—the National league never gives him in action, except in a world series.

Monte Weaver

MONTE MORTON WEAVER, a Hilton, N.C., product the was born there June 19, 1903, was a pitching sensation of the 1932 season when he won 22 games. However, he suffered a bad break when illness early this season made him ineffective. He recovered by August and has been a potent pitching factor for Washington since then.

A graduate of Emory and Henry college, Monte was teaching geography at the University of Virginia when he left the latter to go out and play ball. So he quit his professorship and joined the Baltimore Internationals in 1930.

Weaver quickly became a star and, after the conclusion of the 1931 campaign, was sold to the Senators.

Weaver, who pitches either sidearm or overhanded and has a corking curve ball, is a big fellow—six feet tall, weighs 195 pounds. Though a righthand hurler he bats left.

Hamilton Man Hopeful In Lacrosse

Hamilton's hopes for a senior amateur lacrosse title had rebounded to a new height today, after being in the depths since Monday.

Saturday, Facing a five goal deficit from the first game of the semi-final series, the Tigers ripped their way through to a 16-8 victory over an astonished Orillia terrier squad at Orillia last night and advanced into the finals against

BARGAIN BRIDE

By Russ Westover.

By KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

Elinor had tried to fill her day, and for the most part succeeded. She had grown thin and her eyes met Barrett's faithfully when he looked her way, which was rarely. He found her and what she might do to him.

Her brother, he told himself a hundred times a day. There was no excuse for him to be taken in again, only time to be hemmed by her sad dreams of her. She had so giddy and easily wooed—where she had been and what she had done!

Each time she was out of the house he was sure she was with Bobby Tetlare. Marcia had seen them together and spoken of it to Barrett in a casual, light way. It seemed to Elinor that each time she stepped from the door she was sure to meet Bobby somewhere and be obliged to speak a word or two to him. Barrett was certain that she went to Rowe New York to spend hours with Tetlare.

He plunged into work with a zest that was paradox—attacking and mastering new exhibits, appraising them. He helped Phineas with his plans for an exposition, taking over all the dull details such as ordering the clippers, pickaxes and rope. He found time to write a series of articles. He superintended plans for the gallery of a friend who had long wanted a suitable home for his paintings, bits of jade, porcelins and such. And yet he couldn't keep busy enough to forget his heartache.

He thought he would feel some relief with Elinor away. He found instead, endless worry and conjecture. In the silence of the house which seemed cold no matter what the temperature, he wondered what she might be doing. He wished that her brief and secret third marriage should endure would come to an end. The name of Carter Rowe always been kept free from scandal. Miranda's affair had been underhanded and cheap but legal enough. She had been married to Hugh Moore who had abandoned Bryn with her when he found she could not get him the wealth he had supposed was hers. Lon had died before Marcia's and Barrett's father left them his fortune.

Elinor was aware that Aiken was a very pleasant place. The sunshine was warming the air and the soft the hills and valleys green and the view from the house they had taken, charming.

Her father was carried to the terrace and sat there for long afternoons. Elinor sat beside him reading words she did not sense, smiling at him when they paused to chat, wondering what Barrett was doing and whether he missed her at all. She tried to seem normal and light-hearted in the gay letters Barrett directed to her—for effect—would hold over him the impression that his coldness was thawing. They never did.

"It's beautiful here," said Reinwell one afternoon. "I don't know when I've been so contented —so at peace!"

He was still too weak to think about others or he would have seen his daughter's misery. He was so deep in his own well. Elinor thought with deep anxiety. And when she spoke of it to either of the nurses they agreed, avoiding by eyes and murmuring something about "time". Science knows when human batteries are low and waning but science does not always tell.

CHAPTER 23

Elinor wrote Barrett stilted little notes about the weather, her father's condition and the activities of the household. He read them thin-

He could not help it. He carried them in an inner coat pocket and scorned himself for keeping them. He tried to burn them one night in the library fireplace. Instead he burned the hand that had received them.

Toward the end of April Barrett saw Lida Stafford for the first time since her daughter had gone south. Lida appeared on a Sunday morning, wearing a dress so simple a man would call it plain, though to a woman it bore the unmistakable stamp of Paris.

"My dear Barrett!" she murmured, gliding into the library. Mr. Shifty he took her outstretched hands. He heard talk, "really" and responded heartily, "very."

"You must dine with me some night, Barrett. I would so like to know you better!"

He murmured vaguely about having to get a great deal of work out of the way. He detested the woman!

Lida settled by the hearth. She stretched a slender foot toward the fender. Her ankles were still quite as good as Elinor's as she saw happily.

"I came in because I have found myself to be in the most amusing position," she began.

"Yes?" he promptly, without enthusiasm.

"Overdrawn again! Can you fancy it, Barrett? I simply know nothing of figures! And I can't seem to learn!"

He said nothing.

"I knew if Elinor were in town that she'd help me out—for a little time—and this morning I thought, But what is more natural than to turn to my Elinor's husband? The man whom she adored."

He opened his cigaret case, offered her one and lit one for himself after lighting hers.
